'Chicago' makes its South Shore debut

Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) will present Broadway's longest running American musical – "Chicago" from March 16 through April 1 at the historic Town Hall Theater on the Cohasset Common. Marking a first-time appearance on the South Shore,

"Chicago" will feature the choreography of Wendy Hall, who had a leading role both on Broadway and in the 1995 national tour.

"Chicago's" outstanding cast of CDC veterans and newcomers alike will present the famous Kander and Ebb score, the Fosse inspired dancing, and all the comedy that makes this long running show so popular. Winner of six Tony Awards on Broadway, "Chicago" also won six Oscars, including one for Best Picture.

Performances are Fridays and Saturdays, March 16 – 31 at 7:30 p.m. and Sundays, March 18 – April 1 at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Avenue. Tickets are $20 general admission and $18 for senior and students and can be purchased online at www.brownpapertickets.com/event/222605 at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, Cohasset or via reservation at 617-697-2115, also the number for group sales. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one-hour prior at the box office.

"Chicago" is suggested for audience members age 11 and up. For information, go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

Weekly Scrabble

On Thursdays from 1 to 2:30 p.m., there is a weekly Scrabble game at Cohasset Elder Affairs, 3 North Main St.

Many experts say games that challenge the mind work to stave off dementia, strengthen critical thinking skills, and promote brain health. Games involving acuity, concentration, and focus enhance the brain's capability stimulate brain cells, and keep neural pathways open and functioning.

Among other benefits, the game of Scrabble may enhance memory skills, increase vocabulary, improve spelling and heightens strategic thinking.

In addition, Scrabble helps in building focusing, planning and visioning capacities in players. Aside from that, it's just plain fun!

Suggested donation: $1 per game.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Cohasset cares: Recycling

ERIN DALE

Last week, the Green Beat caught up with local business owner James Wolfe, who owns and operates Wolfe Painting Co. Wolfe delved into how he goes green at work by using eco-friendly, low-VOC (volatile organic compound) paint; he also shared his family's enthusiasm for recycling.

One thing Wolfe said particularly caught the Green Beat's attention: that he enjoys recycling at the Cohasset recycling transfer facility.

The Green Beat would like to commend Cohasset's Department of Public Works for making recycling so easy. While Cohasset is not yet an official "Green Community" as recognized by the state, it is a member of the South Shore Recycling Cooperative (SSRC).

The SSRC was established in 1998 to help municipalities improve their recycling programs while reducing the quantity, toxicity and cost of trash disposal, the group states on their website.

How the SSRC does it:

- By helping towns efficiently manage their solid waste programs
- By providing economy of scale through regional procurement of services while allowing towns to still maintain control of waste management
- By educating residents on how and why they should reduce, reuse and recycle
- By advocating for funding and regulations that seek to minimize waste and maximize recovery

With help from the SSRC, Cohasset can be a beacon community to other towns who could perhaps use improvement in the recycling area.

The SSRC's website page for Cohasset provides a comprehensive guide to what can and cannot be recycled at the transfer facility. Check it out here: http://ssrcoop.info/index.php/member-towns/member-towns-cohasset

The list of what can be recycled and what has to be trashed might surprise you. For instance, we were reminded that Styrofoam can never be recycled — and it never breaks down. Neither can any paper materials with a waxy coating. For the good of the environment, it's best to skip using these items whenever possible.

Your turn

The Green Beat wants to hear from you! Are you a recycling enthusiast, a locavore cook (or eater), an environmental expert or eco-friendly business owner? We'd love for you to share your thoughts, tips and ideas. Contact Erin Dale, reporter, at edale@wickedlocal.com.

Pack 38 Webelos II earn Arrow of Light Award

The name "Webelos" has a special meaning — We'll Be Loyal Scouts. A group of 10 second-year Webelos from Cohasset Pack 38 has diligently climbed the Cub Scouting trail toward the Arrow of Light — the highest rank a Cub Scout can reach.

They have earned at least seven activity badges including Citizen, Outdoorsman, Readyman, and Fitness. They know the Boy Scout oath and law, and they are well versed in the ways of a scout. It takes a lot of work and dedication to achieve the Arrow of Light. It is the only badge that a scout can wear on his Boy Scout uniform. Earning the Arrow of Light as a Cub Scout is the equivalent of earning the Eagle in boy scouting.

These Webelos scouts have proven that they understand their responsibilities as good sons and good scouts. With the help of their willing parents, they will continue to advance far along the Boy Scout Trail. Congratulations Scouts!

OUR VIEW

Another look at the Meals Tax

It did not happen easily or without controversy – but it has turned into a good news story next door in Hingham.

In April 2010, Hingham Town Meeting, by a narrow margin, approved the local option meals tax that imposed a 0.75 percent (three quarters of one percent) sales tax on meals over what the state already gets. Money from additional tax goes to Hingham.

The state meals tax is 6.25 percent; with the local option, the meals tax rises to 7 percent. Thus a $40 restaurant tab generates $2.80 in meals tax, of which 30 cents goes to a city or town that has enacted the local option, according to the state Department of Revenue.

The Hingham revenue stream was initially estimated at $250,000 to $300,000 a year but, as was announced at that town's recent Economic Forum, receipts are running at an expected $600,000 annually.

Hingham selectmen are proposing to use the meals tax revenue for property tax relief as that town faces paying off large capital projects including a new middle school.

Cohasset soundly rejected adopting the meals tax when it was brought before the November 2010 Special Town Meeting along with the proposed room occupancy tax for hotels and motels.

At that time the meals tax was projected to bring in $100,000 in revenue annually for Cohasset. At that November Special Town Meeting no one spoke in favor of the meals or hotel taxes – the general consensus was it was unfair to tax a segment of the business community.

While we don't think the hotels tax would be a good idea for Cohasset whose establishments have to remain competitive – in light of Hingham's success, we think Cohasset should take another look at the meals tax. It does not appear to have been a hardship on either patrons or the restaurants in Hingham.

Cohasset has a mix of great restaurants. A lot of area and local residents make a night out in Cohasset their "destination." As Hingham has proven, we do not think adding a few cents to the meals tax will keep them away and the revenue could be a big help in these tough economic times.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rapid correction is needed

I have been a disinterested observer — from a distance — of the controversy surrounding the town manager. I haven't attended any selectmen or water department meetings; all I have done is to follow the situation in the Mariner. But my comments are framed by my having served for 25 years on the sewer commission and board of selectmen. I first became uncomfortable with the Town Manager's attitude when I read his two long letters to the paper soon after he started in Cohasset. I felt the letters were self-aggrandizing and they gave me the disturbing feeling that he had some kind of an agenda. I had never seen letters from a town manager to the newspaper before these.

It was further disturbing to me when I read that the town manager was getting along famously with all the town employees, since I believe a manager/negotiator must keep an arm's length distance between her/himself and the people s/he manages and negotiates with. Then, when I read that the town manager had brought a formal complaint against the town, I thought he had really gone over the top. It is obvious to me that this situation is beyond control and that the town should bite the bullet and bring in a new town manager that can work with our boards as part of a team, in a spirit of mutual cooperation, and not confrontation. In a business setting, this kind of dysfunctional relationship on the management team would be corrected in the blink of an eye, and in order for the town's urgent business to move forward, it needs rapid correction here, too.

Gary Vanderwell, 500 Jerusalem Road

COMMENTARY

'Collaboration: a two-way street'

MIKE COUGHLIN

In their commentary last week, Ralph Dormitzer and Sam Wakeman seem to predict my fate even before the hearing on March 13. Perhaps as insiders they know something or maybe they are just guessing but the people of Cohasset have the opportunity to be heard at my hearing.

Both Ralph and Sam argue that I have not been collaborative and that the old ways of doing things in Cohasset need to preserved. This would be fair enough if Cohasset finances were in good shape but they are not. Cohasset has suffered a financial implosion. The complete system broke down. The road back is a long one but in my brief tenure, I am proud to say Cohasset has turned a corner.

I did not make this financial mess — I walked into it. Nevertheless, if the old system Ralph and Sam talk about is truly worth preserving where were these officials and their committees during the many years it took for these financial problems to grow into the meltdown it has become? The Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee and the Budget Planning Group are all important and I have worked with similar bodies in my past three communities, but a blind man should have been able to spot the warning signs. To make it any clearer – our independent auditor had been warning the town for years about the growing storm.

In my brief six months, I issued over 5,000 emails to keep the chair informed of my actions. If there was a problem, I was never informed of it until the executive session of Feb. 7.

Ralph and Sam also talk about collaboration. Well – collaboration is a two way street. Where was their offer of working with me? Almost from day one, certain officials in this town – knowing full well of the gravity of this situation insisted on protecting their political turf and the very same process that ultimately led to our financial implosion. In six months, we have taken the bull by the horns exerting the strong leadership which is necessary to deal with a financial crisis of this magnitude by forging unprecedented collaboration amongst town departments – the professionals who know how to get the job done.

With respect to Water, Ralph and Sam imply that the issue lies with me. Last time I checked, the issues with Water as well as the commission's opposition to some of the findings of the Melanson and Heath audit was well underway before I got here. As to joint management – why has the concept worked with the Sewer Commission and not Water? Why has every other town department come together in an unprecedented team effort? The answer is easy – the Water Commissioners have resisted joint management and now have hid behind a flawed legal opinion which tries to paint them as an entity on to itself and not answerable to anyone. As long time leaders – I would have hoped that both Ralph and Sam would have recognized the danger of such a stand by the Water Commission particularly given their intent to enter into a 20-year concession agreement. After all, the town needs to protected.

As to reform, I did appear before the Governance Committee going on record that I felt that the powers of the Town Manager need to clarified with respect to the budget and that the Advisory Committee needs to be empowered into a true Finance Committee which in turns presents the budget to the Town Meeting – a fact conveniently left out of Sam and Ralph's commentary. As to communication, a Town Manager communicates principally through the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen. In turn, the Chair is expected to pass that communication to the other four members. In my brief six months, I issued over 5,000 emails to keep the chair informed of my actions. If there was a problem, I was never informed of it until the executive session of Feb. 7.

Finally, Ralph and Sam imply that I lost the political support to do the job. I guessed they failed to notice the many who showed up last week at the meeting to show their support and the many others in the community standing by my wife and I during this difficult period. Yes – I may not have the support of certain town officials – particularly those on the Water Commission and other boards – but before they pass judgment on me – Ralph and Sam should ask them what they knew and why they did not act to avert the financial crisis. Why go out to an RFP on a 20-year project that has not been fully vetted and that many in town do not fully understand.

In all due respect, Ralph and Sam are guilty of yet another cocktail party statistic – a fact taken out of context. Political support to do the job is not based upon the support of certain officials but the will of the people. Throughout history, it has been shown that any time a small group tries to substitute their own opinions to the will of the people, that effort will fail. I pray this will be the case on March 13 as we are nation of laws not men.

Editor's note: Town Manager Mike Coughlin has been suspended with pay pending further action by the selectmen under the Cohasset Town Manager Act.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

The Tarahumara – running into extinction?

Before the Spanish conquest of Mexico in the 1520s, the Aztecs employed these fleet-footed Indians to run messages throughout their sprawling empire.

MARY KENNEDY

They call themselves Raramuri – "foot runners." We know them as Tarahumara. Numbering about 60,000 (the population of Quincy is 64,000) they live in remote Copper Canyon in northern Mexico. Tall mountains surround the chain of five canyons (three of them deeper than our Grand Canyon) where the valleys can be 5,000 feet above sea level. Living in such high altitudes they have developed tremendous lung capacity. The men are tall and thin, rarely muscular, the women short and heavyset, (perhaps the better for child-bearing). The world's most super human athletes are today an endangered species.

The Tarahumara run not for fitness but for life. To hunt means to run after prey. Deer, rabbits, squirrels, of course, are faster than humans for short bursts, but after being chased about 70 to 80 miles, even a cheetah will drop from exhaustion. Local ranchers often hire them to run down wild horses. They also enjoy competitive games, running up and down the canyons, sometimes for 72 hours, all the while kicking a wooden ball. On trails of dirt and rock, they run barefoot or in sandals made out of old tires. (Sandal-making kits sell for a few dollars and are popular with tourists).

Not since the ancient Spartans has a group of people achieved such a superior state of physical conditioning. In 1928 the Mexican Olympic Committee sent two Tarahumara runners to compete in the 26-mile marathon in Amsterdam. There were no cheers as they crossed the finish line, placing 32nd and 35th. What astonished the judges and the audience, however, was that they kept right on running. When chased and stopped, both protested: "Too short. Too short." Used to running sometimes over 100 miles in a day, the Tarahumara insist that endurance, not speed, determines winning. A 26-mile marathon is a menial task.

Before the Spanish conquest of Mexico in the 1520s, the Aztecs employed these fleet-footed Indians to run messages throughout their sprawling empire. Very likely they were the runners who brought news to Moctezuma of the arrival of the "bearded white men in floating castles." Thereafter, the Tarahumara fled from Spanish attempts to enslave them in silver mines. Today, they are still retreating: from settlers, from loggers and from government attempts to integrate them into modern society. Over the centuries they have adopted bits and pieces of Christianity while still practicing their ancient religion. God is the sun, God's wife is the moon, and the Devil is the father of all non-Indians.

By the mid 20th century, both their diet — 10 percent fat; 10 percent protein; 80 percent complex carbohydrates (mainly corn, also squash, beans, chili peppers) — and their athletic stamina began to attract scientific investigation. Why, despite a grueling lifestyle, as well as smoking homegrown tobacco and drinking alcohol made from fermented corn, do the Tarahumara show little evidence of heart disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, cancer, or high cholesterol?

In his best-selling book The Pritikin Diet, nutritionist Dr. Robert Pritikin wrote: "In 1955, when I decided to change my high-cholesterol, high-fat dietary lifestyle, I adopted a diet nutritionally identical to the Tarahumara. In less than three years my cholesterol level was reduced significantly and has remained low for 25 years."

On the dark side, however, life expectancy is about 45 years; both infant mortality and birth rate are high (pregnancy at age 13 not uncommon). Indifferent to cleanliness, they bathe seldom and wash clothes about twice a year. Intoxication is regarded as a positive state, a time to release frustrations and anger. When sober, Tarahumara are placid, forgiving, incapable of refusing a request for help. When drunk, however, crimes like stealing, rape, even murder, are tolerated, rarely punished.

For centuries, their response to threats or pressure has always been passive resistance, withdrawal, avoidance. Today, however, their greatest enemies are the drug traffickers who force them to grow crops that produce marijuana, opium and heroin. Traffickers, of course, also encourage drug use among the younger members of the tribe. According to several estimates, more than seven million pounds of drugs arrive in the United States each year from Mexico. Much of it is grown in the high wilderness areas of Copper Canyon, traditional home of the Tarahumara, the world's greatest long-distance runners.

HEALTH NOTES

Water use is on the rise

STEVE BOBO

Human water use tripled in the years from 1950 to 1990, but this escalating water use is bumping into limits, according to the study.

Because of trace contaminants not only in Cohasset's water supply, but everywhere, our bodies have changed the way we use the water they need. Originally when we drank water, it was considered pure because it was derived from clouds in the form of rain. Drinking it from clean vessels posed no risk. Now, with a better understanding of trace contaminants, we have learned that small traces of chemicals, continuously consumed, can have harmful consequences.

A major sector of U.S. water use is domestic. Toilets represent 38 percent of domestic water use, baths represent 31 percent, laundry machines and dishwashers represent 20 percent, drinking and cooking represent 6 percent, and other uses such as brushing teeth represent 5 percent. Water heaters are the second largest energy users in most homes, as only space heating and cooling systems use more. Twenty five percent of an average home's total electricity heats water for laundry, cleaning and bathing. People can conserve domestically used freshwater easily by making small changes in their lifestyles. For example, they can take shorter showers, use low-flush toilets, fix leaks, buy plants that require less water, or water their plants in the morning or evening, when the sun is weaker and less of the water will evaporate, simple adjustments such as these can make a huge difference if made by a large number of people.

Humans are using a surprisingly large – and growing – proportion of Earth's renewable water supply, according to a study reported in the Feb. 9 issue of The Journal Science. The trend could lead to constraints on food production and already is placing stress on aquatic ecosystems that could decimate fish populations. "If it continues, this increasing scale of human water use threatens the integrity of Earth's life support systems," said Sandra Postel, lead author of the study.

Postel is director of the Global Water Policy Project in Cambridge. She conducted the renewable water study as a research scholar at Stanford's Center for Conservation Biology, working with Gretchen Daily, Bing Interdisciplinary Research Scientist, and Paul R. Ehrlich, the Bing Professor of Population Studies at Stanford.

They calculated that 30 percent of all the runoff from land to sea each year is accessible for use in irrigated agriculture, industries and cities. The rest is floodwater not captured by dams, or water too remote geographically to be of use. The research team further calculated that human activities already make use of more than half of this accessible supply.

Human water use tripled in the years from 1950 to 1990, but this escalating water use is bumping into limits, according to the study. Projections of population size and water use per person suggest that humans could be using at least 70 percent of accessible runoff in 2025 – and possibly all of it, a troubling scenario.

"The widespread impression that globally water is too abundant to constrain future food production and economic development is ill founded," Postel said. "In this study, we have developed both an indicator of Earth's carrying capacity, and a measure of the sustainability of current water trends."

The authors suggest several actions that could slow the growth of human appropriation of water, such as greater efficiency of water use and changes in agricultural cropping patterns. Pollution prevention efforts also could have a big beneficial impact, because much of the water that humans appropriate from rivers, lakes and streams is used to dilute pollution.

However, if human population and consumption continue to increase at the current rate, food security will be threatened, because only limited opportunities remain to expand rain-fed or irrigated cropland. And with less water available for the rest of the organisms on the planet, ecosystems will be damaged along with the critical life support services they provide to humans.

"The bottom line is that human well-being depends on learning to live within the limits of Earth's fresh water. And time to make the needed adjustments is short."

FOR THE RECORD

Engaging readers part of the plan

GREGORY MATHIS

The judge wrote, "More papers need to engage their readers with what is going on in our profession."

The judge's comments had to do with this column, For The Record, being awarded second place in the Serious Columnist category for smaller weekly newspapers in the recently announced 2011 New England Better Newspaper Competition put on by the New England Newspaper & Press Association.

Engaging readers with what is going on in the media world, especially our little part of the world, was the whole idea behind For The Record when I first started writing it in September 2010, although that first column did not specifically state such a mission.

I wanted to come up with an idea that would be sustainable beyond a few months and engage a wide audience across the 30 communities covered by our media group.

With so much happening at our company and in the industry, I've written more than 70 columns, missing just one week in that stretch when many of our papers were on hiatus the Fourth of July week in 2011.

Hopefully, I've covered a lot of relevant issues and answered some of your questions about the media business and specifically your local newspaper or Wicked Local website.

We've certainly undergone a lot of changes in the last year-and-a-half.

The look of the local newspaper changed, significantly for some, last March. At that time we introduced features labeled as Public Service Journalism and Community Partner Journalism, as well as rolled out a dedicated page of Your News in the newspaper each week.

Our websites have evolved as well, with a greater focus on reader-submitted photos and news items. As we get into 2012, we have many new initiatives that will make our sites more lively and interactive as we head into the mobile age.

The digital side of the business is a huge priority in 2012. As much as 2011 was about the print side of things, the focus definitely shifts to mobile and the Web this year. Over the next several weeks, I'll be writing about our new and improved use of video on our websites, as well as a couple of exciting initiatives that will allow our website audience to listen to local police and fire channels via an online police scanner, as well as bringing local college and professional sports news to Wicked Local.

One of the two columns the judge referenced in his/her remarks for the Serious Columnist category was headlined, "The future of journalism." While I wasn't able to produce some Nostradamus-like prediction that revealed any great insight into the actual future of community journalism, the column did discuss how the business has changed dramatically over the last five to six years. And it's safe to say many more changes are in store as we move forward.

With that said, I've spent the past 17 months writing about what I think you might be interested in learning more about or anticipating questions you have about the way we do business. Now it's your turn to ask me. Send suggestions, questions or comments to gmathis@wickedlocal.com and I will gladly address them in future columns and on my blog.

CDTC to host health care forum

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will present its first forum of the 2012 season at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, March 7, in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library, 35 Ripley Road. David Shactman, formerly a senior fellow in health policy at the Heller School, Brandeis University, will present his book, 'Power, Politics and Universal Health Care." His co-writer, Dr Stuart Altman, was healthcare advisor to five presidents from Nixon to Obama, and is the Sol C. Chaikin Professor of National Health Policy at the Heller School at Brandeis University.

Most Americans say they believe everyone should have health care coverage, although many Americans think that the Affordable Care Act should be repealed. But, there is a need for change in the way health care is delivered in the U S.

People are invited to listen to this health care expert and hear the story of the almost 100-year-long efforts, going back to Teddy Roosevelt, to develop universal health care, and find answers to questions regarding the development of the Affordable Care Act. The hope is that this forum will leave attendees with a better understanding of the 2010 Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and the benefits it mandates for equality in health care for all.

As with all Cohasset Democratic Town Committee forums there is no charge for admission. All are welcome to attend. Shactman's book will be available to purchase.

POLITICAL NOTES

Cohasset democrats pass resolution

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee recently passed a resolution opposing the U.S. Supreme Court's decision regarding political fundraising. The resolution stated:

That on this 18th day of February, 2012, the COHASSET DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE opposes the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Constitution in Citizens United v. Federal Election Committee regarding the constitutional rights of corporations, and supports amending the Constitution to provide that corporations are not entitled to the entirety of protections or "rights" of natural persons, specifically so that the expenditure of corporate money to influence the electoral process is no longer a form of constitutionally protected speech, and calls on Congress to begin the process of amending the Constitution and encourages the Massachusetts General Court to adopt Senate Bill 772, A Resolution Restoring Free Speech, sponsored by Senator Jamie Eldridge.

Local democrats head to state convention

Cohasset Democrats held a caucus on Saturday, Feb. 19, to elect delegates to the Massachusetts Democratic Party's 2012 Convention in Springfield this June. Delegates to the June convention in Springfield will select candidates to compete for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate.

"In 2012 the Massachusetts Democratic Party is focused on expanding and strengthening our grassroots infrastructure that helped us make historic gains in 2010," said Massachusetts Democratic Party Chair John Walsh. "These delegates will gather with Democratic leaders from across Massachusetts to endorse a candidate for U.S. Senate and plan for a grassroots, person-to-person campaign in the fall."

In Cohasset and across the Commonwealth Democrats are energized to elect a Democratic Senator and make sure President Barack Obama is elected to a second term. "I'm honored to have been elected as a delegate to the 2012 convention," said delegate Agnes McCann. McCann added, "As Democrats we must organize to talk to our friends and neighbors about standing up for middle-class families and pushing for a stronger and fairer economy." Other delegates to the convention are: Virginia Najmi, Howie Altholtz, Peter Pescatore, Edwin Carr, Deborah Cook, Kevin McCarthy, Gail Collins, Sally Sisson and Fred Koed.

In addition to delegates who are elected at the caucus, those who meet the qualifications may to be add-on delegates in the following categories: Youth, minority and disabled. Call Kevin McCarthy at 781-534-0509 if interested in applying to be an add-on to the convention. Applications must be returned to the Democratic State Committee by March 30, 2012. The convention will take place Saturday, June 2, 2012, at the Mass Mutual Center in Springfield.

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee meets on the first Saturday of the month at Paul Pratt Library. Any registered Democrat is welcome to attend. 'SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS'

Boston College professor to speak at library March 4

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Most conflicts in American history conjure up an irreconcilable range of emotional responses. Think of some iconic war images that have appeared in front page news – the WII sailor kissing the nurse in Times Square, the mushroom cloud hovering over Nagasaki, the helicopter taking off from the U.S. Embassy in Saigon.

But there is one reporter's image on file in the Denver Public Library that evokes a singular visceral response, and this photo never made it to any newspaper – the view of 300 Sioux killed at Wounded Knee in South Dakota on Dec. 29, 1890. Strewn across the ravine are frozen and twisted bodies of mothers in a final embrace of their children, young women fallen over the old in an effort to protect them, and piles of dead men, women, and children.

Heather Cox Richardson, professor of history at Boston College and author of the book, "Wounded Knee," will speak at "Sunday AuthorTalks" at the Cohasset Library on March 4 at 4 p.m. Everyone is welcome. Richardson argues that the origins of the Wounded Knee massacre lay in the political power games being played out in Washington. If we listen closely, we hear an eerily familiar tune describing the roots of some of the socioeconomic ills that affect America today.

The story of Wounded Knee has a relatively short history in American consciousness. In 1930, Angie Debo wrote her dissertation and several books about the U.S. government's treatment of Indians, but no publisher would pay her heed. Later, Dee Brown's 1970 "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee" became an instant best-seller and was hailed as the seminal work on the government's final solution to the American Indian "problem." Readers of Brown's book were moved to outrage, anger and shame as he unfolded the history of a nation of people decimated by racism of ruthless conquerors.

While Richardson's narrative is grounded in the same facts as Brown's, Richardson views the root causes of the event through a different lens. She says, "To understand what created the Wounded Knee massacre, we have to look beyond the racism of the soldiers. We have to figure out what led President Harrison to deploy one third of the U.S. Army to the new state of South Dakota when there was no obviously pressing reason to do so. It turns out what prompted him to make that fatal decision was a toxic brew of politics and economics."

A profit-driven media that made up stories to sell news; an abominably corrupt election campaign and administration; a Congress driven by greed and political partisanship; and a country divided by an unbridgeable, widening gap between rich and poor, Republican and Democrat, and Eastern and Western states, are all characteristics that Richardson highlights in 1890 America. Yet, a look at 2012 America begs the question: Are there parallels here we should recognize? And if so, how do we respond?

Professor Richardson has written three other books about politics and economics in 19th-century America – "West from Appomattox," "The Greatest Nation of the Earth" and "The Death of Reconstruction." "Wounded Knee" was a 2010 main selection of the History Book Club. She is currently working on a history of the Republican Party from the time of the Northwest Ordinance to 2008.

Following Richardson's talk, a wine and cheese reception will provide opportunity for further discussion, questions and book signing. Admission is free but seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library, Buttonwood Books and Cohasset Historical Society, or phone the library to reserve a spot (383-1348, ext. 1). Visit cohassetlibrary.org for more information about "Sunday AuthorTalks."

"Sunday AuthorTalks" is sponsored by Cohasset Rotary Club. A Taste of Wine and Spirits, located in the Stop & Shop Plaza, has generously donated wines for the reception.

February 13-17, 2012

Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2520 Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives and senators on three roll calls from the week of February 13-17.
CHANGES TO STATE GOVERNMENT (S 1940) House 152-0, approved a lengthy bill designed to make major changes in the way state government operates. Provisions reduce legislative printing requirements and costs by putting the information on the Legislature's website; require state agencies to craft five-year capital plans and to revise them annually; create a five-member state finance board to promote transparency and adherence; make bonds issued by the state exempt from state taxes; and increase the state's debt limit to $17.07 billion. Supporters said this would modernize and reform the way state government operates and contribute to a more open and transparent government. They noted the measure also abolishes many antiquated laws relating to state financing. The Senate has already approved a different version of the measure. The House version now goes to the Senate for consideration. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	*	Y
LIMIT GROWTH IN STATE SPENDING (S 1940) House 34-116, rejected a Republican-sponsored amendment that would limit the growth in state spending through a formula based on growth in inflation and population. Amendment supporters said this cap would be a major step toward fiscal responsibility. They noted the state does not have a revenue problem; it has a spending problem. Amendment opponents said the amendment goes too far and would tie the hands of future Legislatures. They argued the cap would result in drastic cuts to important programs. (A "Yes" vote is for the spending cap. A "No" vote is against it.)	*	N
FIND DUPLICATION AND WASTE IN STATE GOVERNMENT (S 1940) House 153-0, approved an amendment creating a special commission to study and find overlaps and duplication in state government. The commission would recommend ways to eliminate the overlaps and duplication by merging or consolidating state agencies and programs as long as the action would reduce costs without adversely impacting the quality of services. Amendment supporters said it is time to conduct a top-to-bottom review of state government and eliminate the wasteful redundancies that everyone knows are there. (A "Yes" vote is for creating the special commission.)	*	Y
UTILITY COMPANIES AND OUTAGES (S 2136) Senate 36-0, approved and sent to the House a bill regulating the actions of utility companies during and following power outages. The measure was filed in response to the slow reaction by power companies during widespread power outages across the state during Tropical Storm Irene in August and the big October 2011 snowstorm. The bill requires public utility companies to provide twice-daily estimates to customers on when electricity will be restored following a 24-hour damage assessment period. It also requires the companies to set up a well-staffed call center in Massachusetts during major storms. Other provisions require the power companies to report storm outages to the state and designate a community liaison in each community to notify the state about the number of employees it has available to respond to storm-related power outages. Supporters said the bill will ensure the utility companies work as quickly as possible to restore power. They noted the lack of communication, the chaos and incidents in which people died or became seriously ill during the lengthy outage. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	Y	*
MORATORIUM ON MERGERS (S 2136) Senate 7-29, rejected an amendment placing a moratorium on all approvals of utility company mergers. The moratorium period would be three months or upon completion of all outstanding regulatory investigations, procedures and reviews involving storm response by the Department of Public Utilities (DPU). Gov. Deval Patrick on Wednesday announced a conditional agreement with NStar to merge with Connecticut-based Northeast Utilities. The agreement would impose a four-year rate freeze on the new power company and would require it to purchase 27.5 percent of the planned offshore wind farm Cape Wind's power. Amendment supporters said the moratorium would give the DPU, the Legislature and consumers time to review the details of the merger and ensure it is being conducted in the best interest of all parties. They noted it is not responsible to approve the merger even before the completion of a study of the incompetence of NStar during Tropical Storm Irene and the October 2011 snowstorm. Some suggested the Patrick Administration is using the merger approval to force the merged company to buy power from Cape Wind, which has had a difficult time selling it. Others expressed concern that after an initial savings for customers, rates will climb. Amendment opponents said the Legislature should not micromanage this possible merger. They noted half of the projected savings from the merger, or $21 million, would be given by Northeast Utilities back to its customers with the average household receiving between $12 and $15. (A "Yes" vote is for the moratorium. A "No" vote is against it.)	Y	*
SCHOOL EMERGENCY PLANS (S 2132) Senate 35-0, approved a bill that would require each school to have a written medical emergency response plan to "reduce the incidence of life-threatening emergencies and promote efficient responses to such emergencies." The measure is called "Michael's Law" in memory of 16-year-old Michael Ellsessar, who died suddenly of cardiac arrest suffered during a high school football game. Supporters said this bill would save lives. They noted that while some schools already have a plan in place, there are many that still do not. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)	Y	*

NEWS UPDATE

Acting TM digs into budget

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The partition in the Board of Selectmen's office has gone up, creating a wall between the selectmen's table and the administrative assistants' desks — and that's not the only change that occurred in Town Hall this week.

Following Town Manager Michael Coughlin's removal without cause last Wednesday, the selectmen voted Friday to appoint economic development consultant Michael Milanoksi, who chaired the search committee that chose Coughlin as one of their top five candidates last year, as acting town manager for the next two weeks.

The next day, Milanoski dove right in, spending 10 hours over the weekend in Town Hall going over the current fiscal year budget while working on the preliminary fiscal 2013 budget, which the selectmen requested be ready by Feb. 28.

Milanoski has been working with Finance Director Mary Gallagher to meet that deadline, but said that due to the recent changes in Town Hall, the first half of their presentation will be ready for next Tuesday; the rest will be presented to the selectmen on March 6.

The acting town manager's temporary appointment will be revisited by the selectmen when his two weeks are up, at which point they will vote whether to keep him on for longer and pay him a stipend (see related story, page 1).

Milanoski, who has experience managing quasi-municipal budgets, said that the Town Hall staff has been nothing but supportive and professional as he's taken the helm.

"It's nice to see that when Town Hall closes, people are still working after hours and coming in early —the dedication is there," said Milanoski, working from the selectmen's desk late Wednesday afternoon. "I greatly appreciate that."

Milanoski held his first staff meeting with department heads earlier in the week to go over expenditures and "try to straighten things out."

Currently, Milanoski reported, the town has expended 69.8 percent of its fiscal year budget.

"It should be at 64 percent, so that's a 5 percent discrepancy," the acting town manager explained, adding that he and Gallagher must "do some more data mining" to learn what the discrepancy is.

"Of course some things have gone over. The hot button issue in town is overtime."

Overtime

The police and fire overtime expenditures have been discussed during several recent selectmen meetings, with both the Advisory and Capital Budget committees airing their concern over the current burn rate.

Milanoski said that both Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca have been working hard to "reign in and reduce overtime when possible. It's a joint priority, and they continue to manage it as best they can."

The reason the public safety departments have trouble controlling overtime? There is no way to forecast injuries, said Milanoski: "It's an anomaly that's difficult to budget for." And when one officer is out on sick leave, he is still getting paid; meanwhile, the chiefs have to pay someone else to cover the injured officer's shifts. "In essence, they're paying double for that position."

Milanoski said that there are options available to solve this problem, and he is working with both chiefs to find a solution.

But the public safety departments are not the only ones with overages — several town departments have them, said Milanoski. When the Mariner asked if this was due to recent raises, the acting town manager responded, "That appears to be a likely cause." However, he added that he could not comment on specifics at the moment: "We still need to review that in greater detail."

In the meantime, Gallagher sent a memo to each department head asking them to review their FY '12 budgets and report back with any possible overages they anticipate having before the end of the fiscal year.

"Mary Gallagher is phenomenal," Milanoski said of the Finance Director. "This town is very lucky they hired her — she's a rock star... she knows municipal finance inside and out." Gallagher worked as Scituate's town accountant for 20 years before coming to Cohasset this past December.

Since her start date, Gallagher has been working alongside financial consultants Eric Kinsherf (who has acted as Cohasset's interim town account/finance director twice in the past year) and Dan Sullivan (who has been working at interim treasurer collector). However, Gallagher told the selectmen last Friday that her department has run out of funds to pay the consultants. She added that Kinsherf and Sullivan were willing to continue working part-time in Cohasset in anticipation of payment if Spring Town Meeting approves more funds.

Milanoski said Wednesday that the finance department still has Kinsherf working on special projects, specifically on indirect rates in the water department; he and Gallagher plan to present an update on that issue during the Mar. 6 selectmen meeting.

Presentation

What the acting town manager and finance director plan to present during the Feb. 28 meeting is being divided into two parts: 1) The FY '12 budget, determining any short falls and seeking to keep it on budget for the remainder of the fiscal year and 2) the FY '13 budget, which will be further broken down into three parts.

These three parts are as follows:

1. Creating overall financial management policies for the town (Milanoski said that Cohasset does not have any, but having these in place will help the town secure a triple-A bond rating)

2. A five-year projection of revenues and expenditures based on new growth, local tax receipts and Cherry Street revenue, with a presentation from Town Assessor Mary Quill

3. A budget summary, which will be completed during the Mar. 6 meeting, of what the FY '13 is going to look like in greater detail. Once the budget is presented by the (acting) town manager to the selectmen, they will then give it to Advisory and Capital Budget and then vote on those committees' recommendations; the final budget then finds its way to the floor of Town Meeting

Milanoski said that he hopes to present a level-services budget for FY '13 and hopes that the town will not have to enforce a freeze, but will confirm these things during Tuesday's meeting.

"I've encouraged all of the department heads to look at what they need to maintain their level-services budget, including contractual cost increases and any commodities going up," said Milanoski. He also hopes to see a town-wide cost of living increase.

"We don't know what that's going to be yet, but we're working on finalizing that where we can afford it — it's one of our goals. People that do work hard, where possible, should be awarded."

His overall goal as he serves as acting town manager, said Milanoski, is to "lay out the budget process, living within the revenue that we have, and forecasting a sustainable budget."

Next week's selectmen meeting will not meet in their Town Hall office as usual, but will move to the school superintendent's office in order to take advantage of better technology, including the overhead system, Milanoski said. This will help the public better visualize the budget process, he explained: "We're dealing with a lot of numbers."

YOUTH BASEBALL AND SOFTBALL

Registration open

Registration for The 2012 Cohasset Youth Baseball Softball Association season is now open.

To register your son or daughter, please go to www.cybsa.net and follow the link for online registration. On our website we have a chart which lists ages for each league as well as the birth-date range for your child.

Regular registration will be open from now until March 2. After that date, late registration will go into effect and each player will be assessed a $50 late fee. Any player who is registered after March 2 will not be guaranteed a roster spot, and will be assigned on a first come, first served basis. Please note that we have a $350 family cap fee. If your total fees exceed this amount, we will issue you a refund.

Mark your calendars down for April, 28, 2012. We have tentatively scheduled our Opening Day Parade for this date. You'll know it's spring when you see the Fire Engine leading our young players down South Main St.

If you have any questions or can't log into your account to register, please send us an email. Info@cybsa.net.

We're looking forward to a great season.

Skippers battle Div. 1 Medford

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

With an MIAA Div. 4 Sectional Tournament invitation firmly in hand for more than a week, Wednesday night's home tilt against Div. 1 Medford was a game to give Cohasset a chance to see some talent beyond the South Shore and Cape Cod, the type of team Cohasset could see in the coming weeks.

On the other side, Medford was playing for a ticket to the Div. 1 tournament.

The game lived up to expectations with Medford pulling out a 53-48 victory.

Cohasset kept it close in the early going, taking a 21-20 lead into halftime.

Then it got more difficult for the home team when Medford used an 8-0 run to regain the lead and extend it to 28-21.

The key play came on a Medford driving layup at the buzzer as the third quarter ended.

Cohasset battled to the end, cutting the Medford lead to

At the Cranberry Conference All-League Meet, Norwell/Cohasset faced the North division teams – Hingham, Carver/Sacred Heart, Marshfield, Plymouth North/South, Pembroke/Silver Lake, and Brockton. Norwell/Cohasset finished second with a score of 122.35. The only team that finished ahead of Norwell/Cohasset was Carver/Sacred Heart.

The six teams on the other side of the Cranberry Conference, the South division, were Barnstable, Notre Dame, Nauset, Hanover/Rockland, Case/Seekonk/Somerset, and Bridgewater/Raynham. Norwell's score ranked eighth between the two divisions combined.

Senior captain Amber Silvia and sophomore Christina Tedeschi, both from Cohasset, were the all-arounders for Norwell/Cohasset at the meet. There was a total of 13 all around competitors, and

Cohasset sends three to State Championship

It was a great season for the relatively new and young Cohasset High School Ski Team.

Unfortunately, the team didn't have enough skiers to compete as a team but achieved some impressive individual results.

Cohasset is sending three athletes to the MIAA State Championships representing the Ski East League on Feb. 28 at Wachusett Mountain.

Mackenzie Axelson finished the season strong capturing two first Place results and finished second overall in the league.

Caty Gilman, a freshman, skied aggressively all season finishing fifth overall and consistently put pressure on all the competitors.

Ben Astley competed on the Varsity Team as an eighth grader and skied very strong all season to qualify as the first alternate. The team saw great improvement from first year racers, Hollis Hunnewell, Devin Kennedy, Kyle Gundersen, Lukas Brown, Ross Erler and look forward to next year when this young team will have even more success.

Good luck at the State Championships.

BOYS HOCKEY

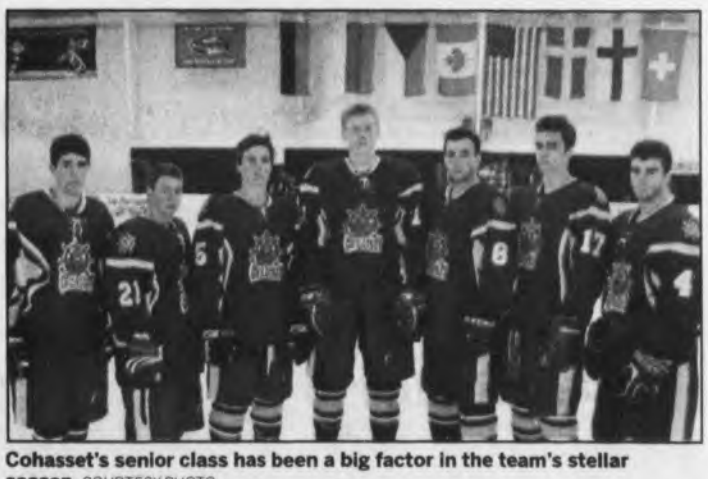
Skippers look ahead after strong finish

Icemen earn high seed through solid play

GateHouse News Service

In his sixth season at the helm of the Cohasset Skippers hockey team, coach Bob Walsh hasn't finished stronger or with more accolades as a team or a coach. This year's boys hockey team finished their regular season with a 14-3-3 record during the regular season which has earned them the No. 4 seed position in Division 3 South.

With the MIAA playoff seeding to take place on Saturday, February 25, the coach and the team anxiously await their schedule to see when and where they will meet their first opponent.



A Recap

"We had a mixed bag of games during the first half of the season," said Walsh, "even with a 6-3-1 record at the halfway point, we were scoring an average of 6 goals per game but we were still trying to define ourselves as a team."

The Skippers struggled with traditional rivals Norwell, Rockland and Mashpee during the first 10 games.

"In each of the games; with these teams, we played well and were in the lead but managed to let up at critical times that resulted in us losing by a goal in the closing minutes of the game," the coach remarked. "I have one of the best group of captains I've ever worked with on any team, and knew they could reach the team on a more personal level."

With one of the largest groups of captains in the state it looked as though the Skippers started to come around.

"I have more captains than most towns that have co-op teams. My friends, who referee often comment about the "group" saying "everyone's a captain on Walshie's team."

I comment back that on my team, the job is just too big for one or two guys. The fact is, I have 4 captains and 3 assistant captains and each one of them bring something different to the team and we, (the coaching staff and captains) work together to make good things happen. I believe being on a high school hockey team needs to be more than just about "the game" these guys are learning valuable management skills that can be used in the future and the underclassmen learn as well. Find a successful team and you'll find a passionate coach that has great assistant coaches and great captains."

At game 11, there was something different about the Skippers game play that made a huge difference... sophomore goalie, Brandon Winn. "Winnie's confidence was different in the second half of the season", remarked the coach.

"He was good during the first half and continued through game 12, then we had a 12 day break with no games. The team got healthy and Winnie caught fire."

Cohasset went on a 10 game unbeaten streak and Winn let in only 8 goals in 9 games and held it together for a 7-7 tie on the last game versus league rival Abington, when he robbed Abington's Barry Cashman on a breakaway with a "cat like" glove save at the buzzer. Two additional highlights for the Skippers in the second half, were wins against Mashpee and Norwell who had beaten Cohasset during the first half of the season.

"What made these games special for us was the fact that we lost to Mashpee 7-5 (the only team to beat us by 2 goals), and a loss to Norwell 7-6 and in both cases, the second meetings resulted in us beating them both by a score of 5-1. The Norwell games are always great games for the fans; and the school rivalry is like BU and BC. The arena is always packed not only with students but alumni as well. During my years of coaching college we didn't have crowds like this. This year, one of the students, (and one of our biggest fans), Andrew Barrett dawned the slicker and hat of the Skipper while waving the official school flag during the game. It was a highly charged and emotional game."

Accomplishments

Aside from this year's successful 14-3-3 season and finishing fourth in D3 South, the Skippers have a list of unequalled accomplishments. First, Cohasset has more players in the South Shore League (SSL) All Stars than any other team. Each year, the All Star team is chosen by the South Shore League coaches and they play an exhibition game before playoffs start.

The SSL All Stars for the 2011/2012 season, from Cohasset, are junior defenseman Chris Carpenter, senior forward Vinny Calorio, senior forward John Collins, senior forward Alex Evans, senior forward Jamie Faber and senior defenseman Sean McKenna. Additionally, Coach Walsh has been named this year's SSL All Star coach. These six players, (and coach), will be playing with other All Stars at the Rockland Ice Rink on Saturday, February 25th at 7:00 PM versus the SSL league champions Norwell Clippers.

In addition to the team's accomplishments, senior captain Alex Evans scored his 100th high school hockey career point in the closing minutes of the last regular season game on Saturday when he assisted junior assistant captain Connor Goetz with his 12th goal of the season.

"This is a great accomplishment in high school. It's hard enough to do it in four years but the fact is, Alex didn't become a starter until his junior year," sayid Walsh.

"I had no idea," said Evans. "I didn't know I was even close and I'm glad I didn't because that's probably what I would have been thinking of instead of playing the game."

Finally, the Skippers have scored more goals than any other team in Massachusetts Divisions 1, 2 and 3 this year, with 123 goals.

"I'm sure some of the guys kept an eye on that particular stat," said Walsh. "I don't know if Cohasset has ever scored that many goals in the past, certainly not in my six seasons. To me, the most important part of that stat is the fact that, between goals and assists, it's spread out over the whole team. Not only is our success attributable to the goals and assists but to both of our goaltenders. Both sophomore Brandon Winn and junior Alex Kent have given this team the confidence it needs to believe in themselves as I believe in them. Before most games, I ask the boys to see what I see and believe what I believe. I see an incredibly talented group here capable of winning on any given night."

The Future

After this successful season, what does the Cohasset Skippers future look like? According to Coach Walsh, "Not to look to far forward into the future of the program, I know we have some talented guys and future leaders on this team and there are some young and talented players in the younger grades. I hope the younger players want to play for their high school and help carry on the traditions we have established in this program as well as continue to build it for the future. In the immediate future, however, we have a playoff season coming up and that is on our collective minds right now. For the seniors, it's another day under the lights and on the ice. However this season ends, this year's Cohasset Skippers boys hockey team have a lot to be proud of."

Install a scoreboard

Dear Friend:

The Cohasset High Varsity Baseball Team is coming off its second consecutive Division IV State Championship Season and we're looking to commemorate this historic achievement with an exciting project that we hope will celebrate the success of our favorite local pastime for many years to come!

The Cohasset Diamond Club is proudly launching an effort to install a state-of-the-art scoreboard at the home of the State Champions...Milliken Field Complex, we currently do not have a scoreboard there. In an effort to enhance the baseball experience for both players and spectators alike, The Diamond Club solicited proposals from local scoreboard vendors and was very fortunate to secure a generous donation from the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund to jumpstart the project. However, to make this project a reality, we need your help!

We are reaching out to all family, friends, and fans of Cohasset Baseball to get us to homeplate with sufficient funds to complete the project for the 2012 season. In order to do so, we are asking that you consider making a contribution to the Cohasset Diamond Club so that we can fund this exciting endeavor.

We greatly appreciate any amount that you can contribute and ask that you consider making a donation to help the High School teams.

Thank you very much!

Yours sincerely,

Cohasset Diamond Club:

Rangers picking up pace

South Coastal Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

After a slow start the Rangers have picked things up in the Classics Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League.

The Rangers got a goal from Tom Smith of Marshfield concluded a three goal run in the first six minutes of the second period to give them their third straight win by a 6-5 score over the Bruins.

Rockland's Jim O'Toole scored two goals, Daron Jacobs of Pembroke, Hanover's Paul LaFond and Jim Hutchinson also scored for the Rangers.

Marshfield's John Zimmer scored two goals and John Tympanick added two goals and an assist for the Bruins. They also got a goal from John Dougenik.

Dave Salvaggio and Shawn Malloy both scored two goals apiece while Marshfield's Jack Carrig added a goal and two assists as the Maple Leafs remain undefeated in the Classics Div. with a 5-2 win over the Red Wings.

Ron DiCecca of Marshfield and Harry Mathews of Duxbury scored a goal each and Steve Figioli had two assists for the Red Wings.

John Davey scored a goal and assisted on another in the Canadiens 3-1 win over the Black Hawks in the Classics Div. contest. Marshfield's Jim Donnelly and Mike Fahie of Pembroke added a goal each for the Canadiens and Tim Fallon scored for the Black Hawks.

"I though they played their hearts out tonight," said Cohasset coach Dick Lawless, who along with coach Jim Willis have taken over the coaching duties since Thursday when Cohasset head coach Bo Ruggiero was seriously injured in an auto accident on his way to practice. "Our defense was tenacious and the press worked as well as it has all year."

Lawless said the game was a good indicator.

"It was a terrific tune up for the Tournament," he said. "If we had made a couple of shots that we make in other games we're right there. Their defense had a lot to do with that. They're well coached and have a couple of nice players."

Shane Haggerty led the Skippers with 17 points while Kyrel Jaundoo had a highlight reel type effort with 10 points.

Robbie Mahoney added 9 and Christian Davis chipped in 7.

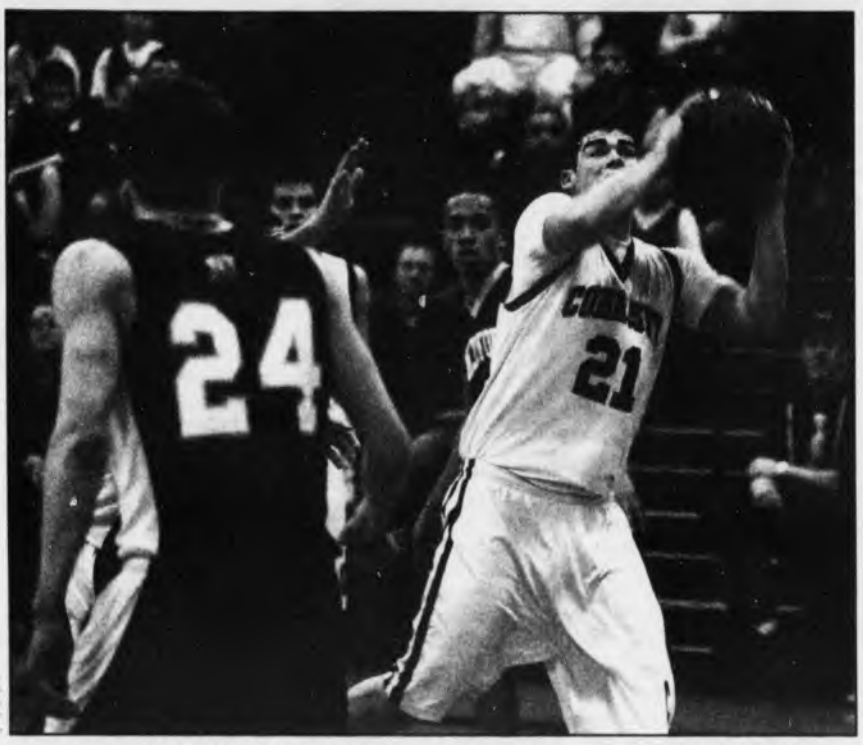
Rocco Laugelle has 2 points to round out Cohasset's scoring effort.

"We thought Shane had an off night and he still had 17 for us," Lawless said. "Kyrel played well and Robbie had a good game. He's the glue that holds the team together."

Ruggiero was injured seriously in a three-vehicle crash on Thursday afternoon while on his way to practice.

The driver of the pickup truck that hit Ruggiero is facing a felony OUI charge, according to the Hingham police logs.

Lawless said the Hall of Fame coach has been missed.



"The kids miss their coach and he misses them," Lawless said.

Last week, Ruggiero spoke about the season and how much he has enjoyed it.

"It has been a very enjoyable year," he said. "It's my fourth year here and I love it."

GIMME SHELTER

Lola prefers human company

Lola doesn't know why she's at the shelter and when other cats are being adopted, has been known to get into their carrier, thinking it's her turn to go home.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would love to find shelter for Lola, is a gray-and-white, 3-year-old female. Lola gets along fine with humans but is not overly fond of others of her own species and has spent a lot of her time at the shelter isolated from other cats.

Lola once had a loving home, but due to changes in the family structure, was surrendered. Of course she doesn't know why she's at the shelter and when other cats are being adopted, has been known to get into their carrier, thinking it's her turn to go home.

HSAR is hoping that someone who only wants, or can only have one cat, would be willing to share their home with this lovely "big boned" feline. Please stop by and meet Lola.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

An exciting new collaboration

Remember how you always had to have a partner for field trips? It was a big deal back then, and it's still a big deal now that we are all grown up. And guess what? Here at South Shore Conservatory we have a new partner! SSCreativeseeds, our early childhood department, is partnering up with Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset to bring high quality arts programming to the Cohasset/Scituate neighborhoods.

What do we have in common?

First of all, where we are both located on the South Shore, we are practically neighbors. South Shore Conservatory has two beautiful campuses: One in Hingham and one in Duxbury, while the museum is conveniently tucked behind the Cohasset Library, right outside charming Cohasset Village.

...the museum is conveniently tucked behind the Cohasset Library, right outside charming Cohasset Village.

Secondly, and perhaps most importantly, we are dedicated to providing meaningful experiences to the same early childhood bracket, children ages 0-9. Right away, this tacit recognition that early childhood extends beyond kindergarten is huge. Neuroscience tells us that the brain hits a certain plateau of development where most synapses connect and "set" around age 9. Before this time, the brain is incredibly malleable, so it is during these years that you can most effectively make a lasting and positive imprint on your child's gestalt.

No need to be hesitant about diving in with your child with organizations such as the Conservatory, the Discovery Museum and others around the South Shore offering plenty of opportunities to plant creative seeds and watch them grow. More than a glorious indoor play space for toddlers, the museum offers some unique opportunities for creative growth. Parents can pack a lunch and spend the day. A prominent play feature is the newly added Ship; throughout the year, the theme of the ship showcases a new historical event or destination. Although landlocked at the museum, children are able to travel to a new country or time period in history.

What better time to travel to than the time when people used to meet on a regular basis and sing and dance together, long before computers, televisions and even before radio. When we were approached by a museum member to start a music class at Discovery Museum, we jumped at the chance to collaborate. The first official manifestation is the offering of Music Together classes on Thursday and Friday mornings. We are off to a great start.

The SSCreativeseeds spring semester begins March 5, we will add our popular Drum & Sing to the roster on Tuesdays. SSC's Arielle Richter, who is not only Music Together certified, but is also a Scituate public school music educator is teaching this class. Drum & Sing is designed to pick up where Music Together leaves off. Using percussive instruments, movement props and a myriad of other enticements, this class supports children in fostering musicianship skills they will cherish for a lifetime.

For more information about the Conservatory's programs at Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, please visit http://www.ourworld-cgdm.org/#!__programs-classes.

Vocalist Jennie Mulqueen is the Conservatory's director of Early Childhood Programs and artistic director of SSC's Music Together program. She has been with the Conservatory since 2006.

COHASSET REC

Signup for SAT math review

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office on the first floor of Town Hall, visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

SAT Math Review – Princeton Review certified, Bob Beatty, a retired teacher from Scituate High School, will offer a 10-hour, seven-session math review based on content of the SATs. The course will cover the makeup of the test, techniques on how to score higher from not doing all the problems, when to guess or skip the problem, and how many problems can be left blank and still get a 600. Topics of all the algebra, geometry, and algebra 2 will also be covered as well as discussing the new sections of the test, which include functions, sets and sequences. All materials will be supplied. Takes place at Paul Pratt Library, March 5, March 12, March 19, March 26, April 2, April 9 and April 23, 6:30 to 8 p.m. The $150 fee includes all materials.

Yoga – Stretching for improved flexibility, balance and injury prevention. Safe and intelligent stretching sequences combined with balance and exercises designed to enhance one's physical and mental well-being as well as teach the anatomy of movement in order to build a solid foundation of fitness that will last a life time. The stretch class is geared toward seniors but is open to all ages. Town Hall Auditorium, Thursdays, 11 a.m. Fee is $8, $3 for seniors.

Chair Yoga – Thursday at 9:30 a.m., Cohasset Recreation Department is offering a weekly, drop-in chair yoga class in the Town Hall auditorium on Highland Avenue. This class will focus on effective yoga techniques appropriate for those with limited mobility. From a stable seat, modifications of many common yoga poses can be done without fear of injury or strain. This class provides a way to experience the physical and mental benefits of yoga, while developing muscle strength and confidence. Participants should dress in layers and wear lose, unrestricting garments. If possible, bring a mat or a blanket. Price: $3 for seniors, $8 non-seniors.

Boating Safety and Instruction Courses – Suddenly in Command, Saturday, March 31, 9 a.m. to noon, $35; About Boating Safety, Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., on March 17, May 12, June 23 or July 14. Limited enrollment – register early, $65; Boating Skills & Seamanship, Oct. 13, 20 and 27, Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

April Rec-cation – Just because the kids have the time off from school parents have the time off work, so Cohasset Recreation is picking up the slack with vacation week programs for children of all ages. For ages 6 through 10, a variety of arts, crafts, stories and games will be enjoyed. Facilitated by Recreation staff. Takes place at Deer Hill School. The Recreation Department will offer the RISE program after care during this week. April 17 through 20, Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Cost is $99 for RISE participants and $149 for non-Rise participants.

Cohasset Health and Recreation Fair – The Health and Recreation Fair will take place Sunday, March 25, from 1 to 4 p.m. at Deer Hill School. This will be an opportunity to gather information from all of Cohasset's most popular health, recreation, youth sports providers, as well as a wide variety of health screenings. This is the last day to register for Summer Playground programs as well as all summer camps and programs.

CPR & AED Training – Training or retraining should be a habit. Get one's oil changed, get an annual exam and change the batteries on home fire alarms. Make time to learn CPR or update skills to protect oneself and one's family. Sudden Cardiac Arrest claims too many lives each year. The Recreation Department is asking everyone to get trained in CPR. American Heart Association CPR courses will be instructed by members of Cohasset Fire Department; CPR instruction will include adult, child and infant CPR. Two-year certification card. Meets at the Recreation Center Wednesday, April 4, 6 to 10 p.m. Fee is $48.

Babysitter Training Course – This one-day, three-hour course is designed to assist fifth- through eighth-graders to be better babysitters and to learn the dos and don'ts of being home alone. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Instructor: Kim Cleary, nurse and mom. Meets at Paul Pratt Library, April 5 (half day), 1 to 4 p.m. Fee is $20.

Red Sox – This is the perfect opportunity for a special day, or for a first visit to Fenway Park, for the Sox game. Transportation included. Children younger than 16 must be accompanied by an adult. Wednesday, June 20, 7:10 p.m., vs. Miami Marlins. Monday, July 16, 7:10 p.m., vs. Chicago White Sox. Wednesday, Aug. 1, 7:10 p.m., vs. Detroit Tigers. Cost is $38 per ticket.

Summer Xtreme Program – Summer Xtreme is the alternative this age group has been looking for, and once they become part of the Summer Xtreme experience middle schoolers will be coming back for more, week after week. At just $112 a week it is an affordable way to have fun and meet new friends. Students entering sixth through ninth grade are eligible to sign up for this four-day, Monday through Thursday, program at Cohasset High School. A typical day takes place from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Some field trips have extended or later hours. Trips will be on Tuesdays and Thursdays unless otherwise noted.

Week 1 – June 26 through June 29: Paintball on Wednesday; Boston Bowl on Friday.
Week 2 – July 2 through July 3: Six Flags; Zoar Outdoors-Zip line. Week two is an overnight trip that includes hotel, $199.
Week 3 – July 9 through July 12: Nantasket Beach; Patriot Place; Espionage.
Week 4 – July 16 through July 19: Water Wizz; Skyzone.
Week 5 – July 23 through July 26: Deep sea fishing; ice skating.
Week 6 – July 30 through Aug. 2: Codzilla; Morton's Pond.
Week 7 – Aug. 6 through Aug. 9: Kayaking; Paw Sox.

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

Polar Plunge set for March 3

March Madness starts early, on Saturday, March 3, this year. It's the 14th Polar Plunge (formerly Passion Plunge) for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA). If you're looking for a great event to take part in, or to go watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it. There's a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the plungers into the surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Last year, close to 1,000 plungers jumped into the Atlantic Ocean, about half at Nantasket. They raised $360,000 for SOMA (8 percent of the annual budget). Since athletes or their families are not charged to participate, these funds are vitally important in providing year round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for our 13,000 athletes statewide.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 12th time, is a 12 sport-athlete, and Captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which will include Cohasset plungers: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Bill Greentree, Steve Myers, Maria Osborne, Jeff Nothnagle (past Board Chair), Graham, Nick, and Charlotte Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus many from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program, which has 100 athletes from age 6 to 71 from seven area towns.

The public is invited to Nantasket Beach on Saturday, March 3, to support the athletes with a pledge. You can do this with a check to your favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or on-line at www.PolarPlungeMA.org, where you can also register to plunge

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 5, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're correct to want to help someone who seems to need assistance. But be careful that he or she isn't pulling the wool over those gorgeous Sheep's eyes. You need more facts.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your Bovine optimism will soon dispel the gloom cast by those naysayers and pessimists who still hover close by. Also, that good news you recently received is part of a fuller message to come.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Feeling jealous over a colleague's success drains the energy you need to meet your own challenges. Wish him or her well, and focus on what you need to do. Results start to show in mid-March.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You're likely to feel somewhat Crabby these days, so watch what you say, or you could find yourself making lots of apologies. Your mood starts to brighten by the weekend.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your pride might still be hurting from those unflattering remarks someone made about you. But cheer up, you're about to prove once again why you're the Top Cat in whatever you do.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A misunderstanding with a co-worker could become a real problem unless it's resolved soon. Allow a third party to come in and assess the situation without pressure or prejudice.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Call a family meeting to discuss the care of a loved one at this difficult time. Be careful not to let yourself be pushed into shouldering the full burden on your own.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An upcoming decision could open the way to an exciting venture. However, there are some risks you should know about. Ask more questions before making a commitment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Personal matters need your attention during the earlier part of the week. You can start to shift your focus to your workaday world by midweek. Friday brings news.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You've been going at a hectic pace for quite a while. It's time now for some much-needed rest and recreation to recharge those hardworking batteries.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This is a good time to upgrade your current skills or consider getting into an entirely different training program so that you can be prepared for new career opportunities.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Keep a low profile in order to avoid being lured away from the job at hand. Focus on what has to be done, and do it. There'll be time later to enjoy fun with family and friends.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ATTENTION JOB SEEKERS

Minding generation gap is topic Monday

Those can include "traditionalists" who were born from 1900 to 1945, Baby Boomers, born between 1946 to 1964, "generation Xers," from 1965 to 1980, and "gen Y," from 1981 to 1999.

"Mind the Gap" is the message if you are stepping off a London Subway car. But the injunction is just as important for today's job seekers. Many older workers are finding that they are being interviewed by professionals younger than they are, and when they do land a position many of those working around them are from a different generation. It all means that understanding the generation gap is essential for navigating job searches and remaining relevant in today's workplace. "You need to understand how the generations view each other and how they can learn to communicate with each other—each has different motivations, and they see the world differently," says Paula Clasby, an expert on helping companies enable different generations to work better with each other.

Paula Clasby will be the featured presenter at "On the Job" on Monday from 8:30 to 10 a.m. on Feb. 27th. She is a human resources professional who has been working with organizations on managing generational issues. "There is a new generation moving into positions in every organization—they may be more tech savvy, but they also have different expectations as well as commitments to their jobs. Understanding, how those sentiments help or hinder performance is important for everyone who is competing for a new position," says Linda Powers, one of the leaders of "On the Job."

Four generations are now part of the work place. Those can include "traditionalists" who were born from 1900 to 1945, Baby Boomers, born between 1946 to 1964, "generation Xers," from 1965 to 1980, and "gen Y," from 1981 to 1999. Her presentation will look at the background, motivations and expectations of all these generations. Each needs to learn how to interact with the other by maximizing the strengths like dedication on the part of "traditionalists" and the technical savvy of "gen Y, while also minimizing the weaknesses of the other. Her presentation is entitled "Four Generations!"

Clasby is an accomplished human resources professional with over 20 years experience as a generalist in increasingly more responsible roles. Over her career she has worked in the investment management and legal services industries in the Boston area. Charles P. Buckley

Charles P. Buckley

COHASSET – Charles P. Buckley, age 65, of Cohasset, passed away at home surrounded by his devoted family on Feb. 15, 2012.

Charles was the beloved husband of 41 years to Barbara E. (Elliott) and the devoted father of Kate Townes and her husband, Rasheed of Worcester, and Jenn Buckley and her fiancé, Ryan Willis of South Boston. He was the brother of Maureen Inchauspe of CA, John Buckley of Weymouth, Kevin Buckley of Dorchester, Robert Buckley of South Boston, and the late William Buckley. Mr. Buckley was also the proud grandfather of Damian Townes.

A graduate of Northeastern Univ., with a degree in Chemical Engineering in 1969, Mr. Buckley also received his M.B.A. from Northeastern. Having worked for Boston Gas for 24 years, Mr. Buckley also worked for 15 years at Transgas in Lowell. Charles was an avid sailor and was a member of Hull Yacht Club, where he was a past Commodore. He was also a member and past president of the Boston Chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers and an active member of St. Anthony's Parish in Cohasset. He will be greatly missed by all those who were blessed to have known him.

A Funeral Mass was celebrated on Monday, Feb. 20, 2012 at 10 a.m. in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours were Sunday, Feb. 19 from 3 - 7 p.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (directly across from St. Anthony's Church), Cohasset. Interment Beechwood Cemetery, Cohasset.

Helen Hooper

QUINCY – Helen Lang Hooper, musician and mother of five, died at the age of 95, in Quincy, Feb. 9, 2012.

She was the fourth of seven daughters of Malcolm and Ethel Lang. Helen was the granddaughter of prominent Boston musician B.J. Lang and niece of the composer Margaret Ruthven Lang. Helen attended The Winsor School in Boston.

Her husband James R. Hooper, professor and dean of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio, predeceased Helen in 2005. They raised their five children in Cambridge and Cleveland Heights, Ohio.

Beginning in the 1950s, Helen played the violin with the Cleveland Philharmonic Orchestra and later served as Business Manager under its founding conductor, Dr. Karl Grossman.

While living in Cleveland Heights, Ohio, Helen taught solfege and piano and led a musical performance group for high school students.

In 1962, she co-wrote the music and lyrics for Johnny Appleseed, an original children's musical, for a cast of nearly 100 including her five children. Helen performed a number of comedic and dramatic roles at the Hermit Club of Cleveland among them The Man Who Came to Dinner, Antigone, and Arsenic and Old Lace.

In 1975, James and Helen Hooper retired to Cohasset, where they lived until 2004. During those years, Helen was a devoted volunteer for a variety of charities including the Social Service League and Meals on Wheels in Cohasset and the Wellspring Thrift Shop in Hull. She also served as a lector at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church.

After leaving Cohasset, Helen continued to share her love of music in the three retirement communities where she lived, playing the piano and singing to the delight of residents and staff.

Helen is survived by her children, Ethel Hooper Farny, Katharine Amory Hooper, Anne Hooper Webb, James Ripley Hooper III and Rosamond Lang Hooper-Hamersley; 12 grandchildren; five great-grandchildren; and 14 nieces and nephews.

A funeral eucharist will be offered at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, Saturday, March 10, 2012, at 10 a.m.

Donations may be made in Helen's name to the charity of your choice.

Funeral arrangements are under the auspices of Dolan Funeral Services of Milton.

Special municipal employee vote

Governance committee status change

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"It provides a less strict application of the State Ethics Law, allowing members of the Governance Committee to serve in connection with town business."
Town Counsel Paul DeRensis

The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday night to designate the Governance Committee as a special municipal employee. The Governance Committee's chairman, Michael Milanoski, is currently serving as unpaid Acting Town Manager while Michael Coughlin is under suspension with pay.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said during the meeting that this "is a routine thing; it's commonly done" to allow town volunteers to also conduct business with the town.

"It provides a less strict application of the State Ethics Law, allowing members of the Governance Committee to serve in connection with town business," said DeRensis.

In this case, it would allow Milanoski to continue serving on the Governance Committee while also receiving a stipend as interim town manager.

Selectman Diane Kennedy posed the question to DeRensis: "Does it allow them to be compensated?"

DeRensis responded that giving committee members this designation "provides more flexibility." He also noted that the designation applies to the committee as a whole, not just an individual member. "If someone leaves the committee, they are no longer special municipal employees."

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore pointed out that the Governance Committee, which is made up of members of the former town

Code of Civility

Selectmen vote to adopt code and other town policies

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Michael Milanoski has been the volunteer acting town manager for two weeks, and has already had the Board of Selectmen vote to adopt policies that Cohasset has gone without for years.

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr said that town manager Michael Coughlin, who has been suspended with pay, also urged the board to adopt a Code of Civility, and that he thought it was a great idea that Coughlin "was kind enough to suggest."

Other policies the board reviewed and voted on include an electronic communications and computer use policy for town employees, as well as overall financial management policies for town operations. The board also reviewed a social media use policy, but decided to solicit public input before voting on the policy. Selectmen discussed conducting a poll to have members of the community give feedback; the policy was tabled for the night but will be revisited at an upcoming meeting.

Milanoski, who serves as chairman of the Governance Committee and as an associate member of the Conservation Commission, told the board that while the town was in great need of adopting these policies, Cohasset never had any like these "on the books." The acting town manager added that the policies were created with input from several other towns with similar documents.

Ready, set, vote!

What
Massachusetts voters could play a meaningful role in the 2012 Super Tuesday presidential primaries.
The March 6 primary provides Massachusetts voters the chance for their voices to be heard about presidential preference. With Barack Obama the Democratic incumbent in the White House, the contest this year is centered on the Republican Party.

When
Tuesday, March 6. Polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Location
Both Precinct 1 and Precinct 2 vote at Cohasset Town Hall.

Voters
Primary voters must vote on the ballot from the party in which they are registered. Unenrolled voters may select either ballot.

Democratic ballot, presidential
President Barack Obama is the only candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Republican ballot, presidential Mitt Romney, Rick Santorum, Newt Gingrich and Ron Paul will be among the choices on Super Tuesday. Other names appearing are Rick Perry, Michele Bachmann, Jon Huntsman, all of whom have dropped out of the race or suspended their campaigns.

Green-Rainbow, presidential Kent Mesplay, Jill Stein, Harley Mikkelson

State and town committees
Candidates for State Committee man and State Committee woman are also listed on their respective party ballots. On the democrat ballot Gregory Shanahan of Weymouth is candidate for State Committee man and Karen DeTellis of Weymouth is candidate for State Committee woman.
The Republican ballot lists three candidates for State Committee man; John Cafferty of Hingham, Peter Buckley of Cohasset and William Harris of Duxbury. Janet Fogarty of Scituate is a candidate for State Committee woman.

Republican and Democratic Town Committee candidates are also listed on their respective ballots. Voters can fill an oval voting for the entire slate or cast votes for individuals.

Information
Contact the Town Clerk's Office, 781-383-4100.

Cohasset registered voters:
5423, including 3010 Unenrolled; 1221 Republicans; 1173 Democrats; 5 Green-Rainbow; and 14 Libertarian.

Interesting comparison
36 percent of registered voters statewide are democrats and 11.35 percent are republicans. In Cohasset those percentages are 22 percent republican and 21 percent democrat. Statewide 53 percent of voters are unenrolled; in Cohasset that figure is 56 percent.

Texting driver crashes into tree

Hingham police say the Cohasset woman driving this Jeep drove off the road and into a tree while "texting." COURTESY PHOTO

A Cohasset woman suffered minor injuries early Saturday morning (Feb. 25) after she drove off the road and struck a tree while "texting," Hingham police said.

On Feb. 25, at 12:59 a.m., officers responded to a one-vehicle crash near 1144 Main St. (Route 228) in Hingham. Officers found a heavily damaged 2012 Jeep Wrangler across the road. The driver was alone and had minor injuries.

The driver, a 28-year-old Cohasset woman, was traveling north on Main Street and was looking away from the road to read a text message, police said.

While looking at her phone, she drove off the right side of the road, across a driveway and struck a large tree. The Jeep then spun around and landed across the road. The Jeep was heavily damaged on the front and entire right side. The driver, who was properly seat belted, received minor injuries.

She was transported by Hingham Fire Department paramedics to South Shore Hospital. She was treated and released. The Cohasset woman was cited for failure for two offenses: failure to stay within marked lanes and texting while driving.

The texting law (Chapter 90 Section 13B) includes "composing, sending or reading electronic messages". The first offense is a $100 fine, second a $250 fine and third or subsequent offense a $500 fine.

Under the law, violations are not considered surchargeable offenses.

Emergency response training

Cohasset's Emergency Management Agency is seeking volunteers to train for the community emergency response team (CERT).

CERT training will begin in April, will run for 10 weeks (one night a week), and is being taught by instructors from Braintree's emergency management team.

About CERT training:

- Emergency services personnel are the best trained and equipped to handle emergencies. However, following a catastrophic disaster, the community may be on their own for a period of time because of the size of the area affected, lost communications, and un-passable roads.
- CERT Training is designed to prepare us to help ourselves, our families and neighbors in the event of a catastrophic disaster. Because emergency services personnel will not be able to help everyone immediately, CERT members make a difference by using them to save lives and protect property.
- CERT Training covers basic skills that are important to know in a disaster when emergency services are not available. With training and practice and by working as a team, we will be able to do the greatest good for the greatest number after a disaster.
- Interested in training for CERT? Call the fire department at 781-383-0616 and leave your name with Chief Robert Silvia.

Crash ties up 3A traffic

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

On Monday (Feb. 27) at 9:40am, the police department received a report of a motor vehicle accident at the intersection of Route 3A and Beechwood Street. Callers were stating that the crash involved a passenger vehicle and a dump truck.

On arrival officers determined that there were no injuries. Witnesses stated that the dump truck, which was a 2007 GMC, owned by a landscaping corporation out of New York, was exiting Fiori's Gulf station and failed to yield to traffic on Route 3A. The driver of the dump truck, a 20-year-old man from Leominster, Mass., was issued a citation for failing to yield.

The other vehicle involved, a 2007 Chevy Suburban, which was traveling north on Route 3A was operated by a 42-year-old woman from Norwell. Both vehicles had to be towed from the scene and traffic on Route 3A was impacted for approximately 20 minutes while the wrecked vehicles were removed.

MV accidents

- At 10:36 a.m. on Monday (Feb. 20), police responded to a single-car accident on Norman Todd Road. Police said a deer darted out in front of a 2010 Honda Accord, operated by a 75-year-old Scituate man. The Honda was headed east (toward S. Main Street) when the accident occurred. The deer was killed; the Honda did not have to be towed and the operator was not injured, police said.
- At 6:31 p.m. on Friday (Feb. 24), police responded to a car crash in front of Stop & Shop on Route 3A. Police said a 2009 Toyota Highlander that was headed north and operated by an 18-year-old Scituate woman attempted an illegal U-turn in front of Stop & Shop and hit a 2011 Mercedes GLK 350 sedan, operated by a 38-year-old woman from Laguna Beach, Calif., who was headed south. There was heavy damage to both vehicles and they had to be towed. There were no reported injuries. The 18-year-old was cited for making an illegal U-turn on a state highway.

Police have been investigating a breaking-and-entering at the Red Lion Inn during which a safe was stolen with an undetermined amount of money. At 2:55 a.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 21), the night clerk called police to report that two men appeared to be breaking in through a second-floor window. The night clerk yelled and both men jumped off the roof and fled. Two Cohasset officers and mutual aid from Hingham responded. The four officers checked the area and woods behind the inn but did not come up with anything.

Further investigation revealed a small safe had been stolen. Detectives have been conducting interviews and have some strong leads, police said. Police said the thieves scaled the ledge up to the second floor.

Rocks

At 9:15 a.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 21), police responded to Rocky Lane after a report from the MBTA that two while males in black sweatshirts were throwing rocks at the conductor of the train as it passed under the overpass. Police did not find anyone in the area and there have been no further incidents.

Vandalism

A 51-year-old Cohasset woman reported at 10:30 a.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 22) that eggs had been thrown at her front door, garage door and second story roof. There was also toilet paper strewn around the front lawn and some broken glass. The family had been away when the vandalism and damage occurred, police said.

Intoxicated

A concerned citizen notified police after seeing a woman, who appeared to be intoxicated, get into a 1998 Chevrolet Cavalier after leaving the bank at Cohasset Plaza and head south on Route 3A toward Scituate at 4:13 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 22). Police gave the information to Scituate police who investigated.

Witnesses stated that the dump truck, which was a 2007 GMC, was exiting Fiori's Gulf station and failed to yield to traffic on Route 3A causing the accident. COURTESY PHOTO

Food taken

The manager at Shaw's reported to police at 4:23 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 22) that a man in his late 30s had walked out of the supermarket with a basket full of food that he did not pay for. Police said he walked right by the checkout. Shaw's provided the plate number, which came back to a woman with a Scituate address. In the meantime, a 39-year-old Cohasset man arrived at the Cohasset Police Station and said he had inadvertently left Shaw's without paying for the food. He explained that his friend had recently passed away and he was kind of in a haze when he left the store. He offered to pay for the items. Shaw's declined because there was no way to get an accounting of what had been taken. As is their protocol, Shaw's issued a no-trespass order against the man who is not allowed back in the store, police said. The car he drove from Shaw's belonged to a friend of his in Scituate.

Revoked plates

Police stopped a 2010 Mercedes GL550 for speeding on South Main Street at 9:06 a.m. on Thursday (Feb. 23) and gave the 53-year-old female operator from Scituate a verbal warning. The woman, a cancer patient, was sent on her way. But dispatch then notified the officer that the car's plates had been revoked due to insurance cancellation. The officer went to the woman's house in Scituate and seized the plate until the woman could straighten out her insurance issue, police said.

Stolen car

A 1995 Mercury Tracer with a flat tire that had been abandoned in the parking lot at the Cohasset Harbor Inn turned out to have been stolen out of Scituate. Cohasset police got the call about the car at 9:27 a.m. on Friday (Feb. 24); the car was listed to a 51-year-old Scituate woman who had reported it stolen a few weeks ago.

Food donated

A woman who wished to remain anonymous went to the police station on Sunday at 4:46 p.m. with four bags of groceries for police to deliver to a unit at the Avalon complex. The woman had read in last week's Mariner about a mother and daughter there who needed assistance. Police contacted the woman at Avalon who accepted the donation and an officer dropped the food off, police said.

Winter parking

Winter parking regulations are in effect through April 1.

No overnight on-street parking between the hours of 2 a.m. and 6 a.m. is allowed during winter parking regulations.

Violators are subject to a fine of $25.

Health and Rec. come together for spring fair

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following an unusually mild winter, many Cohasseters may have already turned their thoughts to spring. But since (even) warmer weather means more time spent outdoors, it's also time to give our bodies a tune-up before spring begins.

Just in time for the transition comes Cohasset's second annual Health and Recreation Fair, set for Sunday, March 25. The Recreation Department and the Board of Health are teaming up once more for this community event, which will take place from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Deer Hill School.

While it's the second time the two departments have joined together to offer this event, the Board of Health sponsored its own health fair for 20 years. Then the Rec. Department started putting on their own fair four years ago in order to showcase the many recreational opportunities available in town.

Now, Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin and Recreation Director Ted Carroll work side by side to put together this event, which allows attendees to tackle two related healthcare matters – wellness and fitness – at the same place and time.

The Health and Rec. Fair offers something for everyone, said Carroll. "The goal is to show the people in town all of the different health and recreation opportunities they have. It's great for the whole family — there are activities for everyone."

Best of all, said Goodwin, "The event is free of charge."

Last year, the Deer Hill School hallways, cafeteria and gymnasium housed over 80 tables from local vendors, sports teams and healthcare specialists. This year, the goal is to have 100 tables and over 1,000 attendees, said Carroll.

"There will be tables every square foot from the cafeteria to the gym," the Rec. Director said. "We always reach high. It gets bigger every year."

Last year, the health-related tables were relegated to the cafeteria, while the recreation side of the house was located in the gym. This year will have more integration, according to Carroll. The purpose of the joint event is to offer all of the wellness and fitness information under one roof.

Some of the vendors will set up shop outside. The Hingham Lions Club Eye Mobile will offer eye screenings while the Dana-Farber Blum Family Resource Van will conduct skin cancer screenings. The Games2U party van will also be parked out front with mobile video games for kids to play. Carroll said this van was a big hit during the last day of the summer Rec. Department program.

Inside the building, folks can have additional screenings done, including blood pressure, bone density, glucose, cholesterol, oral cancer, and mental health screenings. Flu shots will also be available.

"These are good preventive services, they're free, and they're good screenings to have done," said Goodwin.

Healthcare participants include the South Shore Hospital, the Melanoma Education Foundation and the Norwell Visiting Nurses Association. Dentist Robin Lawrence will provide the oral cancer screenings. Eye surgeon physician and surgeon Dr. Richard Strecker will have a table. Registered nurse Robin Killeen of the Healing Path in Pembroke will offer acupressure treatments. Stephanie Grenadier, a massage therapist from Energy Matters, will be doing holistic massage. Dr. Christian Ford, Cohasset's plastic surgeon, will be doing consultations.

The recreation aspect of the fair gets the word out on all of the Rec. Department's summer programs and classes.

"It's our way of starting registration — it's the grand opening of our sports camps and programs," said Carroll.

The fair also allows instructors to put on half-hour demos to showcase their particular sport or activity, whether it's kung-fu, dance or gymnastics. "We make sure every sport is represented," Carroll said.

In addition to offering information on rec. activities and classes, the Rec. Director said the fair also has a "shop locally" theme. Nearly every fitness center, gym or yoga studio in town participates in the fair, said Carroll, as do health food stores like All the Best.

Other local organizations, including the Cohasset Rotary, which puts together the Road Race by the Sea, and the Relay for Life will have tables as well.

"We try to stay local so people can see all the opportunities they have here in town," Carroll explained. "It's great for anyone new to town to come and learn about everything recreation."

The Rec. Director said that adding the health component to the fair and working with Goodwin has been "just incredible. It's growing every year."

Local teen donates to Cohasset K-9 program

March 9 fundraiser to support Working Dog Foundation

Bridgett Condon, a local 14-year old with a passion for animals, has raised $250 from part-time work, chores and donations from her friends in lieu of presents for her birthday, to give to the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation as it prepares for its first annual fundraiser on March 9th at Atlantica. Condon is currently in eighth grade at Derby Academy in Hingham.

"I have always loved dogs and have wanted to become a veterinarian since I can remember," said Bridgett. "After reading some of the recent articles about K-9 Erik's needs, I knew I wanted to help."

Helping animals comes naturally to Bridgett and her family. Last year they adopted Kaiser, a rescue dog from a high-kill shelter in Tennessee. Kaiser showed up as a skittish and frightened dog that was afraid of loud noises and children. After patiently working with Kaiser, he is a warm and affectionate family pet.

The community will have an opportunity to join Bridgett in support of the K-9 team on March 9th at Atlantica from 7 - 11 p.m. Admission to the event is free. The fundraiser will feature raffles, a live auction, music, and hors d'oeuvres.

The winner of the $5,000 grand prize cash raffle will be drawn that night. There will be 10 cash prizes totaling $7500. Winners need not be present to win. Only 200 raffle tickets will be sold and are $100 each.

"The event at Atlantica on March 9 is free to attend, and we hope people will come out and show their support for the program," said K-9 officer Patrick Reardon. "The cash raffle will really be key to the success of this fundraiser. Since we're only selling 200 tickets, it's a great way to help the program with really good odds of winning."

There are many live auction items for participants to bid on: Red Sox tickets; Bruins tickets; a golf outing at Black Rock; a custom-made dog house; dog obedience training; a week at a beautiful Myrtle Beach house and more than 20 raffle baskets filled with a variety of goods and services and gift certificates donated by area individuals and businesses.

Since completing 16 weeks of training in early January, Officer Reardon and Erik are now trained in tracking, area searches, evidence tracking and the like. Erik can track someone fleeing from a crime scene, locate missing persons and track evidence that may have been left behind from a burglary. In the first few weeks since returning from training, Erik has been deployed several times following area break-ins, making sure the thieves were no longer in the house and providing important information to detectives. The team is now on regular patrol.

"One of the things we need to do in this first year, in addition to getting Erik the basic equipment he needs, is to raise money to be set aside for an emergency veterinary fund," said Trish Morse, President of the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation. "It's just a reality that these working dogs face certain risks that the average pet does not, and they are often in harm's way requiring an extra degree of care and veterinary expense. We need to be in a place financially where we are fully prepared, should K-9 Erik need more than just basic veterinary care."

Morse hopes that this event will put the K-9 program on solid footing so they can turn their attention to the foundation's parallel mission of providing grants to individuals in the community whose every day lives would be made better with the assistance of a trained service animal.

According to Morse, Service dogs can be trained to fetch dropped items, alert to sounds, pull a wheelchair, and provide balance and support and much more. A seizure-alert dog can even warn his or her owner of an impending seizure long before any outward signs are shown, and provide protection until the episode has passed. A therapy dog can provide physical and emotional support to a child with autism. A mobility assistance dog can become a "living cane" to an individual with Parkinson's, multiple sclerosis or other physical limitations. The purchase and training of a service dog can cost upwards of $20,000, with the recipient generally responsible for paying half that cost. The Foundation's goal is to provide grants to assist in covering those costs.

About Cohasset Working Dog Foundation
The mission of the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation is to support Cohasset's Police K-9 program and to provide grants to individuals in the community toward the purchase and training of service dogs, including guide dogs for the blind, hearing and mobility-impaired, seizure alert dogs and the like. The CWDF will support K-9 Erik throughout his working life, providing for his care and ensuring that he has the equipment he needs to serve the community.

SPECIALTY CAMPS & CAMPS FOR SPECIAL POPULATIONS: (PART 1)
THE CAMP EXPERIENCE IS SPECIAL! BUT, NOTE WHAT THE WORD "SPECIAL" MEANS AT CAMP

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Camp programs are typically designed with a target group in mind. For certain groups, knowledge of how to serve that particular population makes or breaks the camp experience; and it can be the difference between getting to go to summer camp and having to miss out. From serving campers who desire or require a specialized camp setting (a medical or developmental special need, a passion, aptitude, interest and skill level in a particular program area, or those who share a certain religion or lifestyle – there are camps out there that employ staff members with knowledge, training and expertise in the specialty area. These camps are located in all kinds of surroundings – rural, suburban and urban. And they are owned and operated by nonprofit organizations, independent individuals or families, religious and cultural organizations, and an array of other organized groups. Each is a community where the specialty or the special population is such a focus, the entire camp experience is organized around it! The specialty is at the heart of the camp community and the camp exists because of the specialty.

Camps for Special Populations – Because everyone deserves the opportunity to experience a summer at camp, there are many camps in the region which are equipped to serve people with special needs. Sometimes these campers can be mainstreamed at camp as they are at school, and sometimes camps are solely dedicated to serving campers with particular needs and challenges. Medical conditions like cancer and diabetes; developmental issues such as autism and down syndrome; learning/neuropschological diagnoses like ADHD; social/emotional challenges like grief (particularly the loss of a parent); and physical/mobility challenges, like cerebral palsy and spina bifida are only some of the special needs which have camp programs dedicated solely to a particular population. There are some general camps for children with special needs that serve several different populations simultaneously, while there are others that offer sessions dedicated to one special need at a time. It's possible to search by special need in our online Find A Camp tool: http://www.acanewengland.org/families-public/finding-your-camp manager search committee that selected Coughlin as one of the top contenders for the town manager job last year, has a sunset clause for December of this year.

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr said that means the special municipal employee designation will sunset along with the committee. He also pointed out that other town committees, including Advisory and the Conservation Commission, both have the special municipal employee status.

The board voted unanimously to approve the designation. Then they ventured into a discussion on compensating Milanoski. Selectman Leland Jenkins asked town counsel Peter Berry if they would need to do so in executive session; Berry said that if they planned to enter into negotiations, they should save the conversation for executive after the public meeting.

Pescatore said that while he supports Milanoski as acting town manager, weren't the selectmen planning to hold a vote during their next meeting (March 6) to reinstate Milanoski, and discuss compensating him from that point on?

Kennedy responded that Milanoski had already been on the job for two weeks as of Friday, March 2, and the board planned to vote whether to keep him on as interim and discuss compensation after the two-week mark. She reiterated that they would do so during next Tuesday's meeting.

The Mariner told the board during the public comment period that according to the Town Clerk's office, not all members of the Governance Committee (or the former town manager search committee) have been properly sworn in at Town Hall, and asked whether plans to have each committee member get sworn in were underway.

Carr thanked the Mariner "for staying on top of this" and replied that they would ensure each member is sworn in. Kennedy added that they will also need to take an ethics exam.

Special municipal employee status: What it means

The conflict of interest law, G.L. c. 268A, covers all municipal officials and employees, whether elected or appointed, paid or unpaid, full-time or part-time. However, two sections of the conflict law apply less restrictively to those part-time or unpaid municipal officials who have been designated as "special municipal employees."

"Special municipal employee" status can be assigned to certain municipal positions by a vote of the board of selectmen, board of aldermen, town council or city council. Several specific municipal positions are automatically designated as "special" under the law. Your position is eligible to be designated as a "special municipal employee" position provided that:

You are not paid; or
You hold a part-time position which allows you to work at another job during normal working hours; or
You were not paid by the city or town for more than 800 working hours (approximately 20 weeks full-time) during the preceding 365 days.

It is the municipal position that is designated as having "special" status, not the individual. Therefore, all employees holding the same office or position must have the same classification as "special municipal employees." For instance, one member of a school committee cannot be classified as a "special" unless all members are similarly classified.

Source: Mass.Gov

The board voted unanimously to approve the designation.

CIVILITY

of town employees and board members, said Milanoski.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said, "These are great documents. It's important for all of us – employees, volunteers, boards and commissions – to be on the same page... We are all doing our best and we have to set the standard."

The Code of Civility applies to all town employees, boards and commissions, Milanoski said, while the computer usage and social media policies would likely apply to paid town employees using town-issued electronics.

These policies will be distributed to all employees, signed and placed into their personnel files.

The selectmen want to clarify what the social media use policy will entail, whether it pertains to town officials' and board members' personal computers on town property only; department social networking pages or personal ones.

Kennedy said that she strives to keep her personal Facebook page to be about "Diane the person" and does not discuss official business. She added, however, that town departments like the police department do a great job of informing the public through their social networking pages.

Selectman Fred Koed pointed out that the school committee recently adopted a similar social media policy. School committee vice chair Jeanne Astino, who was in the audience, said that so far the school's policy was working well.

As of press time, the financial management policies and social media policy were put on the town website. Assistant to the town manager, Jennifer Oram, encourages those who would like to give suggestions and feedback on the social media policy to email her at jenno@townofcohasset.org with their comments by March 15.

Code of Civility: Highlights

The town's new Code of Civility is broken up into two sections of "codes of core values": one for civil discourse, and one for civility and standards.
A list of these core values:
Integrity: I shall make no promises or commitments I cannot reasonably expect to fulfill...
Ethics: I pledge to maintain the highest standards of ethical behavior and to comply with the laws, regulations, and policies under which we operate.
Civility: I pledge to help create an atmosphere of respect and civility in which individual commissioners, town manager, department heads, staff, committee and board members, and the public are free to express their ideas and work to their full potential.
Respect for the individual: I respect the diversity of commissioners, staff, committee members and citizens and will always strive to provide fair and equitable treatment to all and to encourage personal and professional growth.
Communication: I pledge to be open, consistent, truthful, and respectful in all communications, written and verbal...
Teamwork: I shall work together with others, with mutual respect, to achieve organizational goals, recognizing that unity of purpose and effort leads to productivity and greater accomplishments.
Leadership: I shall lead by example, using appropriate interpersonal skills, and shall strive to maximize citizen and staff involvement in decisions and initiatives that further the goals of the community.
Creativity and innovation: I shall strive to stimulate and appreciate new concepts and solutions suggested by all, encouraging creative ideas and solutions that benefit the community.
Quality: I shall strive for excellence in every phase of my work with others on behalf of the Town.
Stewardship: I shall strive to make a positive contribution to our town and enhance the quality of services throughout the Cohasset community.
Efficiency: I shall work to attain our goals by optimizing the use of our time and financial resources.
Organizational sensitivity: I shall consider the impact of all decisions on the town's financial resources and recognize the limitations imposed by our environment.
Adaptability: I shall respond efficiently and effectively to the needs of our citizens as well as changes to our environment.
Recognition: I shall recognize and value individual contributions to the Town of Cohasset, as the town's mission and vision are pursued.

Water company RFP

An item in last week's article "Water issues RFP" warrants clarification. The Mariner reported that the Australian company Macquarie Bank owns shares in Crow Point Partners, Water Commission chairman Peter DeCaprio's private hedge fund investment, but the sentence should have been in the past tense. Macquarie did invest in Crow Point Partners, but DeCaprio said that the fund the bank invested in closed in 2009. We regret the error.

AROUND TOWN

The Polar Plunge for SOMA is Saturday!

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset, Happy March 2012! For me, March is a very long month to get through but this year seems different to me. The weather has definitely played a factor, even with the little bit of snow this past week, I still don't feel like Winter ever really showed its true seasonal flair however, I know that we have had plenty of "Marches" in years past where this one month can certainly play some tricks so who knows? Whatever happens, we are New Englanders I guess and take what we get and, we are one month closer to Spring.

One of the days that takes place in the month of March is St. Patrick's Day and for many, this brings a number of traditions involving, leprechauns, the color green, tricks that are played and, of course, a parade that is held in our neighboring town of Scituate. This year's St. Patrick's Day Parade is being held on Sunday, March 18th and one of the traditions in Scituate, in a way to help raise funds for this parade is to have local residents, who are known in the community for giving back, volunteering and helping in a number of ways to "throw their cap in the ring" and run for a chance to be the honorary Mayor of Scituate for the day and be in the parade.

This year's candidates include three men and one woman, who many of us here in Cohasset know, Jean Di Giacomandrea. To support Jean's "run for office, a Kids Day "Fun"draiser on Saturday, March 10th from 11 a.m. – 4 p.m. at the Scituate Harbor Community Building, 44 Jericho Road. All monies raised going directly to the Scituate Chamber of Commerce to fund the Parade and for every dollar raised, one vote is gained for Jean.

The event includes face painting by Jen Rooney (all day), Big Ryan's Tall Tales 11:30-12:30 Clowning Around with Koo-Koo the Clown 12:30-2 and entertainment by the "Toe Jam Puppet Band" 2:30-3:30. Tickets are $10 each with a $30 cap for a family of up to 5 people. (Advance ticket purchase for this event is suggested). For more information or to reserve your tickets ahead of time, call Jean at 617-750-8987.

Polar plunge

March Madness starts tomorrow, March 3rd! It's the 14th Annual Polar Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA)! If you're looking for a great event to take part in, or to go watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it! There's a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the plungers into the surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach! They anticipate a field of close to 500 Plungers who along with others plunging simultaneously at Revere Beach hope to raise over $400,000. As SOMA does not charge our athletes or their families to participate, these funds are vitally important in providing year round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for their 13,000 athletes.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 12th time, is an athlete and Captain of the South Shore Mariners Team of 34 Plungers including Cohasset residents: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Steve Myers, Jeff Nothnagle (Past Board Chair), Maria Osborne, and Pat Plante. Phil Faulkner and Charlotte, Graham, and Nick Sida will plunge with the SSharcs of the South Shore.

The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program, which has 90 athletes from age 8 to 66 from seven South Shore towns from Milton to Duxbury. So "come on down" to Nantasket Beach tomorrow, March 3rd, and please support our athletes with a pledge! You can do this by bringing a check for your favorite plunger tomorrow, payable to Special Olympics, or on-line at www.PolarPlungeMA.org. If you want to join in - you can register at the beach tomorrow!

Thanks in advance for your interest and support for this wonderful organization that builds self-confidence pride, and healthy athletes!

Honor society

Congratulations are going out to Cohasset students at Boston College High School, Michael E. Fegreus, Andrew S. Fontaine, Robert J. Hillman and Zachary R. Strecker who were among the 119 seniors and juniors inducted into the Robert J. Fulton, S.J. Chapter of the National Honor Society at an evening ceremony January 11 at Boston College High School's Fahey-Hunter Commons. This is a great accomplishment for you all and one that your family and friends are so proud of, keep up the great work boys.

K-9 support

Here is a great night of fun for you and friends to get out and enjoy while supporting a great program here in our town. It is the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation 2012 Winter Fundraiser, being held on Friday, March 9th at 7 pm at the Atlantica. Please join in on this special night for music, food, wonderful themed raffle baskets and great auction items as so many gather to support the Cohasset Police K-9 program and the work of the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation.

Winners of the $7500 Cash Raffle will be drawn at this event. Raffle tickets are $100 each and only 200 tickets will be sold. Tickets are on sale now. Great chances of winning! You need NOT be present to win. Admission to this event is FREE. Your purchase of raffle tickets and auction items will support the Cohasset Working Dog Foundation's mission of providing for the needs of K-9 Erik, including the establishment of an emergency veterinary fund. It is our hope that this inaugural event will put the K-9 program on solid footing and provide well for Erik's care and the equipment he needs to serve our community. For more information or to purchase tickets for the cash raffle, email: info@cohassetworkingdog.org.

Healthcare forum

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will present its first forum of the 2012 season on Wednesday, March 7 at 7 p.m. in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library. David Shactman, formerly a senior fellow in Health Policy at the Heller School, Brandeis University, will present his book, "Power, Politics and Universal Health Care." His co-writer, internationally recognized expert on health care, Dr. Stuart Altman, was healthcare advisor to five presidents from Nixon to Obama, and is the Sol C. Chaikin Professor of National Health Policy at the Heller School at Brandeis University. As with all Cohasset Democratic Town Committee forums there is no charge for admission. All are most welcome to attend! Shactman's book will be available to purchase.

On stage

The Inly Players Theater is pleased to present the musical "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory" at Inly School's Meehan Family Artsbarn for its last weekend, March 3 & 4. 'EVENING TO REMEMBER'

Event benefits two non-profits

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

Fashion, food, cocktails and dancing are all a part of an "Evening to Remember," on Saturday, March 10th, from 7-11 p.m. at Atlantica Restaurant. The event is sponsored by Lemon Lime Salons and Ports & Company and will benefit Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization — serving cancer patients on the South Shore, in addition to raising funds for the Our World Global Discovery Museum in Cohasset.

This fundraiser and celebration will feature hors d'oeuvres, cocktails, and both a Live and silent auction with some fantastic prizes. WCVB-TV's Susan Wornick will serve as the evening's host and auctioneer. A highlight of the event will be a Ports & Company Fashion Show.

"We're really excited about the new Spring Fashions. There's something for everyone. Lots of colors and the neutrals are looking fabulous and sophisticated," says Lisa Lynch, Owner of Ports & Company. "It's great to do this show for a cause in my own neighborhood. The community has been so good to me, it's nice to have a chance to give back."

For years, Adrian Morris, owner of Lemon Lime Salons, has helped support Learn Live Love Cancer Organization in memory of his dear friend Karen Petrillo. Petrillo succumbed to cancer at age 47. Because of Morris and his unwavering dedication to keeping Petrillo's compassionate spirit alive, Learn Live Love has been able to donate much needed funds to local patients dealing with cancer....truly something to celebrate.

"It's been a privilege to work with Adrian for the last several years," says Rosemary Lonborg of Learn Live Love. "It's largely due to his encouragement and enormous support, that we've been able to lend financial assistance to women and families who deal with the everyday, and sometimes, overlooked expenses of having cancer."

WCVB-TV's Susan Wornick will serve as the evening's host and auctioneer. Wornick, who grew up in "Metrowest" is very much looking forward to coming to the South Shore for this fundraiser.

"I love the spirit of the South Shore," she says, "It's a great area where you repeatedly see examples of people working together helping other people. There is nothing more important than that."

This year, Morris joined forces with Lisa Lynch, owner of Ports & Company, and together the two hope to raise thousands of dollars and awareness of these two worthy non-profit organizations, which directly benefit people in Cohasset, Scituate and surrounding towns.

It shows that local business owners, with community support, can help small charities to have a BIG impact.

High Fashion from Ports & Co. will be highlight of the evening. Here Angela Goosen of Hingham models.

Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum was founded in 2001. The Museum is an educational, and social learning center for children ages 1-8. For toddlers and younger children, there are playing stations that encourage imagination & pretend play, and displays to promote learning. All ages enjoy the museum's newest addition, The Ship, along with a theatre area and the outdoor playground.

Learn Live Love helps women and families who have been affected by cancer by providing basic services including funding for everything from wigs to help with the mortgage. The charity was founded in 2005 when Scituate resident Pam Ahl was diagnosed at age 40, after her first routine mammogram. Learn Live Love is run by Ahl and fellow Scituate residents, Rosemary Lonborg and Amy Webber Ferrie. Webber, then age 42 lost her husband, Paul to cancer after an 8-month battle. Lonborg lost her mother to breast cancer and worked at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute for more than 20 years.

When asked why she wanted to be part of this fundraiser and if her life has been affected by cancer in some way, Wornick's response was, "haven't we all been affected by cancer?"

Gather friends and family and come to this March 10th event. There are no tickets and no admission fee, however, donations will graciously be accepted at the door. Call 781-383-6663 or visit lemonlimesalon.com for an event that will truly be "An Evening to Remember."

ON THE GREEN BEAT

High school hosts Recycled 'pARTS' night

ERIN DALE

One man's trash is another's treasure, as the saying goes. Putting those words into practice is Cohasset High School art teacher Nina Berkowitz.

For the past decade, Berkowitz has organized a special exhibition and contest for Cohasset High School art students called "Eat Your Art." While the long-running event saw students creating edible art out of food (and subsequently devouring their creations once judging commenced), Berkowitz decided that this was the year to start switching things up.

This year will mark Cohasset High's first-ever "Recycled pARTS" night on March 7 at 6 p.m.

Going with a green theme, the art teacher said, "is a sign of the times."

After years of having fun with food, Berkowitz said that she wanted to be more mindful of waste. "Kids were making things out of food and it would just get thrown away at the end," she said. "This seems like a good turn-around."

Berkowitz's art students are getting onboard, crafting art out of all kinds of recycled, recyclable and found materials.

"A lot of kids are making things out of broken telephones, computer parts, old shoes, and wine corks. Another group of kids are doing things out of cans, paper, broken glass, things that are recyclable but no longer useable," said Berkowitz. "I'm making sure and keep pushing that if they're looking for cups, they don't go buying new set of cups. I even said, 'Don't go to Salvation Army and buy an old box — you've got to find it."

The point, said the art teacher, is to create eco-friendly art without spending a penny: "The idea is to save things from being wasted."

Participating students can enter their creations in two different categories: art made from objects that were heading to the landfill and art made from objects that are recyclable.

The contest is open to any and all artist "from age four to 104," said Berkowitz. There will be two prizes available for every age group; prizes are being donated from local merchants and restaurants.

While Berkowitz does not yet know how many Cohasseters will turn up with recycled art to showcase, she said that so far, "We've got most of the high school kids participating — almost every kid who takes an art class is doing something."

The art teacher said that there could be a few last-minute entries as well. "I'm hoping it's big! The high school kids are super-into it, which I'm really excited about."

While getting a chance to express themselves creatively, students are also getting a lesson in reducing waste.

"The concept behind the whole thing is to save things from going in the landfill," said Berkowitz, who added that she tries "to be observant of what I'm wasting."

Berkowitz's art students are getting onboard, crafting art out of all kinds of recycled, recyclable and found materials.

A good takeaway for the eco-friendly artists and attendees of what will possibly become an annual recycled art event? "Do a little at a time."

A Mariner photographer will be there next Wednesday night to capture all the fun, so look for photos in next week's paper!

Those interested in exhibiting should contact Berkowitz directly: nberkowitz@cohasset-k12.org or 781-383-6100.

DeRensis reappointed to state commission

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis and other LGAC members were administered the oath of office by Lieutenant Governor Timothy Murray. COURTESY PHOTO

Paul DeRensis, who serves as Cohasset Town Counsel, has been reappointed by Governor Deval Patrick to a fourth term as a member of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Local Government Advisory Commission (LGAC).

The LGAC meets regularly throughout the year with Governor Patrick and Lt. Governor Timothy Murray, and senior members of the administration to discuss issues facing cities and towns.

DeRensis and other LGAC members were administered the oath of office by Lieutenant Governor Timothy Murray on Tuesday, Feb. 14 in the Governor's Executive Offices in the State House, Boston.

"I am honored by the opportunity to serve as a member of this important Commission, and will work with the Committee members to offer ideas and input to the Governor and his team that will help all of the communities of Massachusetts," said DeRensis.

DeRensis, a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School, has been serving as Cohasset's Town Counsel since 1996. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

According to state law, LGAC "shall consider any matter germane to municipal government and shall file its recommendations, if any, from time to time, with the clerks of the senate and the house of representatives together with drafts of legislation, if any, necessary to carry its recommendations into effect. The commission shall have the following responsibilities:

- to review and analyze proposed legislation and regulatory changes from the point of view of municipal government and present such point of view to the governor, his executive secretaries and to the general court;
- to act as an independent advocate for the interests of local governments in their relations with state and federal governments;
- to advise officials of the commonwealth and the federal government on the needs of local governments, assist in mobilizing state and federal resources to deal with problems of local governments, provide coordinating support to agencies responsible for administering federal, state and local programs, and promote legislative and administrative proposals reflecting the interests of local governments;
- to establish, from time to time, study committees or task forces to consider issues pertaining to local government in detail and to present the results of those considerations to the governor, the secretaries of his executive offices and to the general court;
- to meet monthly with the governor and at such other times as the chairperson deems necessary;
- to meet quarterly with the legislative leadership, and at such other times as may be necessary;
- to promulgate rules and regulations governing its procedures...and
- to perform such other like services as the commission shall decide upon."

Following the swearing-in ceremony, DeRensis and other members of the LGAC held their first meeting of the year, meeting with senior members of the Patrick-Murray Administration to discuss fiscal 2013 budgetary issues.

Cohasset rowers continue sport in college

CMI program starts March 26

By Betts Murray
CMI Program Director

What happens when you take sturdy rowing boats, youthful enthusiasm, physical challenge and add water? You get something much greater than the parts: invaluable experiences, life lessons and fun too! New rowers are encouraged to learn to row at Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) in the spring youth rowing program beginning March 26.

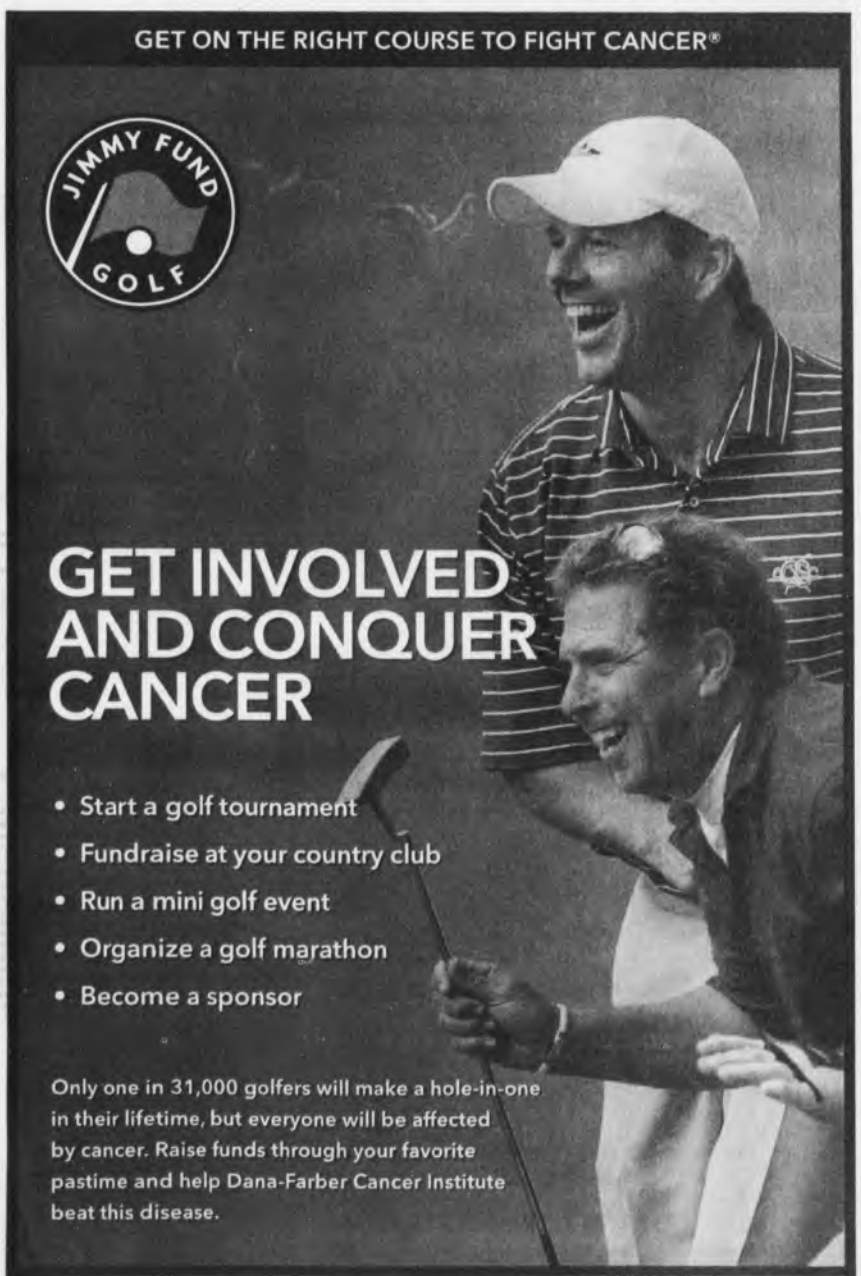
CMI has been teaching youth (and adults) how to row for about 15 years. CHS teacher Jack Buckley started the program in the late 1990s and since that time scores of youth have learned to row at CMI. Succeeding Jack as the Program Director for CMI Youth Rowing is a similarly highly experienced coach and rower himself, John Liffman.

Some of those teens that learned to row with Jack or John have stayed with CMI and taught others how to row, serving as coach/cox'ns (short for coxswain, the one who steers the boat). Several have continued to row in college; three who are quoted here are rowing now with their college crews. (By the way, because a crew is by definition a team, rowing as one unit and only as strong as they row together, one does not use the phrase "crew team" to describe being on a rowing team. It is simply a crew.)

When asked about their experiences rowing with CMI, these young rowers expressed themselves eloquently. Their words tell the story far better than this writer can. An interesting note: for all of the college students who are quoted here, each one a great rower, crew was brand new to them when they started at CMI.

CMI crews row in a four-oared boat called a Mainville '26, named after the builder Chuck Mainville, well-suited to the sometimes choppy waters of Massachusetts Bay. While these boats have sliding seats for the four rowers, they are a distant cousin to the fragile and sleek rowing shells used by competitive college and high school programs. The fact that the CMI rowers have found their way to college varsity boats is testament to what they gained rowing at CMI. For many CMI rowers, crew was or is their only high school sport, or the first time they were successful at a sport. They found their way to the CMI team and gained the skills, discipline and determination to be successful rowing at CMI and in many cases to make it in the highly competitive college crew arena.

Competing against 40 other novice rowers last fall, Tara Goodwin, CHS '11, was the only first year student to make the University of Vermont varsity crew. She credits her "experience and support from CMI" for this accomplishment. College rowing is intense. Tara says, "I am still not used to getting up at 5:15 in the off season and 4:15 in the fall and spring but, when the team is finally "swinging together" reaching top speeds going down the Lamoille River, it's worth it."



James Earle rows on the varsity crew at UMass-Amherst where he is a sophomore majoring in Biochemistry and Political Science. In James' words: "Crew has been one of the most physically demanding activities I have ever engaged in. Though on many occasions I have questioned my sanity in pushing myself so close to the limits of pain and exhaustion while erging [rowing on an ergometer, a rowing machine] or during a race, I am consistently reminded of the value that such experience gives me. Fatigue has no meaning after a certain point, and all that is left is the steely resolve to focus and pull harder. Since I started as a freshman in high school at CMI, I have been developing not just strength and technique but also a mindset of determination. When I went to UMass and began rowing there, I felt extremely well prepared for the rigors of rowing on a college crew. Rowing [at college] is an incredibly difficult sport, one that takes a level of commitment and hard work nearly unparalleled by any other. But it is also one of the most rewarding, because as a team we are capable of accomplishing feats of power and endurance far beyond what we could have thought possible on our own."

Jackson Dean, CHS '10, is a sophomore at Franklin Pierce University. He, like James and Tara, is rowing on his college team in the varsity boat. "I am honored to be a part of this team. It has given me a chance to become a leader both on and off the water and like the CMI experience, it has truly been rewarding."

Emily Toomey , CHS 2011 valedictorian, is a first-year student at Brown University, where she is studying biomedical engineering. She is not rowing on Brown's Division I crew, but lessons learned at CMI must certainly be relevant as she makes her way through Brown's highly rigorous engineering program. "If there is one central principle I learned from CMI, it would be the self-discipline required in perseverance. Besides simply the physical exertion, rowing requires the determination to constantly reexamine one's technical capabilities and to have the courage to admit that there is always an area of improvement. At the end of the day, no one is ever a perfect oarsman because whether it's the weather conditions, exhaustion, or crew dynamics, there is a continuous source of unpredictability that brings the need to change and adapt over and over again. And that's what makes rowing so great. You learn to accept that, although perfection is never attainable, it is always possible to improve and work through obstacles."

We will be welcoming back James, Jackson, Emily and Tara, and Andrew Fewsmith, as coaches at CMI this summer. Ask them or current rowers current about the tradition of birthday cakes at the boathouse and other fun times.

CMI youth rowing starts in March with shore training in late March and rowing on the water starting in late April. Students currently in eighth grade or high school may row in the spring; students entering 8th grade in September and higher may start in the summer. In the spring, each student rows two afternoons/week. The fee for the spring season (March 26-June 14) is $250. There will be an informational meeting at CHS on Wednesday, March 7 at 2:15 for anyone interested in rowing this spring.

MARK YOUR CALENDAR

State of Harbor Forum II is April 12

CSCR, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, will be hosting Cohasset's second State of the Harbor Forum at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 12, at Bancroft Hall (Lightkeepers Residence). The event is sponsored by Cohasset Rotary and is free to the public.

The second State of The Harbor (SOTH) public forum will feature research conducted by CSCR students and staff that speaks directly to the clear consensus voiced by the 75 residents who attended SOTH I- that Cohasset Harbor is suffering continued deterioration in ecosystem health because the inner Cove inadequately "flushes out" the increasing volume of fresh water coming into the Cove. New, ground-breaking research will also be presented regarding two other topics of great interest to all those who care deeply about maintaining a healthy and vibrant harbor: the high enterococci bacteria counts in the Harbor that often lead the Board of Health to "close" Bassing Beach to swimmers; and the mysterious foam that fouls boats at the waterline, and turns the harbor into anything but the picture of health.

Mark the date on your calendar for an important discussion among town leaders, residents, scientists, and elected officials as we debate mitigation strategies and next steps designed to protect and nurture Cohasset Harbor, one of the town's most precious resources.

OUR VIEW

Sign of the times

Efforts to be a kinder, gentler society are all around us. About a year ago the Cohasset Coalition for a Caring Community kicked off a pledge drive to raise consciousness in Cohasset on the issue of bullying. The pledge asked for a commitment to promote respect for differences and the basic rights and dignity of all.

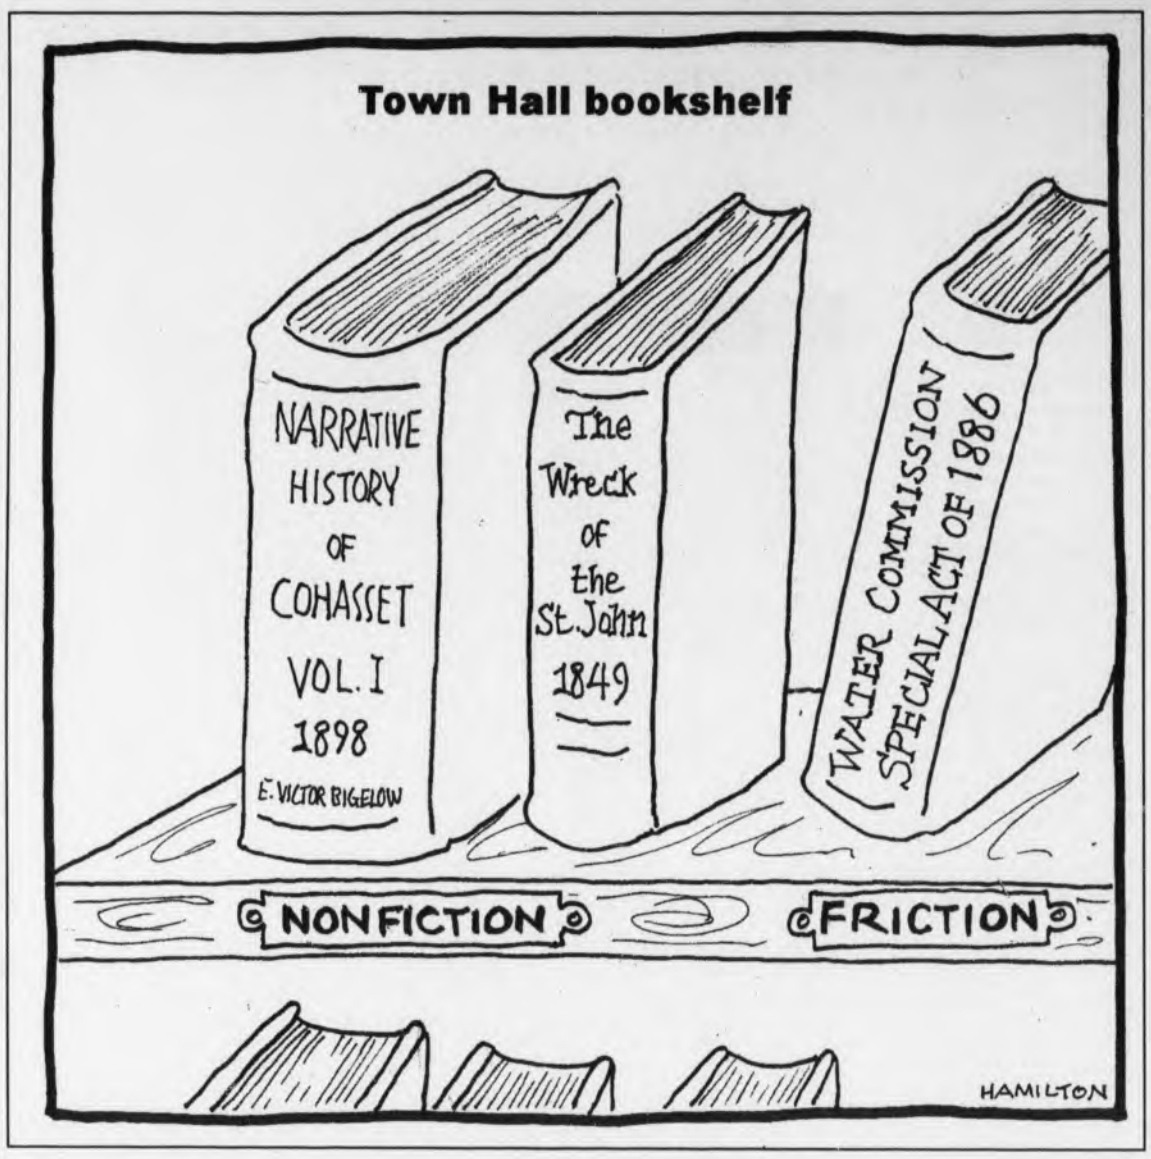
This week, selectmen adopted a Code of Civility for civil discourse, civility and standards. Apparently other towns have adopted similar codes. These codes are also common in private companies.

Adoption of policies that strive to provide a framework for ethical standards can certainly do no harm and should yield positive results.

But it still begs the question: how did we get here? The answer goes way beyond recent events in Cohasset where some town officials have not exhibited restraint or civility – but to the crass nature of our society as a whole.

Being polite, showing respect for our fellowman and the days when a man's word was sealed with a simple handshake have all but disappeared.

When did character go out of style?



As you may know, out of the Cohasset Mariner office we also edit the Hingham Journal. The Journal debuted back in 1827. In researching a story, editor Mary Ford asked a local historian about editor/publisher/town clerk Fred Miller who built the building where the Journal office is located in Hingham Square in 1899 and served as editor exactly 100 years before Ford.

The historian was quick to point out that the phrase "conflict of interest" did not really exist back then, that no one would have questioned Miller's ethics and the fact that he could be editor, publisher and town clerk at the same time. He was a town leader. His honesty and character – like others of his era – were above reproach.

The "good old days" were far from perfect. Racial and religious prejudices existed leading to terrible wars and suffering. No one wants to go back to those times.

But character and respect for others as human beings should be constant. Doing the right thing and knowing what is right should be values that were drummed into us by our parents and grandparents. Integrity should be all around us.

It is too bad that today a Code of Ethics is needed as a reminder to maintain high standards for those with whom we place our trust.

LETTER

Memo to selectmen: Things to do

• Hire a Town Treasurer — department costs too much with extra staffing and reduce all the special persons that are working.

• Five-year plan by the Capital Budget Committee — yearly recommendations.

• Further work on the water/sewer departments under the BOS as proposed by the special audit last year.

• Establish town operation of water plant perhaps with Hingham as a joint venture.

• Where is the survey for Senior Center needs? It was voted at fall Town Meeting with $15,000 to implement.

• We need to see what seniors want before we build a center

• Reinstate School Facilities and Sidewalk committees. There's a need for both

• Finally reinstate the Town Manager to complete this work along with the regular function of the town

COMMENTARY

Concerns about ethics

MIKE COUGHLIN

As my wife and I approach the March 13, hearing on my fate, perhaps the most important concern for the citizens of Cohasset is the ethical underpinnings of the town.

The cornerstone of the people's confidence in their governmental institutions is their faith in official's adherence to the highest standards of ethical conduct. Whether it is possible conflicts of interest surrounding the issuance of a water RFP or questionable efforts to influence the outcome of a regulatory proceeding, a cloud has been cast over Cohasset. Regardless of my fate on March 13, for Cohasset to go forward, the citizens must demand that questionable actions, conflicts and perceptions cease.

Cohasset officials must fully embrace the underlying principle of democracy that power lies with the people and not in the hands of a select few. There has to be renewed respect for the Open Meeting Law so that government decisions are not made in the shadows or on the computer screens of that select few. There needs to be acknowledgement that even the perception of a financial conflict undermines the integrity of any governmental decision and should be openly and immediately addressed. There also needs to acceptance of the fact that a regulatory process designed to protect our environmental resources for all should not be tainted by the actions of a few.

As Town Manager I have tried to ask the tough questions on these issues. My struggle is perhaps exemplified when one of the Selectmen blurted out at a meeting that he didn't care about the law. This best sums up the ethical battleground upon which we now struggle. As my over 5,000 e-mails over the past six months will help show, certain officials routinely demonstrated contempt for the Open Meeting Law, warnings from the Town Attorney regarding various laws were often demeaned and requests for legal advice on how to deal with ethical conflicts denied.

With respect to the BOS action on my employment, both sides ethically entered into a contract, which stated that from time to time the Selectmen would meet with me to discuss goals and objectives and my progress towards achieving them. They never did. In a letter the editor just days before the executive session on February 7th to which I had no advance warning, the chairman of the Board described me in the Cohasset Mariner as the "terrific new town manager." Under any concept of ethics — What changed so fast and so dramatically to change me from "terrific" to terminated?

As I have found throughout my entire career, putting principle above special interests is always difficult but the viability of democracy in any small town depends on their public officials coming to grips with this so basic of concepts. To that end, since my suspension, in the shops and restaurants and on the street corners, countless citizens have expressed their support. My wife and I are praying on March 13 that the will of a select few will be defeated by the will of the people of Cohasset.

Editor's note: Town Manager Mike Coughlin has been suspended with pay pending further action by the selectmen under the Cohasset Town Manager Act.

COMMENTARY

Can't have it both ways

PETER DECAPRIO

In his commentary (published Feb. 17), Mike Coughlin again twisted facts to suit his agenda. He claims Aquarion's contract in Elizabeth City, N.J. was used as the basis for our new operator's contract. He knows this is untrue. We used many concession contracts as examples, including United Water's contract in Bayonne, N.J. and a few that American Water has scattered around. Mr. Coughlin knows this because I sent him the Bayonne contract on Sept. 30, and copied town counsel and Mark Brennan, head of the extra-legal Operations Department, on the same email.

Furthermore, on Oct. 22, I sent Coughlin and Brennan an email explaining that concessions from Veolia Water existed in the following local communities: Lynn, Brockton, Plymouth, Taunton, New Bedford, Leominster, and Westborough. On Oct. 24, Mr. Coughlin reached out to Plymouth's town manager to enquire of their experience. Even though he tried to prevent me from contacting the Plymouth people directly, we managed to get that contract.

Mr. Coughlin likes to complain at politically opportune times about our RFP process. In doing so, he either forgets or doesn't wish the townspeople to know that it was at the suggestion of an engineering firm surfaced by his Director of Operations that the process has unfolded as it has.

Mr. Brennan reached out to Vine/GZA, a local engineering firm but one completely unknown to me, and explained that we were planning on the following: issuing another five-year contract similar to the one we have today, issuing a contract just for plant operations with distribution taken in-house, taking all operations in house, or issuing a long term concession contract for plant and distribution operations.

On Oct. 3, Vine sent the following: "While I am certain the Town can successfully implement any of the options being considered, points the Town may want consider while deciding how to proceed are presented below. Issuing a single RFP for multiple options, or multiple RFP's for differing options, introduces significant complexity to the evaluation of proposals. Further, prospective respondents could potentially be concerned about uncertainties surrounding the award and this concern could be reflected in the cost proposals. Finally, the time required to evaluate proposals and make an award could increase significantly if bodies other than the awarding authority (Water Commission) must act or deliberate for an award to be possible (Board of Selectmen, Town Meeting, etc.). . .we recommend that the Town evaluate the considered options and select one prior to moving forward."

So, we took the free advice offered by an engineer of Mr. Coughlin's choosing, and simplified the process as they suggested. And now Mr. Coughlin wants to gripe about it. He should talk with his engineer instead. Those bad people even suggested the water department make the decision. Shame on them. The plain fact is that our RFP looks nothing like the other concession contracts we examined for one obvious reason: our situation is unique and required a customized approach.

Only one day after Mr. Coughlin submitted his complaint, the state Inspector General approved our RFP and the process under which it was conducted; so much for the veracity of his concerns. Mr. Coughlin's only hope at this point is to shape the debate regarding his fate and prevent as many people as possible from hearing the truth of his actions. Were he as interested in protecting the taxpayers to the extent he has claimed, he would just go away.

Peter DeCaprio is chairman of the Cohasset Water Commission.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Is it time yet?

JON BELBER

Consider the growing conditions that lie ahead of us this March and the rest of spring.

When can I start my seeds? Peas on St. Patrick's Day? When can I turn the soil and work the ground? These questions spill out to me from eager kindergartners and adults alike. It has been mild this winter, so it is hard to say no. Though warmth has prevailed for much of this season, there has been a fair share of below freezing days and nights, one great opportunity to sled and plenty of killing frosts to harden the ground and even slow down that healthy, hardy kale.

There is an urge to think spring – to build a birdhouse in anticipation of the returning flights, to push up the growing season, as there is an urge to extend the season come October. So much depends upon a seed, the weather, the soil and its temperature in late winter, here on the South Shore by the ocean. The spring equinox is about 21 days away.

In a plastic hoop house, warmed by the sun and a wood stove when needed (with wood from our fallen trees), the farmers at Holly Hill have sown the first seeds. About 10 trays of allium seeds are ready to grow. Onions, shallots and leeks rest snug in trays, with a fluffy potting soil. There is an extra canopy of plastic balanced on a 2 x 4 frame, providing condensation and extra warmth. These allium seeds in their trays are also resting on heat pads, to provide warmth from below. Onion seedlings take a long time to get established and it will be July before a fresh, green onion, with its shoulders sticking out of the ground can be harvested and added to a salad or stored to dry and last longer for winter use.

The seed sowing can begin now, with these seeds, in a controlled environment. The farmer can observe, several times a day, and note the germination and growth of the seedlings, that resemble blades of grass. A home gardener can also set seedlings in a windowsill or in a basement with grow lights. School kids, too, are eager to start seeds on the counters by south facing windows and just need to establish the same, well-monitored growing space with good healthy soil, the right amount of water and plenty of sunlight.

The outside garden bed and farm row create different challenges. Sugar snap peas traditionally can be sown directly in the ground on St. Patrick's Day, March 17th. But if there is a recent frost or snow, then heeling in these hardy seeds or spinach for that matter depends greatly on the soil. It is important to consider what that seed needs to grow, survive and eventually produce a pea pod, nutrient rich green leaf or a ripe fresh tomato in August.

Consider the growing conditions that lie ahead of us this March and the rest of spring. There will be bright sunny days, the possibility of a random snow shower, the chance that April rain may be constant and cruel and that we now have a sunrise starting about 6:25 a.m. and a sunset ending the day at 5:30 p.m. Long light, new growth and the hope for spring seeds. Slowly and with careful planning, it is time, one can begin again.

HEALTH NOTES

Maintaining good health habits

STEVE BOBO

To prevent high blood pressure and cholesterol, obtain a blood pressure cuff, and learn to use it periodically. If you discern a substantial change in readings, consult the Health Nurse at Town Hall.

Use it or Lose it — virtually every element of sentient activity requires continued maintenance to ensure its effectiveness, just as inanimate objects require continued maintenance to ensure their utility. As things are used, they wear and require refurbishing. So too do sentient beings; particularly people, require exercise — both mental and physical, as we go through life pursuing our respective activities. Although good health habits can't ward off all illnesses, they go a long way toward preventing many major illnesses, such as heart disease and stroke. A study in the December 1, 1999, issue of JAMA reports that men and women who are at low risk in 3 major risk factors (good levels of cholesterol, normal blood pressure, and not smoking) were much less likely to die from stroke or heart disease, compared to those who had one or more of the risk factors for those conditions. People with low risk factors also had longer life expectancies.

Eat Healthy — A diet low in fat, with high fiber; having at least five servings of fruits and vegetables helps to prevent many major illnesses; including many forms of cancer and diabetes. To maintain a healthy weight, weigh yourself at least twice a week and cut your diet if you take on more than five pounds between four measurements. Avoid, or at least curtail sweets and candy in favor of fruits and naturally sweet juices. Try to tend toward low fat, high protein foods with anything you eat.

Maintain a healthy weight consistent with your activities. To prevent high blood pressure and cholesterol, obtain a blood pressure cuff, and learn to use it periodically. If you discern a substantial change in readings, consult the Health Nurse at Town Hall. Or even better, visit her periodically; say once a month. Maintain a record of your visit and anything she gives in the way of advice. Avoid illegal drugs and if you use alcohol do so in moderation..

Aging — Aging involves many seemingly insignificant changes, which can be caused by other equally seemingly insignificant factors. It amounts to a gradual degradation of literally millions of different components which make up the organism that is a human being.

What's to be done? Most of us have reached some accommodation with fate and take popular advice about seeing the doctor at some fixed period and essentially painting the iron before the rust sets in. But as people grow, and science churns out ever better solutions to living longer or better or less painfully, we are beset by advice good and bad from all sorts of sources. For almost every ailment, there is an expert. There is a tendency to try to find cures of our ailments from the welter of information, which bombards us each day. Particularly, since it's frequently sorted, classified and digested for us as in the internet. It's easy to collect data from all sorts of sources, which we can seemingly apply to our ills and find solutions.

With all the authorities giving advice, there is the tendency to take the information and consider one's self an expert. Dear friends, it takes more than information to become an expert. The difference between a holistic practitioner and a doctor is many years of formal study and even more years of studying those who have the ailment, which the healer seeks to cure. Anecdotes are not proof. Proof is hundreds of cases, carefully analyzed and considered. So, the advice is to stick with the doctor whom you trust. He has the years of study and experience that no web page can provide.

Incontinence and Health — The loss of bladder control is a common, increasing, often embarrassing problem as one ages. Severity of urinary incontinence ranges from occasionally leaking urine when you cough or sneeze to having an urge to urinate that's so sudden and strong you don't get to a toilet in time. If urinary incontinence affects your day-to-day activities, don't hesitate to see your doctor. In most cases, simple lifestyle changes or medical treatment can ease your discomfort. If you're not near your pill supply, and you've been used to a fixed time for every pill, take enough pills with you to take at your regular time.

FOR THE RECORD

Just push play for video

GREGORY MATHIS

There are many ways to tell a story.

Journalists working for newspapers over the years, before the Internet was invented, relied on the written word. That involved interviewing sources and obtaining information before returning to the office to craft an article that would convey the many aspects of the story.

Photojournalists continue to tell stories through their photographs. As the saying goes, a picture is worth 1,000 words.

If that's true, how many words are a video worth?

In this new age of multimedia journalism, a story can and should be told in many ways.

As the media business has evolved over the past decade, newspaper reporters and editors have had to evolve with it. While a decade may seem like a long time, to veteran journalists on the front line, the changes on the digital side have come at a rapid-fire pace.

A well-written story can still stand on its own, in print and online. A well-written story accompanied by great photography still creates a compelling piece for newspaper readers as well as those viewing the package online.

But we know our online audience craves and demands more.

Enter video.

Rewind a couple of years back and you'll remember video being more prevalent on your Wicked Local website. We equipped our journalists with point-and-shoot cameras and asked them to shoot local video to accompany stories. We got a little ahead of ourselves in some ways in that we didn't have a video player on our website and had to host the videos on YouTube, which had its limitations for our purposes.

As it turned out, the time and effort that went into making and editing the local videos didn't add up to significant page views and we decided to focus our attention elsewhere, mainly photo galleries.

Fast forward to the present. Photo galleries have been hugely successful, generating significant web traffic over the last couple of years. We've also launched a video player on the website and have come up with a plan to be far more successful this time around.

Why video now, again?

For those who carry a smartphone or computer tablet, you know the reason. As Web audiences go mobile, we have to go mobile with them.

Granted, we're not going to top 1 million page views like some of the popular music videos on YouTube, or come close to the millions who enjoy watching cats run on treadmills or doing some of the silly things cats do.

While those videos are certainly entertaining, it's not what we do.

Adding video to the mix gives our journalists another tool in the storytelling toolbox. Since ramping up our local video production at the beginning of the year, we've added another layer to give readers a much more complete experience with a story.

Video conveys the immediacy, motion and emotion we're trying to write about or show in photographs. Why not incorporate video to deliver an even more powerful reader experience with a story?

We hope you agree and look forward to your feedback and suggestions for good local video.

TOWN FINANCES

Spending freeze put into effect

Milanoski reports $300,000 deficit

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Winter weather is back, and Town Hall is feeling the chill.

The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday to approve a spending freeze in town departments. Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, along with Finance Director Mary Gallagher, reported a structural deficit of over $300,000. The acting town manager also reported that the town's fiscal 2012 budget is 70 percent expended.

"We need to put the freeze in to rein in our costs for the remainder of the fiscal year; it's going to be a challenge," Milanoski said.

This freeze is on the town side of the budget and does not affect the schools. Milanoski wrote in a memo issued to all department heads, boards, commissions and officers on Tuesday that the school budget is on target. However, the superintendent is encouraged to continue her strong stance of reducing and saving district funds where possible."

Milanoski has been working as interim town manager for the past two weeks, following Town Manager Michael Coughlin's suspension with pay.

The Budget Planning Group, with members of the Capital Budget and Advisory Committees, recommended a level-funded budget for fiscal 2013 back in December, which Coughlin took issue with; he said that due to robust new growth (which the Department of Revenue certified at $693,000, according to Town Assessor Mary Quill), there was no need to level fund the budget.

The committee urged Coughlin to build up reserve and stabilization funds; the town manager still maintains that the town does not have to "build up reserve funds overnight; you can do so over time so that you don't erode present services."

Milanoski told the selectmen Tuesday that his goal is to present a stable, sustainable fiscal 2013 budget that continues to provide quality services to the townspeople. He also agreed with Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore and Capital Budget chairman Steve Gaumer that the new growth numbers should not be added into the operational budget, but rather put into reserve and stabilization funds.

What caused the deficit?

Milanoski chalked it up to overages in personnel costs, including employee overtime, mid-year contractual raises, and administration and legal fees.

Both the Police and Fire departments have expended a lot of overtime, which the Mariner has previously reported. Milanoski said that due to anomalies the public safety chiefs can't plan for, such as injuries and sick leave, the departments should not be chastised for issues that are beyond their control. The acting town manager said that there are some things they can control, and that he is working with both chiefs to come up with solutions.

Milanoski has appointed a special committee consisting of three members of the Governance Committee to help him and the chiefs (Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca) brainstorm overtime solutions. These members are Trish Morse, George Charmillard and Ralph Dormitzer.

"Both chiefs are happy to work with me and these people to come up with solutions and welcome the involvement," said Milanoski.

The acting town manager also told the selectmen Tuesday that the numbers presented were not completely finalized; they were 98 percent correct.

"Between now and next week, we're waiting to get the insurance numbers and finalize indirect rates between water and sewer," Milanoski said Wednesday. "But the numbers from last night were very accurate."

The critical takeaway for the town, said Milanoski, is this: "We're creating a stabilized budget based on a five-year forecast on what we can afford with known revenue projections. In other words, we're going to live within our means. We're projecting a stabilized and sustainable budget that will provide the services the townspeople expect today, and hopefully enhance some of those."

A matter of priority

Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street spoke up during the meeting to tell the selectmen that they should ask the townspeople what their priorities are; perhaps Cohasset citizens don't mind paying higher rates in order to take advantage of services. She encouraged the selectmen to poll the public. She also said it wasn't the first time the town had been in a freeze; it happens frequently.

"We shouldn't be shocked over a structural deficit," said MacCarthy. "As a town, we started talking about this five, six, eight years ago; it's nothing new... We have to figure it out and ask the townspeople what they want. You might be surprised."

Gaumer agreed with MacCarthy that the public should decide what its priorities are. "It brings us to the heart of the conversation," he said of MacCarthy's comment. "We have an opportunity for the town to take a look at things, see what we prioritize, and do that more efficiently."

Assistant to the town manager Jennifer Oram confirmed after the meeting that the last time a spending freeze was ordered was during Lombard's stint as interim town manager.

Milanoski also told the selectmen that one of his priorities is the see Cohasset secure an Aaa bond credit rating, the highest available. The board approved Milanoski's recommendation to hire a new auditor to come in and asses the town's finances, which is customary to do every so often; Cohasset hasn't done so in years, according to the selectmen.

Milanoski believes that building up reserve and stabilization funds will help the town secure this rating. The town currently has an "Aa2" bond rating, which Gaumer said is still high.

Change in location

The selectmen met in the superintendent's office rather than Town Hall on Tuesday night; this was to take advantage of the school's technology so that Milanoski could use a laptop and overhead to present the budget information while the meeting was being broadcast.

Selectman Paul Carlson said that in all his years on the board of selectmen, this was the most comprehensive financial presentation he had seen.

Carr said Wednesday that he liked the location change and would like for the selectmen to switch things up now and then, as long as they can continue to broadcast the meetings for the public.

Coughlin weighs in Suspended Town Manager Michael Coughlin gave his thoughts on the budget projections and spending freeze during a phone call Wednesday.

Coughlin said that he had been working on overtime solutions that have been abandoned since he is currently out of the office. "I'm concerned that the overtime plans I began have been suspended because the leadership to implement them is on suspension... That's one reason I hope that I will reinstated."

Coughlin added that he does not believe the town has a crisis. "They're trying to create panic where no panic is necessary. There were plans to deal with this in an organized fashion and numbers made sense."

Emails between Coughlin and accountant Eric Kinsherf, who has worked as interim finance director in Cohasset twice in the last year, revealed puzzlement over the numbers Milanoski and Gallagher presented on Tuesday. Coughlin told Kinsherf on Monday that Gallagher had released revised revenue estimates; Kinsherf replied that he couldn't see how the numbers "can be that different on the revenue side."

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski told the selectmen during Tuesday's meetings that the revenue numbers that had been released before "weren't the right numbers."

Milanoski sought to clear things up during a phone call Wednesday.

"When I came onboard 10 days ago, my first step in reviewing the fiscal year 2013 budget was to meet with the financial team, including Mary Quill and Mary Gallagher. I wanted to know what the revenue projections were for new growth. When they gave me what they had submitted earlier in the year, there was a discrepancy in what had been presented publicly. That's what we went forward with — their numbers specifically for new growth after we'd gone back and identified what the local receipts were."

Both Coughlin and Milanoski said they trust the numbers from the experts.

Coughlin said, "I would trust the numbers given by Eric Kinsherf, who came in and straightened out our financial mess, and [also] did it when [interim town manager] Steve Lombard was here last year."

Milanoski, meanwhile, said of the revenue estimates, "These are the numbers for revenue projections and new growth provided by the town assessor, who is a professionally trained person, and supported by the finance director."

He added that Kinsherf, who has been retained as a consultant to work on indirect rates with water and sewer, "is aware of what we're doing. We gave these revenue projections to the staff on Monday."

Water releases RFP

Commission goes out to bid for 10-year contract

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Water Commissioners Peter DeCaprio and Leonora Jenkins came before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday to discuss issuing a request for proposals for a new water contract. Cohasset Water's current contract with American Water expires on June 30. The commission has been working to issue multiple RFPs and select a new operator in time for the May 12 Town Meeting.

The RFP that was released on Monday, Feb. 17 is for a 10-year concessionaire contract, but the water commission is also working with their counsel on RFPs for in-house operations and shorter-term contracts.

DeCaprio said that he hopes companies will come out to bid for the contract. The water commission chairman said that bids are due by April 22, giving the commission until May 8 to make a decision and prepare an article for Town Meeting.

DeCaprio also announced that the water commission will hold a two-hour public forum on March 26 to discuss the future water contract.

The chairman would also like to nominate two citizens at large to serve on the operator selection committee, along with two of the water commissioners and one member each from the Board of Selectmen, Advisory and Capital Budget committees. The water commission is seeking volunteers who would like to serve as citizens at large and weigh in on the process. DeCaprio will be ex officio on the contract, so he will not be casting a vote on the operator.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said that DeCaprio did not need to step down from voting for any ethical reasons but chose to do so willingly, and should be commended for that.

While the water commission had previously discussed going out to bid for a 20-year concession contract during many public meetings, DeCaprio said that they had never committed the water company to a certain term length.

This is not the same RFP that town manager Michael Coughlin sent to the Inspector General's office for review; it is a newer version, the water commission told the selectmen.

DeCaprio explained in an email to the Mariner on Monday, "Our contract need was always driven by our cash flow model, and our model suggested in the end that we would be better off with a 10-year deal. We said publicly that concession contracts were typically 20-40 years in length, with 20 being the average, but we never said anything definitively about what our contract would look like prior to the RFP being finalized. Everyone, including Coughlin, jumped the gun and made assumptions. We looked at everything, including a 40-year deal. We thought 10 years was best for us. Our concession structure is radically different from any that we looked at in the market because Cohasset has a different form of municipal governance than most other municipalities in the U.S., and that needed to be accounted for.

"To begin with, we would like to hold rates steady over the life of the contract. Most other contracts had rate escalators built in. We didn't like that. The Cohasset water commission will always have control over the rate setting structure, as we always have, subject to Town Meeting vote, as it has always been.

"Secondly, we would like to retain control over capital expenditures, as to the absolute dollars we spend and the rate at which we spend it. Every other concession contract asked the operator to bid on a capital expenditure plan and turned over that responsibility to the operator. That added a level of complexity we didn't need, and we were not about to turn over responsibility for capital to anyone except the commission, the Capital Budget Committee and Town Meeting votes.

"Also, when operators are responsible for capital, they want as long a term as possible. We thought we'd get better pricing if we took capital out of the equation, so we are only asking operators to bid on our operations, period. In effect, we are asking for the operator to do exactly what has been done for the past 14 years. The only thing we are doing differently is the way we pay for those services. Instead of passing through all operating costs to us and marking up salaries, we are asking the operator to not mark up salaries at all, and to share in the risks of plant operations."

The selectmen thanked DeCaprio and Jenkins for their work on the RFP, and Jenkins said the DeCaprio deserved all the credit.

"He worked diligently for so many months to bring this to fruition," Jenkins said.

Water RFP Public Forum

On March 26th at the Middle/High School Auditorium, the Water Commission will be hosting an information session regarding our upcoming contract renewal.
The commission will be discussing all options for the water company, including the proposed concession contract, and the process leading up to a likely change in operators on June 30th. The forum will begin at 7p.m. and will include a short presentation followed by an extensive Q&A period. All are encouraged to attend.

Coughlin returns laptop, materials

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

After being suspended as Cohasset's town manager after only six months on the job, Michael Coughlin came under fire once more when town officials reported that Coughlin's town-issued laptop, along with several files, were missing from the town manager's office.

Coughlin was suspended with pay two weeks ago. The Board of Selectmen will seek to remove him without cause during a public hearing on March 13, during which Coughlin will also make his case, with his attorney Doug Louison, to keep his job.

Following his dismissal, Coughlin was ordered to turn in all of his town-issued materials, including his computer, cell phone and office keys, and to stay off of town-owned property. However, Coughlin still had his laptop, which his attorney stated was previously agreed upon by town counsel because the computer "contains important evidentiary materials."

Louison further told the Mariner in a phone call Wednesday that Coughlin had the right to hold onto his laptop for the time being.

"He has not been removed from office but is temporarily suspended — he hasn't been terminated. It wasn't as if he took anything; he just had [the laptop]. He was concerned with important emails and work product that was on it and concerned that it would be lost or tampered with. I sent a prior letter to [town counsel] Peter Berry and was assure that it would be conserved, and that was sufficient for me."

Louison wrote another letter to Berry, which was emailed on Tuesday, Feb. 28, that he hoped would be read and introduced into the public record during Tuesday night's selectmen meeting. The letter was mentioned but not read during the meeting, although the selectmen shared that Coughlin returned his laptop and other materials to Town Hall on Monday.

Coughlin's attorney wrote, however, that his client "was treated in a demeaning and insulting manner when he arrived at Town Hall in order, as instructed, to return the laptop. He was then summarily escorted out of the public building by the acting town manager as if he posed a risk to the public."

Selectmen chairman Ted Carr, who has said publicly that he considers himself a friend to Coughlin, said during Tuesday's meeting that he believed the letter originally issued to the town manager barring him from town premises should be revised in order to allow him access as a Cohasset citizen.

Berry said that they should clarify that Coughlin is not allowed in Town Hall to conduct business as town manager while he is under suspension.

Coughlin did not comment on the laptop issue, but referred the Mariner to Louison's letter. The town manager did say that he had heard he is now allowed back at Town Hall as a citizen, but that he and his attorney "had to fight for that one, too."

As to the public records that the selectmen also said had gone missing in the wake of Coughlin's dismissal, Louison wrote in his letter that "none of these documents or papers were original or Town property. Rather, they were either copies of public documents that Mr. Coughlin had worked on which make up his professional work product and history or were other training and education materials. As a professional attorney, in no way would Mr. Coughlin jeopardize the operations of the Town of Cohasset or remove anything inappropriately from his office."

Coughlin's attorney went on to write that while he felt his client was respectful of town property, he feels that the same courtesy has not been given to the removed town manager.

"When Mr. Coughlin was suspended from his position, he was promised that the integrity of his office and personal affects would be maintained. However, when he was in Town Hall, Mr. Coughlin observed his office to be open and unlocked."

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski has been working from the selectmen's desk since taking on the position two weeks ago, although he has been granted access to Coughlin's office as acting town manager.

Milanoski thanked Superintendent Barbara Cataldo during Tuesday's meeting for not only loaning the interim town manager a laptop to use, but for bringing it to Town Hall and configuring the computer's internet, email and printing capabilities herself.

When Milanoski found himself working as interim town manager without a computer, "I called Barbara and said, 'Can you help me? Do you have an extra laptop?' Within an hour, she was carrying a laptop over to my office and sat there and configured it, and said, 'There you go.' It was a problem I had and she came over and helped.'"

LETTER

Concerns over special status

Last Tuesday night the selectmen gave 'special employee' status to the Governance Committee. This grants privileges and lowers some of the ethical requirements.

I'm concerned for a couple of reasons. First, given what's going on in Town Hall these days I'd like the ethical requirements to be as high as possible.

Then, as of Tuesday afternoon, the Town Clerk had not received any appointments for the Governance Committee from the Board of Selectmen, the only authorized appointing authority. No members of the Governance Committee have been sworn in. The Town Clerk's office is unable to tell me who is on the Governance Committee.

How is it that a committee charged with looking into good governance has, itself, not been legally constituted? The BoS voted to ask the members of the Town Manager Selection Committee to be on the Governance Committee, presumably because they had done such a good job, which is more than a little ironic now.

It is my understanding that some did, some did not, and that new volunteers were recruited. However, they all have to be appointed to the new committee and sworn in for the new committee. Why hasn't this happened? Have the new members taken the state ethics test?

They've been meeting for months, posting properly and keeping minutes. They just don't exist procedurally. That's a problem for me.

And then I wonder why do they need 'special employee' status? This is something usually reserved for a professional, such as an attorney or engineer, who sits on a town body and would like to appear before other committees on behalf of clients.

One reason that seems, at least to me, to be obvious is that it somehow has something to do with the chair of the Governance Committee, now the Acting Town Manager and his present and future role in town government perhaps as a paid appointment.

Another is that 'special employees' can act as agents for private parties in connection with a matter of interest to the town. Could that have anything to do with Cat Dam where citizens, some of whom sit on the Governance Committee, have been lobbying to represent the town in meetings with MEPA and DEP?

This is just the latest in a series that cause me to ask: "What are they up to now?"

Buckley is running for GOP state committeeman

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements.

When it came time for Isabel Buckley to share her February vacation experience with the rest of her sixth grade class, her trips to supermarkets in Norwell and Marshfield differed widely from the ski resorts, stay at home soccer camps, and island destinations of her classmates. Isabel, along with her brothers and sisters, spent her vacation passing out campaign literature in order to help her father, Peter Buckley, in his bid to become the Republican State Committeeman representing the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, and Weymouth.

Since getting his name on the ballot late last year, her father has been speaking to local Republican Town Committees, community groups, and friends and neighbors about his vision for the Republican Party and the role of the state committee.

"Put simply, it is time for a change," said Peter in describing the current state of the party. "Massachusetts Republicans have only 4 out of 40 senate seats, 33 out of 160 rep seats, no constitutional office holders, no Congressmen in DC, and only 11 percent of the voters are registered Republicans."

Buckley first got involved in politics through the inspiration of Ray Shamie locally and Jack Kemp nationally in the late eighties and early nineties. According to Buckley, the current state of the party is roughly what it was back in 1987 when Ray Shamie took over the party. Buckley's prescription for change is the same plan that Shamie used to rebuild the party – build from the bottom up, focus on recruiting serious and competitive candidates, give those candidates proper support, and restore the image of the party.

"He didn't have any magic elixir," said Buckley. "His formula was a good plan and hard work." Shamie's efforts resulted in Republicans capturing three constitutional offices in 1990, two Congressional seats two years later, and 16 seats in the Massachusetts Senate.

"My goal as your State Committeeman is to take that Shamie model, make the party relevant again, and restore respectability to the party. My competitors in this race," said Buckley, "have support from local politicians and failed candidates. Most of my support comes from outsiders like me who are fed up and want to see change."

Cafferty running for third term as GOP Committeeman

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements.

A reception was held recently at Aisling Gallery, 229 Lincoln St., Hingham, for supporters of John Cafferty, in his campaign to serve a third four-year term as State Committeeman for the GOP8 region of the Republican Party.

Cafferty provided the leadership for the formation of the GOP8, forging a coalition for Republican activism and for encouraging a new generation of Republican office holders.

The GOP 8 region consists of the respective Republican Town Committees of Scituate, Hull, Marshfield, Duxbury, Norwell, Weymouth, Hingham, and Cohasset. These town committees support Republican candidates for statewide and local offices including such roles as School Committee, Planning Board, state representatives, and governor. The committees also engage citizens in advocating for conservative policies and legislation at various levels of government.

When Cafferty began serving as the Committeeman for this region, he wanted to get new people involved in the party and encourage more candidates to run as Republicans. Cafferty believes that Massachusetts would benefit from a more balanced two-party system ensuring rigorous debate over proposed legislation and spending policies. He believes that a one-party dominated state is not healthy for building and maintaining a thriving commonwealth.

Cafferty is proud of the work of the GOP8 and the entire Republican Party over the past decade. "We are finally starting to make a difference," says Cafferty. "I would like another four-year term to continue our efforts to help build a stronger Republican party in Southeastern Massachusetts and the state as a whole. We now have more seats in the Massachusetts House, we've elected Senator Scott Brown who has served Massachusetts well in the United States Senate, and we need to do more."

Cafferty joked with his supporters at the reception, "I'm not in this for the big bucks. There is no salary for Committeeman." he continued, "My reward is the camaraderie of all of you who support what we're trying to accomplish and most of all it's the feeling that we're doing the right thing to ensure a thriving commonwealth.

The election for Committeeman and other Republican Party offices is Tuesday, March 6, Republican Party Primary night. Eligible voters are those citizens who are Registered Republicans or Independents.

Harris running for GOP Committeeman

Editor's note: Candidates provide their own announcements.

With his wife, Paula, by his side, William "Bill" Harris recently announced his candidacy for Republican State Committeeman for the Plymouth Norfolk District to a group of supporters. The Plymouth Norfolk District includes the towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

Harris said, "For too long, the position of State Committee has been overlooked, and I believe it is the reason why the Republican Party has decayed in this state. If elected, I will focus on increasing the visibility of the party through grassroots activities, rebuilding our infrastructure and enhancing our message especially through social media. The Republican Party must prepare now for the future."

State Rep. Daniel Webster gave testimony to the political acumen of Harris. "No one understands the importance of politics at the grassroots level more than Bill Harris. He knows how to get candidates elected. I couldn't think of a better State Committeeman than Bill Harris."

Harris has been active in Republican politics for years and has worked with many candidates for office. Statewide candidate for State Auditor, Mary Z. Connaughton had this to say: "Bill Harris played an integral role in my campaign for State Auditor. He committed to supporting my candidacy early on and did a fabulous job organizing efforts for the April convention. Bill worked tirelessly and certainly understands the intricacies of managing people. He was instrumental at the grassroots level and I felt a great deal of comfort knowing he was involved. I am truly grateful for his support and the effect his positive energy had on my campaign. Bill's a winner!"

Harris closed his announcement with the following, "The Republican Party is the party of equality of opportunity for all and favoritism for none. We are the party of smaller government, personal responsibility, lower taxes, strong national defense and secure communities. I promise to strengthen these ideals."

The election will be held on March 6. It coincides with the presidential primary election.

The State Committee consists of one man and one woman, each an enrolled Republican from each senatorial district in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. Their role is to organize, advise and assist town committees and candidates in their district.

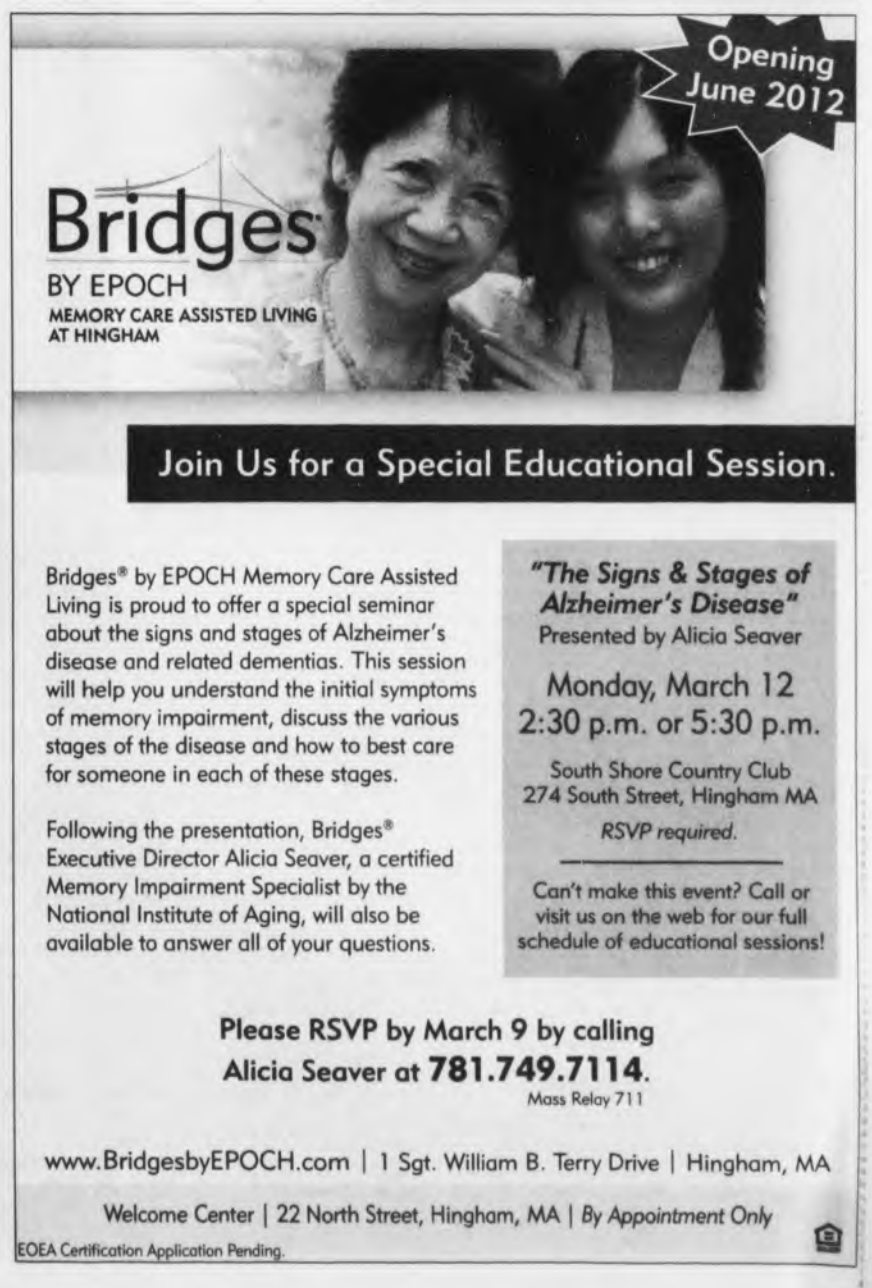
CDTC to host health care forum

DebbieCohasset Democratic Town Committee will present its first forum of the 2012 season at 7 p.m., on Wednesday, March 7, in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Library. David Shactman, formerly a senior fellow in health policy at the Heller School, Brandeis University, will present his book, "Power, Politics and Universal Health Care." His co-writer, Dr Stuart Altman, was healthcare advisor to five presidents from Nixon to Obama, and is the Sol C. Chaikin Professor of National Health Policy at the Heller School at Brandeis University.



"Power, Politics and Universal Health Care" is the third book on health care Shactman and Altman have co-authored. The book traces the history of health care reform in the United States through tales and stories.

Most Americans say they believe everyone should have health care coverage, although many Americans think that the Affordable Care Act should be repealed. But, there is a need for change in the way health care is delivered in the U S. In a 2010 study conducted at Columbia University, the U.S. ranked 49th in life expectancy, falling from a ranking of 24th in the same category according to the World Health Organization in 1999. In a 2004 report by the Center for Disease Control and Prevention the U.S. was ranked 29th in infant mortality; tied with Poland. Despite spending more for health care than any other industrialized country, the U.S. is the only one without universal coverage and has 50 million uninsured. Recent statistics from the U.S. Dept of Health and Human Services show that the United States spends on average $7,681 per person, considerably more than any other country in the world.

People are invited to listen to this health care expert and hear the story of the almost 100-year-long efforts, going back to Teddy Roosevelt, to develop universal health care, and find answers to questions regarding the development of the Affordable Care Act. The hope is that this forum will leave attendees with a better understanding of the 2010 Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and the benefits it mandates for equality in health care for all.

As with all Cohasset Democratic Town Committee forums there is no charge for admission. All are welcome to attend. Shactman's book will be available to purchase.

Cohasset boys dedicate tournament to sidelined coach

There was no official team meeting or talk about it, but there was no mistake that the Cohasset boys basketball team had a goal in mind – win one for the Skipper.

The Skipper in this case was Cohasset head coach Bo Ruggiero, who was seriously injured by an alleged drunk driver two weeks ago.

It was evident from the start as the No. 6 seeded Skippers (16-5) pressed and ran to a 22-10 lead after the first quarter of a 58-46 victory over No. 11 Blue Hills (11-10) at home on Wednesday in a first-round game of the MIAA Division 4 South Sectional Tournament.

The win set up a game against either No. 3 Westport (19-3) or No. 14 Marian (10-10).

"They had extra incentive," Cohasset assistant coach Dick Lawless said. "We didn't have a win it for the Gipper speech, but they do talk about it and there was a sense of mind of we can't let Coach down."

Lawless was pleased with the way Cohasset kept their focus.

"They came out hard," he said. "Then in the third quarter we came out strong. That's been a problem. In the past we have not come out as strong and other teams have been able to catch up."

In typical Skipper fashion, the defense got everything rolling.

"The defense was terrific," Lawless said. "There were a lot of fouls in the first half, but that was a result of being aggressive."

Shane Haggerty led the offense with 17 points, while Jaundoo added 14.

Chris Murphy scored 10, Robbie Mahoney chipped in 8, Christian Davis dropped 7 and Henry Brown had a bucket to go with some out-

Longtime writer goes Lin-sane

By Dick Trust
GateHouse News Service

Something's happened to me.

Suddenly, I'm almost a New York Knicks fan. Almost.

I'm actually a Jeremy Lin fan. After just eight games as a starter in the National Basketball Association, he had me hooked. I can't get enough of him. Now that he's getting real minutes, he's the real deal.

I want him to keep doing sensational things on the court, which, by extension, means I must want the Knicks to do well. Not quite, but almost.

And here I am, a lifelong fan of the rival Boston Celtics. Our Boston Celtics. As a kid, I saw Cousy play in the early 1950s. In person. At the original Boston Garden. I saw Russell and Heinsohn and Havlicek.

As a sports writer, I covered the Celtics of Bird, McHale and Parish. The Big Three. I follow today's Big Three of Allen, Garnett and Pierce.

I should be ashamed to say that I now care how a certain Knickerbocker fares.

Point guard Jeremy Lin came from a collegiate basketball career at Harvard, yet he really came out of nowhere. The 6-foot-3 200-pounnder was a solid player in college, but was undrafted, cut after brief free-agent stints with the Golden State Warriors and Houston Rockets, and wound up with the Knicks. He sat as a spare part until plugged in as an emergency fill-in.

Now they can't afford to get him out of the lineup.

He caught fire nearly from the get-go, and his flames of energy have spread to his teammates, his adoptive city, the Asian community here in America and to basketball fans in China.

Born in California of Chinese descent, Lin has Maple Leafs still undefeated

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The Maple Leafs found a way to stay undefeated in the Classics Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League.

Jeff Gauthier broke a 3-3 tie with 3:43 left in the game as the Maple Leafs battled back from three one-goal deficits to pull out a 5-3 win over the Black Hawks.

Tim Ryan scored two goals including an empty netter, Paul Maier of Marshfield and Dave Salvaggio both added a power play goal each and Rockland's Marty DeCourcey had three assists for the Leafs.

John Dunn had a goal and an assist, while Vin Joyce and Tim Fallon had a goal apiece for the Black Hawks.

Ron DiCecca of Marhsfield scored two second period goals as the Red Wings rallied for a 4-3 Classics Div. win over the Bruins. Kevin Barnard added a goal and an assist and Pat Burke scored a goal and John Guilderson had two assists for the Wings.

Steve Anzuoni scored two goals and Marshfield's John Zimmer added a goal for the Bruins.

Pembroke's Mike Fahie had a goal and two assists while Glen Harnisch of Marshfield had a goal and an assist to lead the Canadiens to a 4-1 win over the Rangers in a Classics Div. matchup. Tom Lema and Tim McCrystal both of Marshfield had a goal each and Kirk Souza had two assists for the Canadiens while Steve Quinn also of Marshfield scored for the Rangers.

The Toros and the Crusaders, who both got off to slow starts came through with big wins in their respective Legends Div. games.

Championship stature

Skiers and swimmers shine at championships

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The MIAA State Ski Championship took place on Tuesday at Wachusett Mountain.

Ski Team members Mackenzie Axelson, Caty Gilman, and Ben Astley (alternate) were there representing the Ski East League.

The tournament went well as Axelson finished 25th with a 39.61 time in the Individual Slalom, while Gilman was 48th with a 40.98 run. More than 135 skiers participated.

In the giant Slalom, Axelson had an impressive showing, finishing eighth in 49.65.

Gilman was 31st in 51.13

Notre Dame Academy's Marie Gilman was right behind at 51.14, while NDA teammate Amelia Brown was second in the Giant Slalom with a 48.72 run. She was third in the Slalom at 37.28.

It wasn't just skiers who had big tournaments.

Boys team member Clarke Indek finished third in the State in the 100 yard backstroke and placed 16th in the 200 yard individual medley.

Girls team member Hope Kissick finished second in the 100 yard breast stroke and 18th in the 100 yard butterfly.

Bard named Jimmy Fund spokesman

Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Jimmy Fund announced that Boston Red Sox pitcher Daniel Bard will be the 2012 Jimmy Fund Rally Against Cancer Spokesplayer.

Joining the ranks of past spokesplayers including Tim Wakefield, Clay Buchholz, Jon Lester, Dustin Pedroia, Kevin Youkilis, and Trot Nixon, Bard will be an ambassador for the Jimmy Fund to raise awareness and build support for cancer care and research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

"I am honored to work with the Jimmy Fund in this role," said Bard

Now in its seventh year, Rally Against Cancer encourages Red Sox fans to partner with their workplaces and schools by encouraging co-workers, classmates, and friends to each contribute $5 or more to the Jimmy Fund. In exchange, they can "Dress for Sox-cess" by wearing Boston Red Sox gear to work or school on Friday, April 13, when the Sox take on the Tampa Bay Rays at Fenway Park for their home opener. The top fundraising workplace and school (K-12, college or university) are each eligible for a visit from Bard, if located within two-hour travel distance from Boston.

This year's event adds a new twist—the second highest fundraising team (workplace or school) after the top fundraising school and business, can also win a visit from Bard (see full contest rules at RallyAgainstCancer.org).

In six years, Rally Against Cancer has raised $2.5 million to support the fight against cancer at Dana-Farber. This year, the program hopes to raise $650,000. For more information about Rally, please visit RallyAgainstCancer.org and follow the Rally Against Cancer hashtag on Twitter: #Rally.

The Jimmy Fund solely supports Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, raising funds for adult and pediatric cancer care and research to improve the chances of survival for cancer patients around the world. It is an official charity of the Boston Red Sox, as well as the official charity of the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association, the Pan-Massachusetts Challenge, and the Variety Children's Charity of New England. Since 1948, the generosity of millions of people has helped the Jimmy Fund (JimmyFund.org) save countless lives and reduce the burden of cancer for patients and families worldwide. spawned dozens of puns in newspaper headlines, TV graphics and handmade signs held aloft during Knicks games.

Overnight – he actually played 29 games for Golden State last season – he has become Lin-sational, Lin-credible. the whole episode Lin-sanity, his tale a Lin-derella story. Knicks Lin again. On and on.

Yet, Lin remains humble. For every successful drive to the hoop, for every assist, every steal, every big three-point shot he lets fly (and makes), he remains grounded. For every new pun spun, he marvels at the media's ability to keep them coming.

The Knicks won eight of their first nine games with this new superhero playing significant minutes. In his brief stand on Olympus (O-Lin-pus?), he has done the improbable. Since the NBA and ABA merged in 1976-77, only four players – including Michael Jordan and Shaquille O'Neal – scored more points in their first eight career starts than the 200 Lin amassed.

No NBA point guard in the last 30 years scored more points in his first eight starts.

He beat the Raptors at Toronto with a buzzer-beating three-pointer.

He led the Knicks to a big win Sunday over the defending NBA champion Dallas Mavericks. I awaited that game as I did for the Super Bowl. Feb. 19 was Super Sunday in my household. He didn't disappoint, scoring 28 points with career highs in assists (14), steals (5) and minutes played (46 of a possible 48).

Oh, what a fee-Lin.

His uniform jersey No. 17 is the hottest thing on the market.

He no longer sleeps on his brother's couch in a one-bedroom apartment in NY's Lower East Side; he now has his own condo.

He came on with such dazzle that the NBA added him to its All-Star Weekend; he'll play in the Rising Stars Challenge Game and be a passer in the Slam Dunk Contest. The NBA should add him to the All-Star Game itself. He's whom the people want to see.

He's whom I want to see.

He's so Lin-triguing. The sky's the Lin-it for him.

He harkens back to the baseball hero of my youth, Ted Williams, the Splendid Splinter.

OK, I can't resist. Jeremy Lin – the Splendid Sp-Linter.

There, I've said it.

Install a scoreboard

Dear Friend:

The Cohasset High Varsity Baseball Team is coming off its second consecutive Division IV State Championship Season and we're looking to commemorate this historic achievement with an exciting project that we hope will celebrate the success of our favorite local pastime for many years to come!

The Cohasset Diamond Club is proudly launching an effort to install a state-of-the-art scoreboard at the home of the State Champions...Milliken Field Complex, we currently do not have a scoreboard there. In an effort to enhance the baseball experience for both players and spectators alike, The Diamond Club solicited proposals from local scoreboard vendors and was very fortunate to secure a generous donation from the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund to jumpstart the project. However, to make this project a reality, we need your help!

We are reaching out to all family, friends, and fans of Cohasset Baseball to get us to homeplate with sufficient funds to complete the project for the 2012 season. In order to do so, we are asking that you consider making a contribution to the Cohasset Diamond Club so that we can fund this exciting endeavor.

We greatly appreciate any amount that you can contribute and ask that you consider making a donation to help the High School teams.

Thank you very much!

Yours sincerely,

Cohasset Diamond Club: Peggy Goetz, Karen Doonan, Judy Collins, Steve Faber, Kevin Dooley, Chris Haggerty.

For thousands of homeless children in Massachusetts, this is a reality. They find shelter where they can. And often, they have no more than a car to call home.

Horizons for Homeless Children improves the lives of homeless children and families across Massachusetts. We've helped thousands.

You can help.

standing defense off the bench.

"Henry played very hard tonight," Lawless said. "He had some very nice assists off the bench."

Mahoney was in the center of everything.

"Robbie Mahoney is the glue of the team," Lawless said. "He doesn't show up big in the scoring stats, but His defense, rebounding and aggressiveness on the boards are important. He makes the defense go."

Lawless praised his captains, Jaundoo, Mahoney and Murphy for their part in keeping the team focused.

"All three captains stepped up," he said. "Robbie really stepped up. He recognized his leadership was needed. He is the glue that holds this team together."

Playing hard for four quarters was an important step for the Skippers.

"That's a good team," Lawless said of Blue Hills. "They are a tough adversary. They play hard for 32 minutes.

Cohasset improved their lead to 36-21 at the half and took a 48-31 lead into the fourth.

Blue Hills closed the gap late with an 11-0 run that included three three-pointers.

With the first game out of the way, Cohasset will continue to play one game at a time and hope to be playing long enough that Ruggiero can join them.

"We talk about playing with poise," Lawless said. "We have been here before. We talk about that and how we want to play our game. We know how to play in tournaments. Tonight we did what we had to do."

Coach Ruggiero is currently at Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital beginning his road to recovery and hopefully back to the Cohasset High School basketball Court sidelines. Well wishes and cards can be sent to:

LIFE AT CHS

Bunch of events are coming up!

Mark your calendars for the Mr. Skipper Pageant taking place on March 16th. Come see a bunch of senior boys and one brave junior boy compete to be crowned Mr. Skipper

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Happy March, Cohasset! This week felt extra long after a nice, relaxing February break. On Monday, people could be found in the halls comparing tans, complaining about how early it was after a week of sleeping in, and telling stories about their vacations. In class, teachers had to get students to focus on their work once more. It's hard to believe it's already halfway through third quarter, and progress reports are coming out soon. This year is flying by! On another note, Wednesday was a leap year! I'm sending an extra-special happy birthday to all of you who have the misfortune of being born on a Leap Day. See you in 2016, February 29th.

A lot is going on with the arts this weekend! The chorus is taking a trip to Providence tonight. They will be singing the National Anthem before the Providence Bruins game. The preliminary round of the High School One-Act Drama Festival is this Saturday. The festival includes 115 one-act plays performed by high schools from around Massachusetts. There are three levels: preliminary, semi-final, and states. Individual excellence in acting and technical design are recognized in special awards, and at the finals, an All-Star Company is selected. This year, Cohasset is performing a play about Helen Keller called "The Miracle Worker." The actors and actresses have worked extremely hard to perfect accents and master characters over the past few months. Good luck to both groups!

A bunch of events are coming up in March. Mark your calendars for the Mr. Skipper Pageant taking place on March 16th. Come see a bunch of senior boys and one brave junior boy compete to be crowned Mr. Skipper. The first annual Recycled pARTS display is scheduled for March 7th at 6pm in the Middle-High School cafeteria. The challenge is to create a piece of artwork from things that might ordinarily end up in a landfill. Students, adults, and families are invited to enter. Also, another Student Council sponsored American Red Cross Blood Drive is coming up at the end of March. Ask Mr. Kotter or any Student Council member for more information.

The playoffs for winter sports are underway. The boys' basketball team played #11 seeded Blue Hills this Wednesday at home. It has been hard for the boys since their head coach Bo Ruggiero was hit by an allegedly drunk driver two weeks ago on his way to practice. He suffered many injuries and has spent much time at the hospital. My thoughts go out to Coach Ruggiero. The boys' hockey team played Abington in Bourne on Thursday. For information on the boys' playoff games, see the sports section.

It actually snowed this Wednesday! Just in time for March...a little late there, Mother Nature. Well, that's all for this week Cohasset, have a good weekend!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column appears weekly during the school year.

SPECIAL EDUCATION PARENT ADVISORY COUNSEL

Expert to speak on social struggles

Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Counsel (SEPAC) is pleased to host "Turning Social Struggles into Social Success" presented by Katy Shamitz, Director of Skills for Living, Social Coach and Educator. The meeting will be held at the Cohasset Paul Pratt Library on Tuesday, March 6th, at 7 pm. Please feel free to gather for refreshments and speak with the SEPAC Board. Shamitz will begin her presentation at 7:30 p.m.

"Growing up isn't as easy as it used to be. Our children live in a fast paced, high energy, quick thinking world. Social challenges that were once considered 'right of passage' have taken on a whole new form," says Shamitz, whose presentation will be an interactive conversation on the social struggles facing our elementary aged kids every single day.

Families will be able to walk away with practical simple strategies to implement in their home right away. She will teach attendees how to help their children be successful friends, peers and family members. "Katy's workshop will benefit all parents who want to assist their children in navigating the social waters." says Helane Childs, Secretary of Cohasset SEPAC.

For more than t10 years, Shamitz has been helping people of all ages make meaningful life changes. Her strength is in helping children and adolescents be their own personal best, whether the goal is to gain self confidence, improve interpersonal skills, triumph over bullying, or develop and maintain organizational habits. Shamitz has extensive experience working with children and adolescents, from toddlers to college students. Her background in school counseling has given her a thorough understanding of the challenges, both social and academic, that young people encounter on a daily basis. With a research and practical background in childhood bullying, she understands the emotional stress of peer relationships, and has developed useful techniques for overcoming bullying. She has a deep interest in "Social Thinking," having studied directly under Michelle Garcia Winner in the Mentor Training Program in her San Jose, CA clinic.

Shamitz founded Skills for Living in 2007 after leaving the public schools. She is a certified school counselor in Massachusetts. She received her undergraduate degree in Education and Psychology from Stonehill College and her Masters in Counseling from Southern Connecticut State University in New Haven.

For more information on this meeting and other South Shore events, visit our website at www.cohassetsepac.org Light refreshments will be available. The meeting free and open to the public.

'Miracle Worker' on stage Tuesday

Please join the cast and crew for a performance of "The Miracle Worker", a play in one act adapted from the 3-act play of the same name by James Gibson. The play is Cohasset's entry in the annual Massachusetts Educational Theater Guild's one act play competition. The performance will be held on Tuesday, March 6 at 7 PM and will be presented in the high school auditorium. Admission for adults is $5 and $3 for students.

Sea Chest Consignments donates to local groups

Seven local food pantries as well as the Scituate Animal Shelter and Special Olympics Massachusetts, received monetary awards from Sea Chest Consignments in December. Sea Chest, 754 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Route 3A, Cohasset, annually donates proceeds from its nonprofit arm, Seawinds Charity Inc., to South Shore service organizations chosen by vote of the shop's 90-plus volunteers.

This year, food pantries in Cohasset, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, Rockland and Hingham, towns where shop volunteers live – received donations in December as did the Wellspring Food Pantry in Hull.

Sea Chest Consignments opened in April 2004 under the sponsorship of Road to Responsibility. In 2008, when Road to Responsibility could no longer sponsor Sea Chest, management and volunteers created their own nonprofit, Seawinds Charity Inc., whose primary mission is to provide funds for various service organizations on the South Shore.

Sea Chest won the Reader's Choice Awards in 2005, 2006, 2007, 2008, 2009, 2010 and 2011. In 2010, the shop also received a Best of the South Shore award from South Shore Living magazine.

Store Hours for sales are: Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Sundays, 1 to 4 p.m. Consigning hours are: Monday to Friday, 10 to 11:30 a.m., and also Thursdays in April and October from 6 to 8 p.m.

For more information about Sea Chest Consignments, call 781-383-2293.

COHASSET REC

Babysitter training course signups

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office on the first floor of Town Hall, visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Babysitter Training Course – This one-day, three-hour course is designed to assist fifth- through eighth-graders to be better babysitters and to learn the dos and don'ts of being home alone. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Instructor: Kim Cleary, nurse and mom. Meets at Paul Pratt Library, April 5 (half day), 1 to 4 p.m. Fee is $20.

SAT Math Review – Princeton Review certified, Bob Beatty, a retired teacher from Scituate High School, will offer a 10-hour, seven-session math review based on content of the SATs. The course will cover the makeup of the test, techniques on how to score higher from not doing all the problems, when to guess or skip the problem, and how many problems can be left blank and still get a 600. Topics of all the algebra, geometry, and algebra 2 will also be covered as well as discussing the new sections of the test, which include functions, sets and sequences. All materials will be supplied. Takes place at Paul Pratt Library, March 5, March 12, March 19, March 26, April 2, April 9 and April 23, 6:30 to 8 p.m. The $150 fee includes all materials.

Yoga – Stretching for improved flexibility, balance and injury prevention. Safe and intelligent stretching sequences combined with balance and exercises designed to enhance one's physical and mental well-being as well as teach the anatomy of movement in order to build a solid foundation of fitness that will last a life time. The stretch class is geared toward seniors but is open to all ages. Town Hall Auditorium, Thursdays, 11 a.m. Fee is $8, $3 for seniors.

Chair Yoga –Thursday at 9:30 a.m., Cohasset Recreation Department is offering a weekly, drop-in chair yoga class in the Town Hall auditorium on Highland Avenue. This class will focus on effective yoga techniques appropriate for those with limited mobility. From a stable seat, modifications of many common yoga poses can be done without fear of injury or strain. This class provides a way to experience the physical and mental benefits of yoga, while developing muscle strength and confidence. Participants should dress in layers and wear lose, unrestricting garments. If possible, bring a mat or a blanket. Price: $3 for seniors, $8 non-seniors.

Boating Safety and Instruction Courses – Suddenly in Command, Saturday, March 31, 9 a.m. to noon, $35; About Boating Safety, Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., on March 17, May 12, June 23 or July 14. Limited enrollment – register early, $65; Boating Skills & Seamanship, Oct. 13, 20 and 27, Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

April Rec-cation – Just because the kids have the time off from school parents have the time off work, so Cohasset Recreation is picking up the slack with vacation week programs for children of all ages. For ages 6 through 10, a variety of arts, crafts, stories and games will be enjoyed. Facilitated by Recreation staff. Takes place at Deer Hill School. The Recreation Department will offer the RISE program after care during this week. April 17 through 20, Tuesday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Cost is $99 for RISE participants and $149 for non-Rise participants.

Cohasset Health and Recreation Fair – The Health and Recreation Fair will take place Sunday, March 25, from 1 to 4 p.m. at Deer Hill School. This will be an opportunity to gather information from all of Cohasset's most popular health, recreation, youth sports providers, as well as a wide variety of health screenings. This is the last day to register for Summer Playground programs as well as all summer camps and programs.

CPR & AED Training – Training or retraining should be a habit. Get one's oil changed, get an annual exam and change the batteries on home fire alarms. Make time to learn CPR or update skills to protect oneself and one's family. Sudden Cardiac Arrest claims too many lives each year. The Recreation Department is asking everyone to get trained in CPR. American Heart Association CPR courses will be instructed by members of Cohasset Fire Department; CPR instruction will include adult, child and infant CPR. Two-year certification card. Meets at the Recreation Center Wednesday, April 4, 6 to 10 p.m. Fee is $48.

Red Sox – This is the perfect opportunity for a special day, or for a first visit to Fenway Park, for the Sox game. Transportation included. Children younger than 16 must be accompanied by an adult. Wednesday, June 20, 7:10 p.m., vs. Miami Marlins. Monday, July 16, 7:10 p.m., vs. Chicago White Sox. Wednesday, Aug. 1, 7:10 p.m., vs. Detroit Tigers. Cost is $38 per ticket.

Summer Xtreme Program – Summer Xtreme is the alternative this age group has been looking for, and once they become part of the Summer Xtreme experience middle schoolers will be coming back for more, week after week. At just $112 a week it is an affordable way to have fun and meet new friends. Students entering sixth through ninth grade are eligible to sign up for this four-day, Monday through Thursday, program at Cohasset High School. A typical day takes place from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Some field trips have extended or later hours. Trips will be on Tuesdays and Thursdays unless otherwise noted.
Week 1 – June 26 through June 29: Paintball on Wednesday; Boston Bowl on Friday.
Week 2 – July 2 through July 3: Six Flags; Zoar Outdoors-Zip line. Week two is an overnight trip that includes hotel, $199.
Week 3 – July 9 through July 12: Nantasket Beach; Patriot Place; Espionage.
Week 4 – July 16 through July 19: Water Wizz; Skyzone.
Week 5 – July 23 through July 26: Deep sea fishing; ice skating.
Week 6 – July 30 through Aug. 2: Codzilla; Morton's Pond.
Week 7 – Aug. 6 through Aug. 9: Kayaking; Paw Sox.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Play with us this summer!

SU D'AMBROSIO

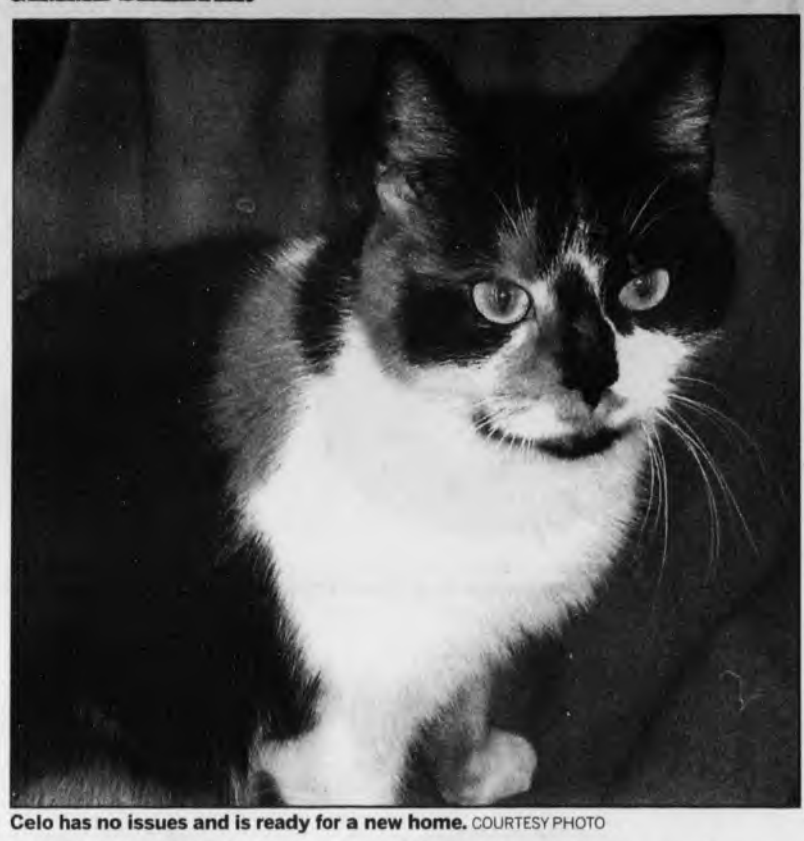
As I watch the snow falling outside my window it's hard for me to believe that summer is just around the corner! My inbox is full of emails prompting me to sign up my girls for a variety of summer camps and activities. While I know that structure is good, (and keeping them busy is good for me!) I am tempted to delete them all and send the girls out to play this summer with no structured, adult-driven activity. They are imaginative and do well on their own, but I know that after a couple of days of freedom the chorus of "I'm bored!" would be overwhelming. Ultimately, I remind myself that parenting is all about balance and I look through the emails to choose activities that will feed their interests and give them skills and tools to be productive and creative in their free time without over-scheduling their summer.

In today's world we feel compelled to keep our kids occupied 24/7/365. We want to give them every opportunity and expose them to everything so that they can find their strengths and choose a direction. Most kids have a full schedule of school, sports, music, scouts, drama, dance…with little or no free time to explore and experiment with the skills they are learning. As I run around South Shore Conservatory (SSC) handing out our own program information, I feel a bit conflicted. I want to encourage parents to join our programs while cautioning them about over-scheduling. Again, it all comes back to balance and making good choices when it comes to programs and activities for our kids.

Any well-rounded program for kids includes an element of "free" time that allows them to process what they are learning on their own or with their peers through "play." This is our most basic means for learning from birth and throughout our lives. If you observe any preschool class you will see examples of young children acting out what they see and learn from the adult world in a variety of activities that range from dress-up to blocks and cars to puzzles and games. Adults often misinterpret this as fun without substance or purpose. However, this is precisely how and when some of the most important learning takes place. The process of play allows children to understand and make sense of the information that we are feeding them. As children get older "play" is still crucial. It might look a little different, but any time a young person is on their own experimenting with skills they are learning, that is their "play", and what comes out of this time is a product that is truly their own. This experimenting, or play, is what gives learning meaning.



Any well-rounded program for kids includes an element of "free" time that allows them to process what they are learning on their own or with their peers through "play."

When students come to "play with us" at SSC in structured lessons, ensembles, camps and classes they leave with skills that empower them to be creative with music, dance and drama on their own in new ways. The interactions between students during these activities have an element of social collaboration that is not adult-driven and often these students make new friends and get together outside of SSC to make music, organize a backyard play or dance around the house to their favorite music.

To learn more about South Shore Conservatory's summer programs, all of which foster growth, social development and learning through play, visit www.sscmusic.org.

Assunta "Su" D'Ambrosio is the Conservatory's Director of Programs and Curriculum. Known as "Miss Su" by SSC's preschool, pre-k and kindergarten students, she is one of their classroom music specialists. She lives in Plymouth with her two daughters, Maria and Rosa and her dog Bernie.

GIMME SHELTER

Celo has no issues and is ready for a new home. COURTESY PHOTO

Cleo will make a great companion

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Cleo, a classic Calico female. She was surrendered to the shelter and is waiting for someone to give her a new home.

Cleo is a beautiful, friendly, purring cat, who will adapt quickly to an animal friendly home. She doesn't have any issues, is up to date on all her shots and has been spayed. Cleo will make a great companion and is, in a word, "purrfect." If you're interested, please come visit Cleo. She is indeed special.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few friendly, but not lap cats that would make excellent mousers.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The shelter offers a monthly low-cost spay/neuter clinic. Check out our website, www.hsar.org, or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. Please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 12, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Keep an open mind about a suggestion you see as unworkable. Give it a chance to prove itself one way or another. The results could surprise both supporters and detractors.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) News about an upcoming venture causes you to make some last-minute adjustments in your plans. But the extra work will pay off, as you come to learn more about the potential benefits opening up.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A more positive aspect grows out of your determination to reach your immediate goals. Continue to keep your focus sharp and on target by steering clear of petty quarrels and other pesky problems.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) By acting as a voice of reason, you can avoid adding to an already turbulent situation. You might have to shout over the tumult, but your words ultimately will be heard and heeded.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The possibility of a new acquisition always makes those Leonine eyes light up. But be careful that what you see is what you want. Appearances can often be deceiving.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) No matter how much you might feel that you're in the right, resist saying anything that could reignite a still-unresolved situation. Let the matter drop, and move on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Help with a personal problem comes from an unexpected source. You also find workplace pressures easing. Use this period of calm to restore your spent energies.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might have to share the credit for that project you're working on. But there'll be enough credit to go around, and your efforts will be recognized and rewarded.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Details need to be dealt with before you can move on to another area. Make sure you don't leave any loose ends that could later cause everything to unravel.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) News about a change in the workplace carries with it a challenge you could find difficult to resist. Check it out. It could be what you've been waiting for.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Allowing your artistic nature full expression will help restore your spirits and will put you in the mood to take on that new career challenge. A Libra creates excitement.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Expect to happily plunge right into a hectic social whirl starting at week's end. Your aspects favor new friendships as well as the strengthening of old relationships.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

WORSHIP NOTES

Lecture series at Glastonbury Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices: Without a Vision, the People Perish: Why a Religious Tradition?" will be presented at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, March 8. Lori Lefkovitz will present a lecture titled "Reconstructing Jewish Religious Practices for Future Generations."

How does tradition change and yet remain the same? Lefkovitz, the new director of Northeastern University's Program in Jewish Studies, brings to her post her vast scholarship in literature, critical theory and Jewish women's studies. She sees time-honored religious traditions as an antidote to some of the demoralizing messages of today's consumer culture. Yet, she also sees the need to adapt to accommodate those traditions to social changes. She will speak to how women's increased participation in Judaism has revitalized Jewish customs and inspired new and adapted ritual and liturgical expressions. Lefkovitz holds the Ruderman Chair in Jewish Studies at Northeastern and is an English professor. Recipient of many awards, she was a senior Fulbright Professor at the University of Jerusalem. Her most recent book, "In Scripture: The First Stories of Jewish Sexual Identities," was a 2010 National Jewish Book Award finalist.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. Reservations will not be taken. Seating is limited and on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information, visit the website at glastonburyabbey.org.

UMass Boston: A 'Best Value' Proposition

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

Earlier this month the University of Massachusetts Boston received national recognition for something we know we've been doing from the start: providing students from our Commonwealth and beyond with a high-value education. Our university was named by the Princeton Review as one of the "Best Value Colleges" in the United States.

To qualify for the list, schools must offer excellent academics coupled with generous financial aid and/or relatively low costs of attendance. UMass Boston has always operated on the principle that these two qualities – excellence and value – can coexist, which is why this award is especially meaningful.

The Princeton Review's 2012 list of "Best Value Colleges" includes 75 public and 75 private colleges and universities across the country. Eleven are in Massachusetts; UMass Boston has the distinction of being the only public university or college in the state named to the list.

This is the season when students and parents are considering options for higher education and professionals are looking for opportunities to advance their careers. If that describes you, I encourage you to check out the list, along with profiles of the schools featured, in the new Princeton Review book Best Value Colleges: 2012 Edition or online at www.princetonreview.com.

The education services company selected UMass Boston as a "Best Value" school based on analyses of data collected from 650 institutions identified as having excellent academics. Its statisticians reviewed data on academics, cost of attendance, and financial aid, and also incorporated student feedback on professors and financial support.

It doesn't surprise me that our students are happy with their education and with the support they receive to pursue it. Our faculty take care to make sure our students are learning to the best of their potential, and they develop extramural research funding – including $54 million in sponsored awards last year alone – so that our students can work with them on cutting-edge studies and projects with real-world implications.

And every year, we award more than $132 million in financial aid to our students, much of it in the form of grants and scholarships that do not have to be repaid.

I am proud that UMass Boston has been singled out for excellence in our classrooms, and for providing the financial assistance that helps get deserving students into those classrooms. It's wonderful to have been recognized by the Princeton Review for what we already knew – that we are making good on our commitment to provide access to first-rate higher education, and that we continue to be Boston's public research university with a teaching soul.

For more information about the Princeton Review ranking, and opportunities at UMass Boston, visit www.umb.edu/bestvalue or call 617.287.6000.

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

'American Idol' goes classical

ROY HARRIS

If you've been curious about how having its own professional orchestra enhances the South Shore, March offers a chance to experience two very different ways that the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra makes our area a better place.

We start with the ASO Concerto Competition Finale in Braintree this Sunday, March 4. The ASO, known for creating intimacy between orchestral performers and audiences, takes this personal approach to new levels with what could be described as this "American Idol" approach to classical music. It starts at 4 p.m. in the beautiful Thayer Academy Center for the Arts, giving music fans a chance to see young players, 18 to 30, do their best for ASO judges in pursuit of $2,000 in prize money and the chance to play with the full ASO in concert next season.

For attendees sitting in the comfortable Thayer Center seats, it's a great opportunity to see young talent on the rise – and on the spot, as judges scrutinize their playing and write down the marks that the musicians hope will win them a first, second or third-place prize. The contestants come from around the nation and around the globe, and often are accompanied by a pianist as they play. Audience members get a vote, too – for the "Audience Choice Award," presented with the other prizes after the concert. Audience members are invited to attend.

The stakes are high for the competitors, as winning can be a life-changing experience. Last year's winner of the 8-year-old competition, clarinetist Jin Sung Moon, was featured in December's ASO Joyful Noise! Concert paying Rossini's Introduction, Theme and Variations. The previous year's winner, violinist Evan Wood, not only had his "solo turn" in 2010, but he now has taken over as the ASO's concertmaster. It promises to be a wonderful concert experience for attendees – and one that will bring you closer to the future of classical music in America.

Then later in March, from that intimate, competitive approach of the Concerto Competition the ASO turns its focus to a "big orchestral performance."

The orchestra and Maestro Jin Kim have scheduled an ASO Masterworks Gala for its other glorious South Shore venue: the Duxbury Performing Arts Center, on Saturday, March 31 at 7:30 p.m. Beethoven's thrilling Leonora Overture No. 3 leads off the program, with Bruch's Violin Concerto No. 1 following – featuring soloist Xiang "Angelo" Yu. The concert concludes with the Shostakovich Symphony No. 1, a work that Maestro Kim describes as leaving audiences captivated and breathless.

Angelo Yu, who has played with the ASO in the past, has had his own wonderful experiences with competitive playing – winning the international 2010 Menuhin Competition in Oslo, Norway. The entire orchestra is looking forward to the March 31 "reunion" with this fabulous violinist.

We hope you can join us in Duxbury as well.

CITIZEN OF THE YEAR

Veneta "Vee" Roebuck is this year's Citizen of the Year. Here she stands on a trail in Wompatuck State Park, one of her favorite places. The conservationist walks every day. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Vee Roebuck a natural choice

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

When looking around Cohasset at the open space, flora and fauna – you can be sure of one thing. The resident who appreciates the natural world the most is very likely Veneta Roebuck of Beechwood Street.

"Vee," as she is affectionately called by those who know her, recalls the day when she was first tapped to serve on the Conservation Commission. She was mowing the grass on a riding lawnmower in front of her Beechwood Street home when then commissioner and neighbor Merle Brown pulled up and told her they needed people to serve. That was in 1985 and Vee recalls asking Brown, "Tell me what the Conservation Commission is?" He did, she said "sure," and the rest — to coin a phrase, is history.

Vee has not looked back since. She has spent countless hours at commission meetings and more hours outside of meetings walking the terrain, through the woods and around the wetlands. Detail-oriented by nature, Vee has been a constant on the commission where she provides the insight of someone that grew up loving the outdoors.

It is Vee's dedication to her adopted hometown – being a voice of reason on the Conservation Commission – that led to her selection as the Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year.

"In all my personal and town committee interactions with the Conservation Commission, Vee has always been very helpful," says Russ Bonetti, who served with Vee on the Hagerty Committee. "She has a knowledge of conservation practices and laws that is indisputable. Vee is always trying to see how things can be made to fit the conservation commission requirements while at the same time doing her best to help applicants get it through the process and achieve the permits they are seeking."

The Citizen of the Year Selection Committee consisting of Taffy Nothnagle, Wayne Sawchuk, AJ Antoine and Roger Whitley joined me (editor Mary Ford) at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the 17 nominations submitted by dozens of individuals. The committee noted Vee's longtime service on the Conservation Commission and Hagerty Committee as well as her role in seeing

Coughlin hearing Tuesday

Town Manager's future to be determined

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

In anticipation of a substantial crowd, the Board of Selectmen has reserved the library at Cohasset High School for the public hearing at 7 p.m., Tuesday evening (March 13) that could determine the future relationship Town Manager Michael Coughlin has with the Town of Cohasset. The hearing will be televised.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr asked his fellow board members at the close of their meeting this week to "keep an open mind in the discussion."

Coughlin asked for the public hearing.

On Feb. 15 the board took the preliminary action to suspend Coughlin with pay for 30 days over "communication differences" pending further action on its part. Coughlin, who started in August 2011, was hired as town manager to shake things up – a charge he apparently took seriously. But over his six months on the job, Coughlin's aggressive style and decision-making process have been at odds with some town officials and selectmen, creating a lack of harmony.

The board's resolution, which is on file at the town clerk's office, states that: "the Town Manager's communications with the Board demonstrate that the Board and the Town Manager do not share in common the same views as to how important matters should be communicated or as to the

19 percent Cohasset turnout for Super Tuesday

What
Super Tuesday Presidential primary (March 6)

Eligible voters
5,422

Turnout
19.2 percent or 1,042
The prediction statewide was for a 15 percent turnout.

Results
• President Barack Obama, who was unchallenged, won 127 votes in Cohasset in the democrat primary. On the republican side, the top vote-getter was Mitt Romney with 737. No one voted in Cohasset for candidates in the Green-Rainbow primary.
• The Republican State Committeeman's race added some local excitement. Cohasset resident Peter J. Buckley got 727 votes to incumbent John P. Cafferty's 74 votes and William M. Harris' 27. Buckley came in first, district-wide, with 5,431 votes to Cafferty's 4,908. "I wish him well," Cafferty said. Harris got 2,567 votes district wide.

Local comments
• Ray Kasperowicz, Chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee and former candidate for US Congress: "The biggest surprise to me is that a relatively unknown guy in our circles, Peter Buckley, came out and beat two well known, well respected guys for the State Committeeman position. Congratulations to Peter. He obviously had his ducks in a row. And that's an important attribute."
• Kevin McCarthy, chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee: "On behalf of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee we thank our fellow local Democrats for voting to endorse our entire town committee slate in Tuesday's primary. We appreciate every vote. "Going forward we will continue to increase our close involvement with the Cohasset community though our public issues forums, food drives, yard sales and other fundraising in support of our annual High School scholarship, free movie nights at the Paul Pratt Library and our strong ongoing encouragement of everyone's right and civic obligation to always exercise the precious right to vote regardless of political persuasion."

Jennifer Cohen

Name: Jennifer Cohen.

Occupation: Marketing Associate at the South Shore Music Circus.

Best day of your life: The best day of my life was this past May at my college graduation, from James Madison University. It was bittersweet, I was proud to be graduating and sad to be leaving all the great friends I had met.

Best vacation: Atlantis, The Bahamas.

Favorite season: Growing up in Hull, my favorite season is summer because I love going to beach.

Favorite holiday: I would have to say Thanksgiving because it is filled with great food, family, and football. There is not much more to be thankful for.

Favorite junk food (or meal): Anything Italian; pasta dishes and pizza!

Best book: Anything by Jodi Picoult.

Best actor: I love Rachel McAdams. She is always playing different roles and pulling off every which hair color.

Best TV show: I spend a little too much time watching television. If I had to choose one, I would choose "Pan Am" because I enjoy watching shows from different time periods.

Best music, group, or artist: Kings of Leon.

Pet peeve: Being stuck inside on nice days.

Fun fact: I've been white water rafting in West Virginia.

Goal: To be successful at anything I encounter.

Person you'd most like to meet: Tom Brady, Patriots fan!

Biggest worry: Not having enough time to do all the things life has to offer.

Best part of Cohasset: Nothing is better on a summer night than dinner by the water and a great show at the South Shore Music Circus.

Veterans agent hours, number

Interim Veterans Agent Garrett Hunt has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F). Hunt's regular office hours are Monday and Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and Wednesday from 4 to 6 p.m.

The best way to reach Hunt outside of office hours or to make an appointment is by calling 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level

Can't scan photos?

If you do not have email or do not know how to scan photos or send them via email, you can drop your glossy photos off at the Cohasset Mariner "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Clothing collection

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation announced the placement of a clothing donation drop-off box in Cohasset, in the Aubuchon Hardware parking lot at 823 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., off Route 3A.

Big Brother Big Sister Foundation collects donations of lightly used clothing of all types for men, women and children, shoes, sneakers, accessories, handbags and jeans. They turn donations into funds for the mentoring programs, by selling them in bulk to local thrift stores. Fundraising projects like the clothing collection program are crucial in helping Big Brothers Big Sisters agencies match more children with adult mentors. For more information, visit the website at www.bbbsfoundation.org or call 800-483-5503.

Lennon to command team at Metro-LEC

Cohasset Police Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon has been selected to command the Metropolitan Law Enforcement Council's (Metro-LEC) Child Abduction Response Team (CART) and Investigative Support Unit (ISU) following Wellesley Deputy Police Chief William Brooks' resignation to become Chief of Police at the Norwood Police Department.

Metro-LEC is a consortium of 43 municipal police departments and two sheriff's departments, and services an area spanning over 650 square miles across Bristol, Middlesex, Norfolk, and Plymouth counties. Metro-LEC departments collectively represent a population of over 750,000 people, representing 12 percent of the Commonwealth's total population. Eleven Metro-LEC communities host a resident population that exceeds 25,000, including the larger communities of Attleboro, Braintree, Natick, Needham, Norwood, Wellesley, and Weymouth. These agencies work together to provide unique and highly specialized law enforcement resources to its member communities. This regional support system allows the communities involved to have access to outstanding services, personnel and equipment during the response to major crimes, emergencies and disasters while maintaining local control.

In 2006, Metro-LEC formed a CART. CARTs are designed to immediately mobilize assistance and investigative resources to the lead investigative agency when a child goes missing under suspicious circumstances. CARTs were first developed in Florida in 2004 and are now in use throughout the United States. The Metro-LEC CART is comprised of 35 police detectives from 26 agencies who have all received advanced training in the investigation of abducted children. In addition, the team includes resources from other Metro-LEC units including public information officers, search and rescue personnel, cyber crime investigations personnel, and motorcycle personnel. Additional resources are identified and are available as necessary. The team has researched and developed protocols that are designed to facilitate rapid and organized investigations into these cases.

The ISU provides investigative support to the Metro-LEC Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) team, the Regional Response Team (RRT) and the Crisis Negotiation Team (CNT) during deployments. The ISU offers its services for a variety of activations, including missing persons, large or unruly crowds, hostage/barricade incidents, and high-risk warrant service.

Detective Lieutenant Gregory Lennon

Lennon has been a member and supervisor in ISU since its creation in 2002 and developed the guidelines that ISU uses to gather background data on barricaded subject(s) and hostage(s). He also served on the original nine-member steering committee that developed the protocols for Metro-CART operations. Additionally, after comprehensive review, Metro-LEC ultimately recommended that each member agency adopt the Cohasset Police Department's policy and procedure on missing children investigations developed by Lennon after extensive research into best practices.

Lennon is a 17-year veteran of the Cohasset Police Department and has served in the Criminal Investigation Division for 14 years where he is currently assigned as the commanding officer. He is a graduate of the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) National Academy at Quantico, Va. In addition to conducting the full spectrum of investigations as a Cohasset Police detective, he has deployed on dozens of occasions with Metro-LEC and conducted investigations of missing persons, hostage/barricade incidents and other major crimes throughout the Metro-LEC service area.

Cohasset Chief of Police Mark DeLuca said: "Metro-LEC will be well served by Detective Lieutenant Lennon. His dedication, tenacity, and investigative skills, make him one of the best investigators I have ever seen."

POLICE BEAT

Strange acting raccoons around town

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

There were several reports of strange acting raccoons in Cohasset over the past week. Police warn the raccoons could have distemper or even rabies.

At 4:21 p.m. on Saturday (March 3) a 57-year-old man called 9-1-1 after his dog had gotten into a fight with a raccoon near the entrance to Whitney Woods. The animal control officer is following up to make sure the dog has had the proper rabies shots.

At 6:53 a.m. on Sunday (March 4), a Sankey Road woman reported that two raccoons were fighting on her front lawn and at 8:10 a.m., Sunday (March 4), Shaw's reported a raccoon was hanging out in front of the store. The animal control officer removed the animal, police said.

OUI charge

Hingham arrested at 32-year-old Cohasset man for drunken driving last week. Hingham police notified Cohasset police after the man, who refused to take the Breathalyzer resulting in revocation of his driver's license, told police he planned to drive anyway. Hingham wanted Cohasset to keep the individual on their radar screen.

Deer accident

At 7:29 a.m. on Monday (Feb. 27), police received three 9-1-1 calls about a motor vehicle that had hit a deer. Upon arrival police found a 2006 Honda Odyssey van with a large dent on the side and smashed slider-door window on the driver's side. The 17-year-old Cohasset teen, who had been driving, was headed south on Kind Street (Route 3A) near Sunrise Assisted Living when the deer ran into the side of the van, police said. Damage was under $1,000.

Hit & run

At 2:08 p.m. on Monday (Feb. 27), police responded to a report from a 37-year-old Cohasset woman, who had been traveling north on King Street (Route 3A) by Mobil Mart in a 2006 Land Rover, when her car was "tapped" by a 2007 Toyota Corolla operated by a 47-year-old Brockton man. The woman pulled into Mobil Mart and reported that the Toyota did not stop and continued north on Route 3A. Hingham police stopped the Toyota and the operator explained that he thought it was a light "tap" and therefore, did not stop. There was no damage to either vehicle, police said.

Plates

Police seized the plate on a 2008 Subaru and a 2002 Toyota 4-Runner last week after being notified by the Registry of Motor Vehicles that the registrations had been revoked. The Subaru was registered to a 42-year-old Spring Street man and the Toyota was registered to a 21-year-old Avalon Drive man. Police said the RMV regularly notifies them about revoked registrations.

Tracks

Police spoke to a 63-year-old Weymouth man who had been seen walking along the Greenbush right-of-way near the train station off North Main Street on Tuesday (Feb. 28) at about 3:38 p.m. The man fit the description and apparently had been walking in the right-of-way between Woodside Cemetery and the driveway to the train station. He admitted to having crossed the tracks but did not realize he had been trespassing. If police had witnessed him in the right-of-way, he would have been arrested, police said.

A&B charge

A Cohasset woman walked into the station last Wednesday (Feb. 29) to report she had been beaten up by her boyfriend while in Scituate. A passerby in Scituate had picked up the alleged victim after she jumped out of a truck and drove her to the station, police said. Police said the boyfriend had allegedly smashed her head against the dashboard. Police said the boyfriend chased the alleged victim and Good Samaritan to police headquarters.

Further investigation revealed the boyfriend had allegedly thrown a cell phone at the woman's head earlier that day at their Cohasset address. Cohasset officers arrested him in the lobby of police headquarters for assault and battery. Scituate will be seeking charges for the incident that occurred in the truck, police said.

Speeding

Police spoke to the 20-year-old operator of a black Ford pickup truck last week after receiving complaints that a vehicle with a similar description had been speeding on upper King Street near the water treatment plant and that it has been an ongoing problem in the neighborhood.

No-trespass

Police responded to a call from Mr. Dooley's on Depot Court about a customer who was harassing the women at the bar and had threatened the bartender last Thursday (March 1) at around 8:50 p.m. Police said the 59-year-old Marshfield man had had two glasses of wine but had likely been drinking elsewhere earlier, police said. They arranged for him to get a ride home. Police said he was issued a no-trespass order and will no longer be welcome at the village pub.

Obscene calls

A 48-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last Saturday that he had been receiving annoying and obscene phone calls from his sister, also of Cohasset. The calls were obscene but not threatening in nature. Police advised him if the calls continue then he could seek a harassment prevention order.

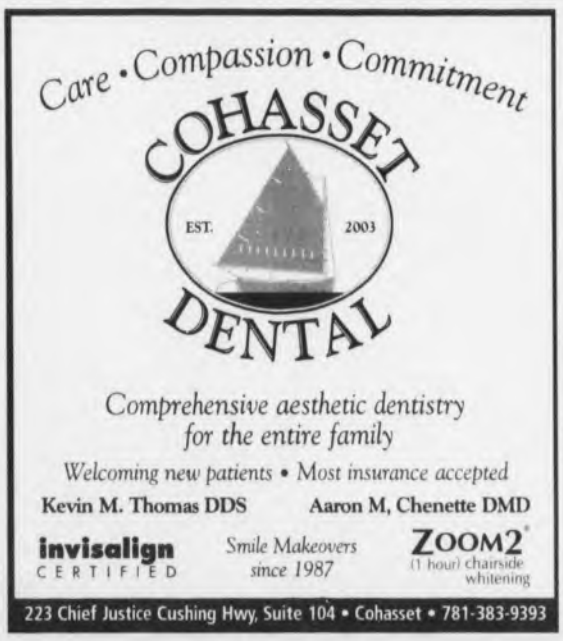
Computers

At 8:04 p.m. on Saturday (March 3), police were called to Town Hall to investigate a complaint that someone may have tampered with the computers in the Town Hall server room. Detectives responded to the scene to investigate and it did not appear that anything criminal had occurred. Town Hall brought in an internet technology person to made sure no information was breached, police said.

Harassing calls

A 44-year-old Oak Street man reported to police on Sunday (March 4) that he had been receiving harassing and obscene phone calls on his cell phone. The caller's number was showing up so police notified the phone company's Unlawful Phone Center to trace the call.

Wall damaged



A 60-year-old Church Street man reported that his retaining wall had been damaged in an apparent hit and run accident. He reported the damage on Sunday (March 4) at 8:26 p.m. Police spoke with neighbors who had not seen or heard anything. There was about $100 in damage. At this time, there are no suspects.

most effective manner in which those maters should be handled." The resolution goes on to state that the board and town manager must be able to work together closely and harmoniously.

Cohasset resident Michael Milanoski has been serving as acting town manager for the past two weeks. His appointment was extended this week through March 20. Selectmen also voted this week to pay Milanoski a $2,000 weekly stipend (which is not retroactive) from March 7-20. The stipend is in keeping with what was paid to former interim Town Manager Steve Lombard who served after Town Manager Bill Griffin resigned in the fall of 2010 through the end of June 2011. Jennifer Oram, assistant to the Town Manager, then served as interim until Coughlin came on board.

Carr tried to set the stage for Tuesday's hearing by reminding those on his board, in the audience and watching the meeting from home that Coughlin inherited many of the issues Cohasset is now facing.

"Next Tuesday we have issues with aspects associated with communication to digest and discuss," Carr said.

When asked about the format for the hearing, Carr said that was still being worked on.

"Basically it will be a discussion between the board, Mike Coughlin and attorneys," he explained. He added that certain people would be selected to speak during the hearing.

Carr said the focus of the hearing would be concerns over Coughlin's communication styles and skills but the hearing would not be the place to deal with questions that Coughlin has raised about water department Request for Proposals for a new water contract.

"This is about management of the employee," Carr said. "The place to have discussions about conflicts of interest and RFPs are with the state and not with us."

Selectmen can decide to terminate Coughlin without cause.

"We still have a town manager and that is Mike Coughlin," Carr said. "We have issues but we are not making any determination on what our future looks like in terms of long-term management.'

Carr closed his remarks by praising Milanoski's work and said the board decided he should be compensated.

SELECTMEN

Crunching numbers to balance budget

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The Board of Selectmen will meet twice next week. In addition to Tuesday's hearing about communication issues with suspended Town Manager Michael Coughlin (see related story), selectmen will be presented with a proposed fiscal 2013 balanced budget by acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski at 7 p.m. on Monday, March 12 in the conference room at the high school.

Milanoski presented a budget overview during this week's selectmen's meeting which showed that departmental requests for fiscal 2013 funds exceed anticipated revenues. Requests will have to be adjusted for the budget to be balanced, he said.

Selectmen recently voted to approve a spending freeze for the remainder for fiscal 2012, which ends June 30, in order to close an estimated $300,000 deficit this year.

Another potential issue on the horizon, Milanoski said, is that the town has contracts with about a dozen non-union employees that are being called into question. The contracts are the issue, not the employees. Most of the contracts pre-date Coughlin, he said. Under the Cohasset Town Manager Act, selectmen have veto power during a 15-day window over appointments made by the Town Manager – a provision that was not followed in some of these cases.

The only fully vetted contract is for newly hired Financial Director Mary Gallagher, Milanoski said.

In the middle ground are the two contracts for the deputy police chief and assistant fire chief. Selectmen were fully informed about the new deputy police chief and assistant fire chief positions and contracts, but the creation of those new positions should have gone before Town Meeting. Milanoski said he hopes that matter can be handled retroactively at May's annual Town Meeting.

The board met in executive session after Tuesday's regular meeting this week to discuss how to handle the rest of the non-union contracts. No specifics were offered as to what non-union town employees are affected.

TOWN ELECTION UPDATE

Running for reelection

Potential candidates pull papers

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Town election season is heating up, with citizens continuing to pull papers. The town election will take place on Saturday, May 19.

As reported two weeks ago, Board of Selectmen chairman Ted Carr is running for his seat again. If reelected, this would be his third term on the board.

Agnes McCann is seeking reelection on the Library Trustees; she has served since 1985 but said that this term may be her last.

Bryan Baldwin, Vice Chairman of the Sewer Commission, was specially appointed by the selectmen last summer and is running in his first election this spring.

School committee members Dr. Paul Schubert and Dr. Helene Lieb, who serves as a Chair, also pulled papers this week.

Roger Lowe has pulled papers to run for the one-year associate member seat on the Planning Board and Dan Martin is seeking reelection to the Recreation Commission. John Beck is seeking reelection to the Sewer Commission, and Patience Towle is running for reelection to the Library Trustees. Margaret "Peggy" Chapman has pulled papers for reelection to the Board of Health.

Newcomers in the running include Elizabeth (Deveney) Frazier for the Recreation Commission; Debra Krupczak for the Board of Assessors; and David Drinan for the Planning Board.

Last week, Drinan was specially appointed by the selectmen to serve as an associate on the Planning Board.

Frazier is excited for her first run for the Recreation Commission. Although she hasn't served on the board before, she used to type up their meeting minutes when she worked as secretary for the late Jack Worley (who served as Recreation Director for over 30 years before retiring four years ago) back when she was in high school.

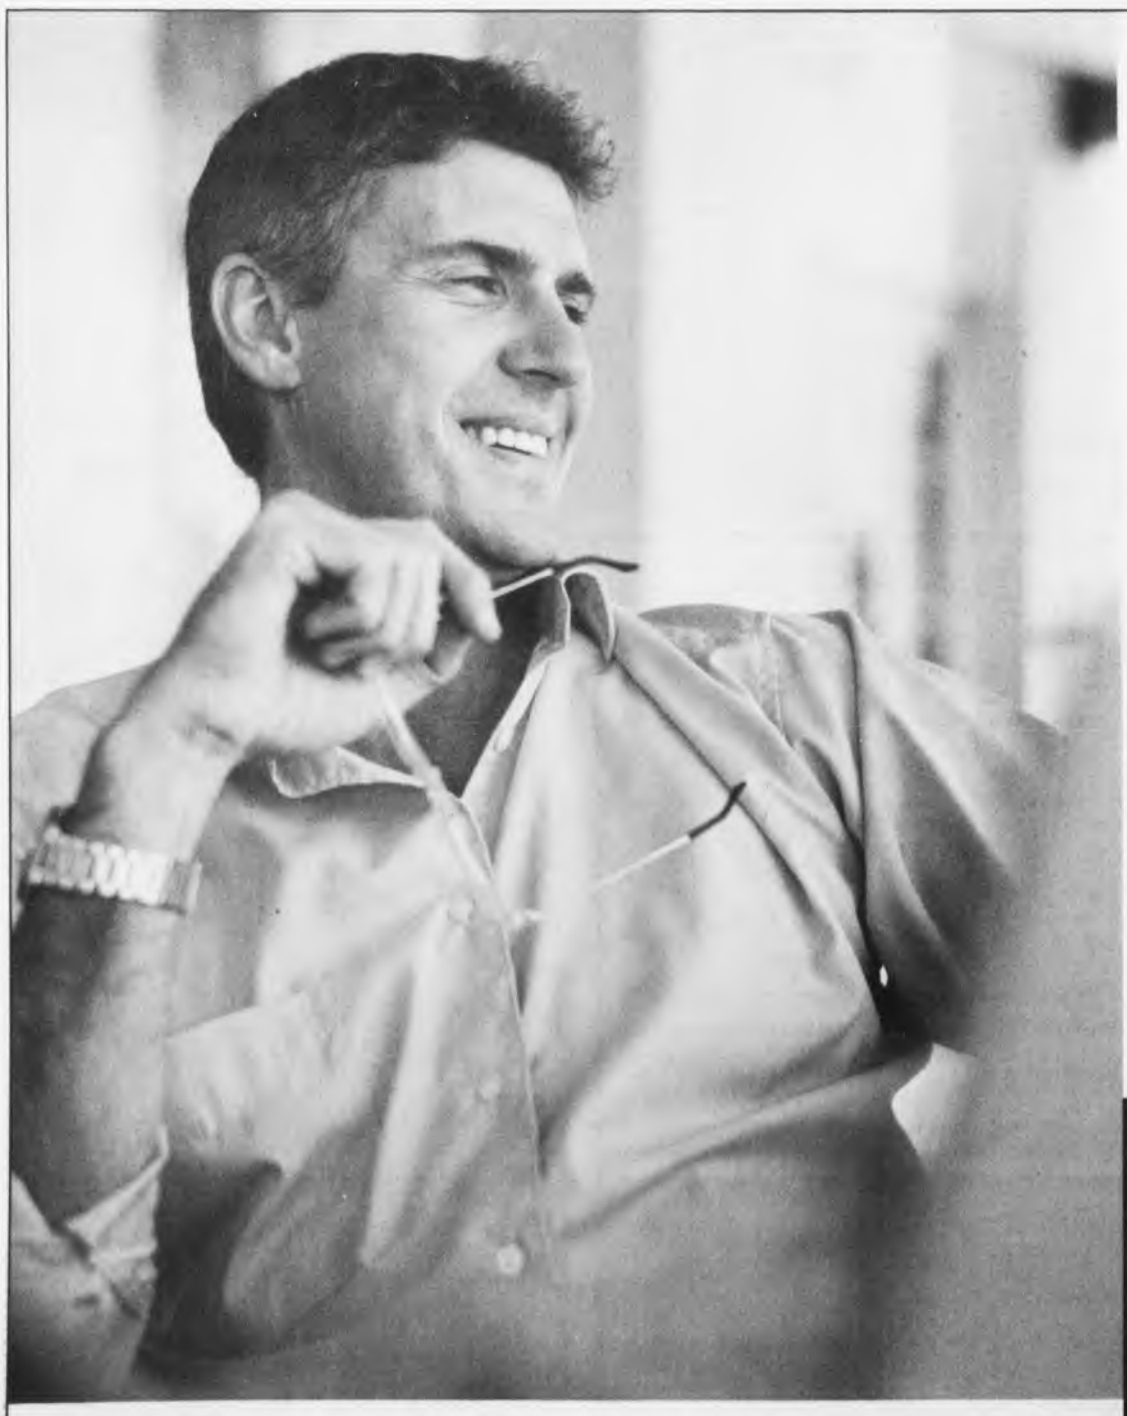
Frazier also has experience working in town recreation, as she ran a children's drama workshop through the recreation department for 15 years. She said that she is running for the commission in honor of Worley, who passed away in December.

"I'm doing this in honor of him, and it would be a nice thing to be a part of," said Frazier. "Having run a recreation program in the town, I understand how important it is. These programs are really what people want; they're affordable, and something people want to be a part of. I'm also a mother and understand what moms want. The kids in my program were age five to 12, so I'm familiar with that age group and the programs they would be interested in."

Baldwin, who is currently serving in an unfilled term that he was specially appointed to last August, said that he is technically running for reelection, although it's really his first election.

The vice chairman seat he is seeking is a three-year term, but there is also a one-year term open on the Sewer Commission.

Baldwin said that serving has been great so far. "Like all commissions, there is room for improvement, but there's a lot more transparency, openness and consistency, and I'm trying to help further that. We're making efforts to increase communication across all boards and commissions, working with the Board of Health, Board of Selectmen and Town Counsel, particularly in the absence of a town manager. In that interim, we're trying to keep the ball rolling."



Lieb said that she hopes to continue serving as chair of the school committee to allow for continuity on the board.

McCann, who is seeking her ninth term on the Library Trustees, said, "I'm definitely running for another three-year term and am looking forward to it. I've loved every single minute of it. We had a terrific library, and it's only gotten better; we have a super team running it. We also get enormous town support in terms of people using it and loving it and appreciating it."

"I've done a lot of work in the last three years and I want to continue this work to completion," said Lieb. "We have a relatively new superintendent and I'm working with her on a technology plan. We also have environmental initiatives planned and administrative work we're doing... there are four or five union contracts we're working on this year. Basically, there's so much work I've been doing in the past few years. I want to continue to work in these areas, especially on the technology and environmental plans, and coordinate with the town on those two initiatives. I also think it's important to have some continuity in leadership in terms of people on the board. Being chair, I've learned a lot in the trenches."

Carr said of working as selectmen chair, "This has been a dream opportunity for me. It's not about politics but about good government. For me, it's a great way to be involved in the community. I worked for the state and federal government and have a reputation for bringing in about a million dollars in grants to Cohasset over my two terms." The chairman added that he is currently seeking $1.8 million in additional grants, including one with Seaport "to help grow Cohasset's fishing fleet and solve high profile dredging issues" in Cohasset Harbor.

Carr said that he's happy to do this kind of work for the town and hopes to continue to see things through. "With everything going on in our current history – and it's nobody's fault – we have a chance to make significant wholesale changes that will benefit the town... I'm fully committed to the election and encourage other people to run for office."

COHASSET SAILING CLUB

Ship has sailed on clubhouse funds

May seek CPC money for new docks

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The Community Preservation Committee (CPC) has left the door open a crack for the Cohasset Sailing Club to revamp its request for money from the preservation fund to help pay for its planned, new clubhouse on Government Island.

The club had hoped that the new clubhouse would qualify either for money from the CPC's historic preservation or recreation accounts.

After an initial presentation before the CPC, the sailing club approached the Cohasset Historical Commission seeking its blessing, hoping that Cohasset's seafaring culture and history of sailing would help the project qualify.

While the commission acknowledged the historic importance that sailing has had in the community – it said the current clubhouse built in 1979 is not a historic structure.

The sailing club was seeking $82,000 plus a 10 percent contingency fund from the Community Preservation Fund to make the planned, new clubhouse completely handicapped accessible.

After the CPC talked with Town Counsel — coupled with the decision of the Cohasset Historical Commission — tapping money from the historic preservation fund has been ruled out, the CPC said.

CPC member Todd Goff said while the historical commission recognized the historical importance that sailing has to the tradition of seafaring it did not recognize the current clubhouse as historically significant.

He further explained that the money being sought was not for the culture or essence of sailing but specifically for the structure.

Goff said under the Community Preservation Act – which the CPC must follow — the sailing club was at a dead end in terms of getting money from the historic preservation account. "That avenue seems pretty much closed," he said.

He likened the request to saying that house building is quintessential to the Cohasset experience.

"I am working on my house right now," he said hypothetically. "Shouldn't I be able to get CPC funding for that?"

However, there still remains a small window of opportunity that the exterior docking, which will also be handicapped accessible, could qualify under the recreation category. But CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti said at a recent CPC meeting that he was making no promises.

"I have no problem approaching Town Counsel again and I will do it until the end of time – but I don't want the proponents to go forward without acknowledging we still might run into the same problem," he said.

One of the caveats for using money from the recreation account is that the property had to have been acquired with CPC funds. The sailing club leases the land from the town for a nominal fee.

CPC member Susan Hoadley, an architect who worked pro bono on the project, recused herself and sat in the audience. She was allowed to speak to the proposal as a proponent.

She noted that the decking and instructional areas make up a large part of the project and are associated with the clubhouse but would function independently.

"The access to the water is important because right now it is not possible for someone in a wheelchair to get from the parking lot to the boats because of the terrain," she said.

Hoadley asked if the CPC would consider it a worthy exercise in resubmitting the application focusing on the docking.

Bonetti left the door open but asked the sailing club representatives to keep in mind that the CPC cannot fund a program.

Ground was broken for the current clubhouse in 1979. The new clubhouse will be completely handicap accessible.

About the CPA

- The Community Preservation Act was signed into law 10 years ago and from that point on, some 148 cities and towns including Cohasset have adopted the legislation allowing them to obtain Community Preservation Funds to purchase open space; rehabilitate historic structures and develop affordable housing.
- The Community Preservation Committee reviews proposals and recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation. Town Meeting voters have the final say.

CPA funds

- CPA funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined from year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds Office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).
- Under the Community Preservation Act, 10 percent of the monies accumulated in a town's Community Preservation Fund must be spent or reserved for preserving open space, 10 percent toward historic preservation, and 10 percent toward community housing. The remaining 70 percent can be spent or reserved for any of the above and recreation. Any money in the fund that is not appropriated can be reserved for future years. Borrowing is also allowed with payments for interest and principal coming out of the fund.
- In fiscal 2011, the most recent year for which figures are available, the town raised $363,829.80 through the 1.5 percent real estate surcharge. In addition, the state matched 27 percent or $96,754.
Available for appropriation at the May annual Town Meeting is a yet undetermined amount of estimated fiscal 2013 revenue, and $149,526 plus any previous article balances that the Community Preservation Committee decides to closeout.

What's going to Town Meeting and what's not:

So far, CPC will recommend the following at the annual Town Meeting:
- A request for $65,000 from First Parish Church to restore the windows in the 1747 meetinghouse.
- A request from the Town for $12,500 to restore the four clock faces on the town-owned clock in the First Parish Meetinghouse steeple.
- A request from the Town of Cohasset/Water Dept. for $25,000 for final surveying at five points in the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area. When the boundaries are located and marked, a Conservation Restriction will be drafted, signed and recorded for the benefit of the Trustees of Reservations. (The Trustees paid $60,000 for the Conservation Restriction and has agreed to maintain the trails in the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area in conjunction with their trail system I Thayer/Whitney Woods.

Under consideration:
- An expected request from the Town of Cohasset for $6,000 to restore the Minot Light Oil Shed by the sailing club. The town owns the shed.

Pending
- A revamped request for money to build handicapped-accessible docks at the Cohasset Sailing Club (see related story).

Not recommended:
- A request for $185,000 from the Cohasset Historical Society to turn the garage behind Town Hall into a fire/police museum. The CPC liked the concept but did not think it qualified for preservation funding in the historical resources category.
- A request for $60,000 from the Emergency Management Committee for a generator for the community room in the elderly housing complex off Elm Street. The generator would have provided heating or cooling in the common room of the Harborview Apartments in the case of an extended power outage. The CPC did not think the proposal qualified under the affordable housing funding category.

Scouts collect cookies for troops

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Spring!

Hello Cohasset! Well, here we are, one step closer to Spring and I am so surprised to see all the flowers that are already poking up in random places and looking a little confused but filled with purples and whites galore. Having the windows open a few days this past week, definitely makes me look ahead to warmer days but also, reminds me how changeable March can be so enjoy what each day brings, one at a time, with the weather, with family and friends and with life. Have a good week Cohasset.

Special treat

A wonderful thank you shout-out is being sent to a group of Girl Scouts, Daisy Troop #85344 for collecting cookies for local troops overseas. The Troop leaders are Melissa Coggeshall and Barbara Fish and the girls are Kathryn Coggeshall, Piper Quigley, Ella Shepherd and Grace Shepherd. Thank you so much to the leaders and girls for the hard work and cookies, the troops are going to love them. This thank you came to me from a very grateful and appreciative woman, Ann Marie Goff who is so wonderful and generous with her time to the troops as well. Great job to all.

Animal shelter

Here is a great reason to save your Spring cleaning treasures! The Scituate Animal Shelter volunteers will be collecting donations of your new or gently used household items in preparation for the HUGE Yard Sale April 14-15. Items may be dropped off at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Route 3A, Scituate during the following times: Wednesday March 28: 6pm-8pm, Friday March 30: 10am-12pm, Saturday March 31: 10am-2pm, Sunday April 1: 11am-1pm and Saturday April 7: 10am-2pm.

Items which are not accepted are: TVs, computers or computer accessories, exercise or ski equipment, large furniture, clothing, used bedding or damaged/broken items. Proceeds from the Yard Sale will benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter, an independent, non-profit animal shelter which serves the greater South Shore community and beyond. More details online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org or call (781) 544-4533.

Art center

The South Shore Art Center has announced its spring schedule of courses and workshops, including several master workshops with visiting artists. Among the many classes scheduled for the spring is a Wednesday evening portrait class with Dianne Panarelli Miller, and an 8-week course in creative photography. Classes begin the week of April 23rd. There will be an April Vacation Camp for children in grades 1-4 from Tuesday, April 17 through Friday, April 20 – 9:30-12:30. An art show will be held at the end of the week with students encouraged to invite friends and family to attend. Register online at www.ssac.org or call for more information call 781-383-2787.

PROFILE

Horace W. Wadleigh (1848-1914)'s summer home at 546 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset.

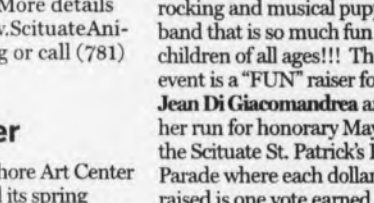
Early library donor Horace W. Wadleigh

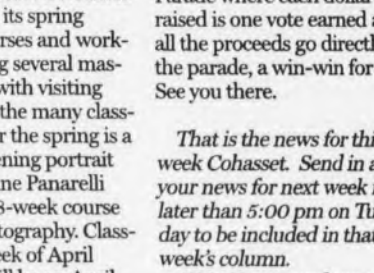
The Cohasset Library Trust's Endowment Donor Wall is located in the entrance to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. It honors those who have made significant gifts to the library over more than 100 years. These gifts created the library's endowment. Some gifts were made by bequest in a donor's will. Others were gifts from family and friends to memorialize or honor individuals.

From time to time, the Library Trust has published short pieces about the people whose names are on the Donor Wall. This article profiles Horace W. Wadleigh, whose 1914 bequest added $5,000 to the library's endowment, the equivalent of $110,000 in today's dollars.

Horace W. Wadleigh was born on May 18, 1848, in Tilton, N.H., and grew up in nearby Sanbornton. He was the youngest of four children of Warren (a "joiner" or carpenter) and Harriet Wadleigh. By the time of the 1870 census, Horace was living on Congress Street in Boston and working as a store clerk. He found financial success as a leather dealer in the city. In fact, in 1888 Mr. Wadleigh was listed in a book called, "Twenty Thousand Rich New Englanders: A List of Taxpayers Who Were Assessed in 1888 to Pay a Tax of One Hundred Dollars or More," apparently an impressive tax burden in those days. He served as a director of the American Hide and Leather Company, a trustee of the Franklin Savings Bank of the City of Boston, and a director of the Lowney Chocolate Company. He was also a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts, the oldest chartered military organization in North America, which was by then primarily an honor guard and social and ceremonial group. It still exits today, serving as honor guard for the Governor.

Mr. Wadleigh lived at 234 Commonwealth Avenue in Boston. In 1888, he bought a summer home at 546 Jerusalem Road in Cohasset. The house is pictured here in an 1890 photograph from the Cohasset Historical Society. His household included his wife, Mary, stepson, William Alden, and several servants.





Mr. Wadleigh was known during his lifetime for his commitment to numerous civic organizations in Boston and Cohasset. In 1911, he gave the town part of the small triangular park at the foot of Forest Avenue now known as "Wadleigh Park." He also gave books to the Library for several years before his death in 1914 at the age of 66.

His will reflects his reputation as a "generous and public spirited citizen" (in the words of the library directors' 1915 report to the town). In addition to his $5,000 bequest to the Cohasset Library, he also left to the library "a large number of choice books," and bequeathed to the town additional land for Wadleigh Park. Boston institutions also benefited from his generosity. He left $125,000 to the Museum of Fine Arts, another $125,000 to MIT, and $136,000 to various other charitable groups.

While Mr. Wadleigh left no descendants, his name lives on in Cohasset through Wadleigh Park and his bequest to the library.

The Cohasset Library Trust was established to increase and prudently manage the library's endowment, including bequests left long ago by donors such as Mr. Wadleigh. Tax support of the library has been declining as a percentage of the Town of Cohasset's budget for at least a decade. New gifts to the Cohasset Library Trust will join old gifts to assure the continued quality of this town treasure. Gifts of $5,000 or more to the Library Trust will be honored with a listing on the Endowment Wall.

CITIZEN

that Turkey Hill was preserved as open space as reasons for their decision.

Vee, who was born on Groundhog Day and recently turned 79, joins 18 previous citizens of the year. The Cohasset Mariner started the annual recognition back in 1993.

Caught by surprise when called about being named this year's award-winner, Vee was gracious in accepting the honor. She will be recognized formally with a special reception later this spring.

A native of Lockport, New York located by the Erie Canal – where Vee spent her youth – she moved farther east and attended the University of Vermont. She graduated with a teaching degree, returned home to teach in Niagara and then went to Boston University for graduate school where she studied special education.

It is BU that Cohasset has to thank for hooking Vee up with Arthur Roebuck (they met on the front steps of Arthur's fraternity house), who eventually brought her to Cohasset.

Arthur is unabashedly Vee's biggest fan. "She does so much very quietly – she is amazing," he says.

The two have run Arthur Roebuck Catering for many years. Their careers in the food business also included the former British Relief in downtown Hingham.

The parents of four and grandparents of two initially started out in Cohasset on South Main Street before moving to the Victorian farmhouse they have called home for more than 30 years.

Vee laughs when explaining that in preparing for our interview she asked Conservation Agent Paul Shea for some highlights. He quickly reminded her of the day when a woman who was upset with the way the legal matters were proceeding, walloped Vee in the head with her handbag outside Dedham Land Court. She took the incident in stride.

Vee Roebuck, Citizen of the Year, on a walk in Wompatuck State Park. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

During her tenure on the Conservation Commission, Vee served on the Hagerty Committee, charged with finding the best use for the former Cohasset Colonials industrial site at the end of Parker Avenue.

"Vee single-handedly took on the Army Corps, DEP, DEM and whatever alphabet departments we had to deal with – an unenviable task to say the least," Bonetti recalled. "It was her knowledge and hard work that made the whole project come to fruition."

At the dedication of Mariner's Park – which is at the foot of Parker Avenue – Bonetti fondly recalls introducing Vee as the person most responsible for the success of the project. He said at the time: "do you want to talk to the man in charge, or would you rather talk to the woman who knows what is going on?"

Although well aware that his wife is a star in her own right – Arthur also acknowledges that Vee's organization, attention to detail and paperwork skills have been key to the success of their food catering business and former restaurant. In its day, the British Relief was a popular eatery in downtown Hingham where people could get a good, healthy meal inexpensively and serve themselves cafeteria style. It was not unusual for restaurant guests to break out in song encouraging others to join in. The "big table" from the British Relief proudly stands today in the Roebuck's dining area.

Both Vee and Arthur love Cohasset, where they raised their family.

Cohasset residents may see Vee around town or walking the trails at Thayer Whitney Woods or Wompatuck State Park with her new puppy, Nellie, a chocolate Labrador retriever.

Jeff Waal, who served with Vee for many years on the Conservation Commission, summed it up:

"Vee's not afraid to get wet. She'll show up ready to go for a walk in the woods. Even if that means walking over some soggy ground and battling our way through a briar patch, she's ready for it," Waal said.

Fine citizens nominated for annual award

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Mariner received 17 nominations from literally dozens of individuals for the annual Citizen of the Year Award. A selection committee consisting of Taffy Nothnagle, Wayne Sawchuk, Roger Whitley and AJ Anotine, all of Cohasset, joined editor Mary Ford in poring over the nominations at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday and selected Veneta "Vee" Roebuck for the annual award.

The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about the other very deserving candidates including:

• Joe Campbell, a coach of youth basketball and baseball, and a tireless support person in town sports activities, and for his support in hosting fundraisers or awards dinner for numerous local sports teams and other groups; and for his support of the METCO program, among other good works.

• Debbie Cook for her professionalism, boundless energy and supreme dedication to the town in more than 20 years of service on the Conservation Commission and for her service on the Community Preservation Committee, League of Women Voters, Advisory Committee, Open Space Committee, Master Planning Committee and much more.

• Jane Corry for her tireless efforts in running the Cohasset Food Pantry, spending countless hours seeking and picking up donations and delivering food to those unable to drive to the pantry.

• Jane Corry and Moira Stansell for the wonderful job they do at the food pantry. They are kind and considerate to everyone who comes in and make sure people feel welcome. They put in many hours each week; it is almost a full-time job.

• Mike Coughlin for his efforts to do the best for Cohasset and obey the laws of the land.

• Department of Public Works team of gentlemen who manage and run the Cohasset Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF). In many ways this team has transformed the transfer facility into its own unique community, a place where neighbors connect for a few moments while they unload cars, where people come to looks for a treasure, and where residents can recycle.

• Pat McCarthy for all he does to help Cohasset seniors driving the van. A Cohasset native, he takes pride in the town and the people that live here.

• Joe McElroy for his dedicated service to veterans and their families, finding those who need services and benefits; for organizing the fundraising for converting the former Lightkeepers house into the popular Bancroft Hall. Joe has served on numerous boards and committees and never looks for any fanfare.

• Al Moore for his many years of service on the Planning Board where, as chairman, he helped lead a board charged with some of the most important issues in terms of preserving Cohasset's character. He has been a tireless worker for the town.

• Patrick Reardon who volunteered to serve as Cohasset's K-9 Police Officer and recently completed the 16-week training program with Erik, the new K-9. He continues to serve the town and recently has volunteered many times with Erik at various public events.

• Jill Rosano for putting forth such compassion and humanity to all the residents at 60 Elm St. She advocated for all of their needs and is an amazing human being.

• Dr. Susan Schrager for starting talks that led to the town's No Hate Policy. For her continuous smile, positive outlook, remembering everyone's names and for never saying a bad word about anyone.

• Chartis Langmaid Tebbetts for a lifetime of public service that includes her service and leadership on the League of Women Voters, School Committee and Advisory Committee; for her ongoing commitment to social justice whether helping the homeless or the environment.

• Jean White, educator, environmentalist, hands-on farmer, land steward and conservationist. Her dedication, tireless energy and enthusiasm ensure the continuation of the vision shared with her late husband Frank to teak the value of sustainable farming principles that produce healthy food and stewardship of the land.

• "Team Wigmore" (Tommy and Deirdre Wigmore) for becoming a force to be reckoned with when it comes to veterans affairs, memorial and charitable causes, community events and elderly outreach. They organize and run the Memorial Day Parade and Cohasset Healing Field; Toys for Tots drop-off at the police station, and are joint commanders of the Sons of the American Legion and Ladies' Auxiliary, to name a few.

• Jack M. Worley, a true gentleman, who served the Town of Cohasset as recreation director over 35 years. Jack was a great good-will ambassador and dedicated his life to Cohasset Recreation. He personally affected the lives of countless youngsters in the town.

CARRIAGE HOUSE NURSERY SCHOOL FUN(D)RAISER

Casino Night is not to be missed!

By Raina S. Elfner
Special to the Mariner

No plans this Saturday evening? You're in luck! The much anticipated Carriage House Nursery School's Casino Night Fundraiser, "Come Play," is going on Saturday night from 6-10pm, and tickets are still available! The Carriage House Nursery School, 23 North Main St., is a beloved preschool, which has been serving children in our community since 1978. This Saturday's fundraiser promises to be a fun-filled event featuring casino games, music by DJ Scott Events, a silent auction, raffles, light hors d'oeuvres, and the chance to see some old friends and make some new ones! Proceeds from the event will help fund the purchase of a new school playground that will help enrich the lives of children at Carriage House for years to come.

Along with exciting casino games presented by Casino Productions, the ever-popular silent auction, made possible by generous contributions by local and area businesses and individuals, is sure to be one of the highlights of the evening. Some of the fabulous prizes you can bid on include: an overnight stay and dinner at the Red Lion Inn; a weekend Nantucket getaway; a pair of Jet Blue tickets; gift certificates to local shops and eateries including Feng Shui, Victoria's Pizzeria, Mr. Dooley's, and Stop and Shop; and sports tickets to some of your favorite teams, the Celtics, Patriots and Red Sox! Other exciting packages include memberships to Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum, the South Shore Music Circus, The South Shore Art Center, the South Shore Athletic Club, the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell and tickets to the New England Aquarium in Boston!

The auction has something for everyone, including sports packages for kids — fun on the field for your little soccer player at the Cohasset Sports Complex, time on the golf course at Par-Tee Indoor Miniature Golf, ice time at Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham and a gift from Good Sport. Or how about giving your child a visit to the South Shore Children's Dentistry or Cohasset Dental? Or some fun at Mathnasium, the Math Learning Center? Afterwards, your child and some of his/her friends might enjoy a private tour of the Cohasset Police and Fire Stations with a ride in a real police car and fire engine!

For the grown-ups, consider treating yourself to a design consult from Tiryaki Architectural Design, a photo shoot from Lisa Gilbert Photography, a home consult with My Organized Life, and some goodies from P.S. Stationery and Home Goods! For the golfer in you: tee-times for you and your friends at Black Rock Country Club in Hingham. If you're looking for something sparkly for a loved one, we have gift certificates to Cohasset Jewelers and Matthew's Jewelers, and bracelets from King Jewelers. Or find that special gift for a friend from Buttonwood Books and Toys. Wine packages, including a wine fridge, wine from Curtis Liquors, and starfish glassware from Darilynn's Home Presence will also be featured. It's all here!

And with spring right around the corner, pick out something new for the season from Ports & Co., Chel Bella, or throw a night out for you and a bunch of your girlfriends at Pink Tulip and Willow Salon and Spa. Or, if you'd prefer to pamper yourself, take some time out at Adamo Spa Retreat, Nails Essentials and Julie Martin Massage. All of that, plus gorgeous handmade crafts by Carriage House students and fantastic donations from their teachers will also be available for the evening. Winners of the casino games will also have chances to win fabulous prizes!

Generously sponsored by Pilgrim Bank, Cohasset Collision Center, The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club, Sullivan, Garrity, and Donnelly Insurance Agency, Sports Specific Fitness, Rockland Trust, James F. Kearney & Company Certified Public Accountants, Stevens Development, and the Creative Dance Center, we are proud of the amount of involvement by community and area members. And with catering by The Silent Chef, treats by Wicked Good Cupcakes, and home-baked goods donated by our parents, the evening promises to be a sweet time for all!

Admission to the event is $50 per person. Cash bar. Tickets can be purchased at the door or online at www.carriagehousenurseryschool.com/20112012-come-play-fundraiser.

Still on the fence about what to do Saturday night? We didn't think so!

Tickets are from $40.00 to $55.00
Group, senior and student tickets are available

The Red Star Red Army Chorus and Dance Ensemble returns to the United States for its 20th Anniversary since their very exciting debut tour of 1992. During the last 20 years, the Ensemble has performed in over 150 American cities with sellout performances in New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Miami, Boston, just to name a few.

"...the dancers executed a number of flamboyant, gravity-defying maneuvers, including pirouettes and leaps. At the same time, they didn't wander too far from the graceful poise grounded in years of formal ballet training." – Chicago Tribune.

Come and experience the Red Star Red Army Chorus & Dance Ensemble performance in person. The program will take you on a journey of Russian music, traditional folk songs, featuring the famous Meadowlands, Moscow Nights and world famous Dark Eyes, interspersed with wonderful dances of amazing vitality.

This is a great show!

GIMME SHELTER

Duchess has a story to tell

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Duchess. Duchess once had a home. HSAR doesn't know just what transpired but someone found Duchess and her littermate Duke in an unoccupied apartment. They had been living there for quite some time. HSAR thinks someone may have been feeding them, as they are quite healthy looking. They were so good at hiding that HSAR finally had to trap them in order to bring them to the shelter. They are doing fine now and though it would be great if they could be adopted together, they would be fine on their own.

Duchess is quite the beauty. She's been spayed and is up to date on all her shots. She would like a home where she can interact with humans. She would make a great companion for any animal friendly family. She's hoping that people will come by to meet her. She wants you to know that she is totally non-aggressive.

It's time to visit the shelter if you're looking for a lovable feline friend. While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

COHASSET ROTARY CLUB

International conflict resolution discussion

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

On March 12 the Cohasset Rotary Club & District 7950 Peace and Conflict Resolution Committee and will host Professor Padraig O'Malley for dinner and a discussion of the Forum for Cities in Transition From Conflict program.

O'Malley is the University Of Massachusetts Moakley Professor of International Peace and Reconciliation and founded the FCTC in 2010.

The FCTC is an international network of cities represented by their municipal officials, business and community leaders. The Forum works on the principle that cities that are in conflict or have emerged from conflict are in the best position to help other cities in the same situation. They meet annually to discuss their progress and set goals, then work with each other in mentoring relationships throughout the year at reaching those goals.

Professor O'Malley is speaking at the 2012 Rotary International Convention in Bangkok and will moderate a breakout session on Conflict Resolution at the Convention.

He has worked on conflict resolution in divided societies for decades, most notably in Northern Ireland and South Africa. In 2010 he inaugurated the FCT with four cities and it has since grown to 12: Beirut, Belfast, Derry-Londonderry, Haifa, Jerusalem, Kaduna, Kirkuk, Mitrovica, Mitte, Mostar, Nicosia and Ramalla This event is a wonderful opportunity to meet one of the world leaders in conflict resolution and to hear innovative solutions to divided societies.

Road race is long-time tradition

The 36th annual Cohasset Road Race By The Sea and Fran Coffey Memorial Walk are presented by Rotary Club of Cohasset

For 36 years, Cohasset has been home to one of the most scenic 6.2-mile road racecourses in New England. Register now at racebythesea.com to secure your spot at this year's race, which takes place on Sunday, April 1st at 1 p.m.

There are many traditions each runner can count on.

- Post race festivities will feature bagels and fruit, in addition to the traditional favorite...hot dogs (check out our online registration to answer the all important question: Do you want mustard on your hot dog?).
- Prizes for the top three male and female finishers in six age categories
- Entertainment by the Armstrong Brothers Band
- Commemorative long sleeved T-shirt with eye-catching 2012 logo.

There is also a fantastic family event and fun walk...the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk which starts and ends at Sandy Beach at 10 a.m. that same day. Walkers are encouraged to register on line at roadracebythesea.com

If running or walking is not your idea of fun, then please volunteer and help make the race the best it can be for all of our participants. If you have a group of friends, family or coworkers who would like to help out at registration and on race day, please contact roadracebythesea@gmail.com

Spring is already in the air. Register at roadracebythesea.com and then get out there and start training. Don't miss out!!! There is NO Race Day registration. (and don't forget to "Like" us on Facebook for the latest updates and race news.)

Abbey film

Enjoy a casual evening of movie watching and discussion. This series includes films that address themes of faith, morality, and spiritual meaning. There is no charge, but donations are gratefully accepted for the support of the Abbey Center. For more information visit the Glastonbury Abbey Web site www.glastonburyabbey.org

Next movie will be Tuesday, March 13, 7 p.m. at the Glastonbury Abbey Center, 16 Hull St., Hingham.

Whale Rider (2002, 101 minutes). Pai is the only direct descendent in the lineage of chiefs of the Whangara Maori people in New Zealand. But despite her skills in tribal traditions, her grandfather will not anoint her chief because she is not a male. Pai trusts that she is called to lead her people, and undertakes a spiritual quest to prove it. This film addresses themes of changing tradition and female leadership, as well as the mystical relationship with the natural world affirmed by many ancient peoples.

Movie Night

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's next Movie Night is at 7 p.m. Friday, March 16, at the Paul Pratt Library.

"The Best Government Money Can Buy" is the first behind the scenes, comprehensive, non-partisan examination of the system of lobbying in Washington, D.C. The cost of election campaigns has spiraled out of control, to the extent that, on average, our representatives spend more than 25 percent of their time fundraising. There's so much time spent on fund-raising surely cutting into the time legislators have for doing the public's business. Even our Presidents interrupt the nation's work in order to spend time fundraising. Veteran documentary filmmaker, British-born Francis Megahy, makes a journey of discovery as he tries to answer some questions which puzzle him: who provides money? What impact does it have? How is it connected to the financing of political campaigns? And most crucial, is it in the public interest? This film explores these issues with interviews with real Washington beltway insiders, key participants in the process - who often speak with surprising candor.

Currently there are more lobbyists than members of Congress. According to a study by The Center for Responsive Politics, "special interests paid Washington lobbyists $3.2 billion in 2008—more than any other year on record. This was a 13.7 percent increase from 2007 (which broke the record by 7.7 percent over 2006)." "The Center calculates that interest groups spent $17.4 million on lobbying for every day Congress was in session in 2008, or $32,523 per legislator per day." Center director Sheila Krumholz says, "The federal government is handing out billions of dollars by the day, and that translates into job security for lobbyists who can help companies and industries get a piece of the payout."

'Evening to Remember' is Saturday

"An Evening to Remember" with cocktails, fashion and fun to benefit Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization and Our World Discovery Museum is presented by LemonLime Salon and Ports & Company.

- When: March 10 from 7 - 11 p.m.
- Where: Atlantica Restaurant, Cohasset

This fundraiser and celebration of life will feature hors d'oeuvres, cocktails, and both a Live and silent auction. WCVB-TV's Susan Wornick will serve as the evening's host and auctioneer. A highlight of the event will be a Ports & Company Fashion Show.

The Learn, Live, Love Cancer Outreach Organization was established in 2005. Their mission is to provide financial assistance to women and families in local communities who have been touched by the devastation of cancer. Theirs is a vision inspired by the sincerest belief that shared knowledge is power and shared experience is healing. For more information about the organization visit learnlivelove.org.

Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum was founded in 2001. The Museum is an educational, and social learning center for children ages 1-8. For toddlers and younger children, there are playing stations that encourage imagination & pretend play, and displays to promote learning.

OUR VIEW

Citizen of the Year

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, it is our pleasure to announce that Veneta "Vee" Roebuck is Citizen of the Year.

Vee is a familiar figure around town but her favorite spots are places like Wompatuck State Park and Thayer and Whitney Woods where Vee can be seen hiking the trails with her new puppy, Nellie.

We have her husband, Arthur, to thank for snapping Vee up when he first met her and eventually relocating to Cohasset. And we need to thank local resident and fellow conservationist Merle Brown who saw Vee on her riding lawnmower in 1985 and asked her to join the Conservation Commission.

Vee fondly recalls asking Merle – "What is the Conservation Commission?"

She would soon find out and quickly become one if its most dedicated members. Vee has the wonderful quality of sticking to the rules to make sure that wetlands are protected while making applicants feel welcome. She helps demystify the process.

Vee was one of 17 nominees for the annual Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year award, which the Mariner debuted back in 1993.

While nominations were open, dozens of individuals or families took the time to propose a citizen for the annual award, detailing the nominees' contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

Roger Whitley, Taffy Nothnagle, AJ Antoine and Wayne Sawchuk joined editor Mary Ford this year in serving on the Citizen on the Year selection committee. They convened on a recent Sunday afternoon at the Cohasset Mariner office on South Street in Hingham to pore over the nominations and reach a decision. Careful consideration was given to all the wonderful nominees this year. The final decision to select Vee Roebuck was unanimous.

When he heard the news, Jeff Waal, who served for many years on the Conservation Commission with Vee, offered this perspective:

"She was knowledgeable and energetic and served with the vigor of a person half of her age. When we did a site inspection together, she would lead the way pointing out various points of interest, discuss the history of the land involved (she knew a lot) and hurry to the next spot. I had trouble keeping up.

"Vee's not afraid to get wet. She'll show up ready to go for a walk in the woods. Even if that means walking over some soggy ground and battling our way through a briar patch, she's ready for it," he said.

Conservation Commission Chairman David Farrag pointed out that Vee is one of the longest serving members on the Conservation Commission.

"She has been a critical member and has been instrumental in protecting Cohasset's environment, aesthetics and town character," he said. "I don't think there is an acre in town that she hasn't walked on. Vee's deep knowledge and history of projects and the town have always been crucial for the Conservation Commission and all its members."

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Town of Cohasset financial responsibility

I was greatly heartened by the budget presentation and actions of Mary Gallagher, Mary Quill, and Michael Milanoski in presenting a responsible and sustainable 2013 budget. This is being done with directness and transparency in order to create a stable financial environment for the town.

There is much commentary about the accuracy of current revenue and spending figures. We are still reeling from several years of very sloppy financial practices. At this point in time can any of us be 100 percent positive that past spending has been accurately portrayed? In addition we certainly do not know where revenue and expenses will be in June of 2013. To use conservative revenue figures, build free cash and stabilization funds, and limit the spending creep is the proper direction for the Town to move in. Until our new accounting system fully takes hold (maybe next year) we must adopt this posture. The Town does not need to present a spending deficit to the voters at a future Special Town Meeting.

The approval of Financial Management Policies by the Board of Selectmen provides an excellent guideline in moving forward to get our financial house in order and provide the citizens of the Town with efficient and responsible government.

I believe that the additional review and input from the Advisory Committee, Capital Budget, and Budget Planning Group will get the Town on a solid footing and achieve the goal of a AAA bond rating. We all need to move forward, stop fighting past battles, and support those carrying the torch.

Sam Wakeman,
255 Atlantic Avenue

Time to reconsider your decision

To the Selectmen:

Usually I do not get involved in town politics.

But since I am probably one who pays the highest taxes in town I am appalled how the town is run. The firing of the Town Manager, after the disaster with the water department, shows the lack of professionalism.

I met Mr. Coughlin a few times and found him competent and professional.

I was president of some large computer companies and know that a management job is not a popularity contest.

Please reconsider your decision and spend my money wisely.

Maybe the time has come to change the town governing structure and have it run by a mayor.

Gerd Ordelheide,
71 South St.

Protecting our water treatment future

There will be a presentation by the Water Department at the High School on March 26 at 7 p.m. to explain and discuss the plan to manage Cohasset's future water supply. Let us hope it is well attended by fair and open-minded people to offset time-wasting disruption by the inevitable skeptics who have little faith in the integrity and competence of our hard-working elected officials.

Despite the nasty and ill-informed inferences floating around town, I think the majority of Cohasset voters are fair minded, willing to be informed, and unsympathetic to irresponsible and under-informed carping.

Let us hope a good sample of that majority shows up. We have serious business to conduct at Town Meeting and our financial future will be best served by willingness to consider and discuss the issues objectively.

If you think this is admonition presumptuous and needless, come to the meeting and help ensure that is the case. If you share my concern, all the more reason to show up.

R. Murray Campbell,

COMMENTARY

How did we get here?

KAREN QUIGLEY

Why? He dared to insist the best interests of the town take precedence over those of the very special interest groups.

People ask if I can explain the complicated and confusing goings on in Town Hall, simply. Here goes...

A group of smart, successful, elitist individuals control town government. Not used to being challenged, they believe their intelligence and success entitles them: they are not subject to the same rules and laws as the rest of us.

They were/are elected and appointed officials and enlisted the aid of some of their colleagues to subvert process and procedure. Along the way, they scoffed at the Open Meeting Law, the Town Manager Act, as well as Ethics, Finance and Procurement Law.

Their message is loud and clear: if you dare to question or oppose us we will get rid of you. Witness the disappointment of three Conservation Commissioners who the E-20 merely thought might not vote their way; the vilification of the Bear Hill residents for daring to try to protect their private property rights; the criticism of those questioning the Water Commission's recent RFP; and the threatening of the Deputy Assessor for denying a reassessment application (listed in public police report).

The Town Manager stepped into a mess not of his making but which occurred under his critics' tenure. Inevitably, he ran afoul of them and was replaced with one of their own. Why? He dared to insist the best interests of the town take precedence over those of the very special interest groups. For example, the Town Manager:

1. Required, and obtained funding for, a feasibility and needs assessment for the new senior center project;

2. Insisted Town Counsel represent the town in legal proceedings regarding Cat Dam – as opposed to the E-20 abutters' private attorney;

3. Tried to exert co-management of the water enterprise fund as authorized by town meeting;

4. Expressed concerns over the Water Commission's proposed 20-year concession agreement and had the audacity to ask them to delay issuing it until it could be fully and publicly vetted;

5. Prioritized the closing of the books and DOR reporting over providing information to town officials;

6. Took steps to remedy the deficiencies in staffing of the finance department as outlined in previous audits and by DOR

The Fait Accompli is complete. They own the town and the purse strings and they're unabashed by the public's rapidly growing concern. Our only recourse is the ballot box but that requires that impartial (i.e. without agendas/vendettas) candidates with titanium backbones step forward. Anyone?

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

TOTEM POLES: Story-telling on a tree!

MARY KENNEDY

They were coastal Indians living in the northwest areas of North America, more rooted to the land than nomadic. Their culture was rich in storytelling traditions, yet without a written language. To preserve their tales, they carved them on wooden poles and raised them into the sky. Red cedar in natural abundance provided the raw material.

When the first European missionaries arrived in the early 1800s, they traded more sophisticated metal tools for furs – beaver especially – and the art of totem carving really began to flourish.

In the Ojibwa language, the word nintotem means "my family." For the Indians, a totem was a natural object, often an animal, taken as the emblem of a tribal family. The totem pole itself would be carved and painted with representations of totems. Nature also provided the colors: charcoal for black; baked clamshells for white; salmon oil mixed with coppery clay for yellow; roots from berry bushes for red. Abalone shells decorated teeth, eyes, and even the insides of ears.

The carvings reveal the history, legends, special events of a tribe; the adventures of a chief or even the memory of a special person. Also popular were "ridicule" poles, erected to embarrass someone who had refused to pay a debt or failed to keep a promise.

Totem poles were carved from the top down, one figure at a time, and also "read" that way. Animals, fish, people, even imaginary creatures, all told a story. Sometimes the carvings identified a clan. For example, an eagle on top meant "home of the eagle clan members." An eagle at the bottom, however, meant that the owner's wife was an eagle clan member. Skilled carvers, much in demand and well paid, traveled from village to village to fulfill orders.

Raven was always carved with a straight beak, or with none at all when the carving illustrated the popular legend of how Raven once lost his beak.
COURTESY ILLUSTRATION

When a totem pole was finished, the owner had to throw a celebration party (potlach) that might last several weeks or even months. The host had to offer not only food and drink but also a gift to each guest. Guests were expected to bring twice as many gifts as the host had once brought to their previous celebration. This gift-giving excess caused many a host to find himself in debt. Some even returned gifts once received – a practice not considered insulting at all (some disagreement on that today). It was commonly accepted that such public exchange proved helpful in assessing the wealth of the tribe.

During the lengthy festivities, the stories on the pole were recited and committed to memory. The illustrations would later serve to remind future storytellers of the main theme. Since families passed on the stories to their young, many poles can still be "read" today. The "puzzle poles" are those whose stories have been forgotten.

Today, there is a growing disagreement between Indians and those concerned with the preservation of totem poles that are damaged or decaying. According to Indian beliefs, such totems should be allowed to go back into the ground. The objects themselves, even works of art, are not important. What matters is what the objects represent. Yet another example of the clash between cultures? The controversy continues.

The popularity of totem poles also continues. Contemporary artists research old traditions to evolve new styles. As works of art, totem poles are commissioned for museums, parks, and international exhibitions. They can be found on display not only in museums in the United States, but also in Europe and Japan. Often with a sense of wonder, visitors mark the presence of the past in these tales told on a tree.

Mary Kennedy lives in Cohasset, teaches at Suffolk University, and travels whenever she can.

HEALTH NOTES

Reasons behind winter 'depression'

STEVE BOBO

FEELING SAD? You may have Seasonal Affective Disorder, or winter depression, which tends to occur as the days grow shorter in the fall and winter. It is believed that affected persons react adversely to the decreasing amount of light and the colder temperature as autumn and winter progress.

The symptoms of SAD include regularly occurring symptoms of depression (excessive eating and sleeping, weight gain) during the fall or winter months and full remission from depression in the spring and summer months, with no non-seasonal depressive episodes. A craving for sugary and/or starchy foods has also been said to be characteristic of SAD and separate it from other depressive disorders. Other symptoms include: low mood starting in autumn or winter; lack of energy; irritability; lack of interest in socializing; increased sleep and daytime sleepiness. Women may be affected more often than men

The term first appeared in print in 1985. Seasonal affective disorder is also sometimes called winter depression or the hibernation reaction.

Seasonal affective disorder has not been recognized very long as a medical condition. The term first appeared in print in 1985. Seasonal affective disorder is also sometimes called winter depression or the hibernation reaction. Opinion is divided as to whether SAD is a separate disease from other forms of depression, although there does appear to be a group of people that suffer with it on a regular basis starting in the autumn or winter and then recovering in the spring or summer.

It is unusual for these symptoms to be of sufficient severity for them to be brought to the attention of doctors but for those individuals who do find that they need medical help, all the usual medication and psychological treatments may be tried. There have also been reports of successful treatment using exposure to bright light as well as several studies leaving some doubt about the effectiveness of artificial light in solving the problem.

A small proportion of people with regular winter depression, find that their mood does not simply return to normal in the spring/summer, but that it becomes excessively high. It is possible that these individuals have another disorder and psychiatrists may propose mood-stabilizing treatments for a more common non-seasonal form of the illness.

What causes winter depression? In some people the apparent relationship to the seasons is simply because of stresses and difficulties that regularly happen for them at that time of year. It takes a serious effort to get by the holiday season without some type of mood variation. Regardless of what people call these episodes, they would seem to be little different from any depression that is triggered by a stressful event with which most of us cope. Where a stressful event doesn't occur expert opinion varies. Some theorize that SAD is related to the reduction in natural light and the lower temperatures in the winter months but there is no good evidence that SAD is more common in very northern countries where the winter hours of daylight are much shorter. It has been suggested that the release of a brain chemical (melatonin) may be involved. Melatonin release is influenced by exposure to light and can exert an effect on several bodily rhythms, but research has been fairly inconclusive.

SAD is sometimes observed in families; is more common in certain countries, and investigators indicate that Doctors in Sweden say SAD affects up to 20 percent of Sweden's 8.5 million people to some degree. However, people living in some far northern countries such as Iceland seem to be less prone to the condition.

Therapies variously involve medications; antidepressants and counseling. Never ignore comments about suicide, and report them to an appropriate source if you consider them serious; generally a therapist or doctor. Seek opportunities for walks, outings and other activities. Keep trying if he or she declines, but don't push to take on too much too soon. Provide assistance in getting to the doctor's appointments

In nature, animals are generally less functional in winter..

FOR THE RECORD

An assist from Bleacher Report

GREGORY MATHIS

Wicked Local visitors now have access to the type of reporting that makes reading about their local pro and college sports teams fun, entertaining and informative.

This may be the best time of year for sports fans.

From the excitement of the winter high school sports tournaments, to the opening of Major League Baseball's spring training, to the anticipation of the March Madness college basketball tournament, there's something for nearly everyone who loves sports this time of year.

For us, of course, the main focus is on local sports. Community sports coverage kicks off the second section in all of our newspapers and has been a priority for many years and will continue to be.

While the majority of our coverage revolves around high school sports — specifically varsity sports — community contributions also help us provide news about youth sports teams, adult league teams and others. Sometimes we'll venture into the world of college or professional sports when local athletes go on to succeed in those ranks.

Because of resources, space and our focus on community coverage in the newspaper, our sports editors and reporters don't spend a lot of time and space on the local professional and major college sports teams in the area.

But that doesn't mean those who read our newspaper or visit our Wicked Local website aren't interested in what's happening elsewhere in the sports world, outside their own world.

That's where Bleacher Report pitches in.

For those unfamiliar with Bleacher Report, it is the fourth-largest sports media site in the United States. And thanks to a recent agreement with GateHouse Media, Wicked Local visitors now have access to the type of reporting that makes reading about their local pro and college sports teams fun, entertaining and informative.

From top-10 lists, to mock drafts, to power rankings, Bleacher Report is different from the sports websites caught up in up-to-the-minute updates and scores.

For example, on Bleacher Report this week you'll find free agent news regarding the New England Patriots, projections for the Red Sox this season and a report card for Bruin players for the third quarter. If you're looking for something fun, check out the article and photos on the lamest mascots in college sports.

Accessing Bleacher Report is easy from the Wicked Local site. When you click on the Sports tab in the top navigation on the site, you'll go to a newly designed page that features five local stories in the rotating carousel. To the right will be five more local stories specific to your town or region.

Under the local Sports section, you'll see a section labeled National, which will feature four headlines from the Bleacher Report website. At the bottom of the Sports homepage you'll find local professional sports sections on the Patriots, Red Sox and Bruins, as well as the NFL. Click on any of the links and you'll be taken to the Bleacher Report website, where you'll have ample opportunity to get lost in the vast content available on all things sports.

While local sports is still our thing, especially in print, Bleacher Report is certainly a welcome addition for those who can't get enough sports news online and are looking for something different than what the usual suspects offer.

Gregory Mathis is editor-in-chief for GateHouse Media New England's South unit, with offices in Marshfield, Plymouth, Raynham, Hingham and Randolph. He can be reached at gmathis@wickedlocal.com.

SENIOR SCENE

Great stuff, past and present

LOUISE SMULLEN

The annual Valentine' Day tea was well attended. Bates Hall looked quite festive with a small plant at every place setting and valentines made by one of our local Girl Scout troops. As usual Anna and her crew served tasty tea sandwiches and decadent desserts, as well as tea and coffee.

The entertainment was delightful and mystifying. A magician performed many awesome tricks, keeping us in wonder. All the while he spoke about the history of magic and interesting facts about well-known magicians, especially Houdini.

At one of the February seminars Andrea Shein from Massachusetts Commission for the Blind spoke about low vision and blindness and the benefits and services of MBC. Ms. Shein had with her low vision aids and appliances, which were demonstrated.

There were three presenters at one seminar - Tom Clougherty, elder law attorney and President of United Senior Advisors; Rita Evans, R.N. Elder Care and Benefits Coordinator; and David Toutillot, CMPS Coastal Finance. They covered the care and financial eligibility guidelines for home care and facility-based care, also the best estate and Medicare planning strategies to access benefits, and when a reverse mortgage is an option for home care.

Kim Griffen, clinical social worker from Visiting Angels, paid us a visit. She reviewed two tips to ease the transition from a facility to home care, which may lead to fewer unnecessary re-hospitalizations. Medicare will pay for some needs in-home care. Kim handed out a guide with a checklist of all the things one needs to think about and plan for if one is going to have home care.

On Feb. 28 a group rode in the van to Allerton House where we were treated to lunch. We were pleased to greet three of their residents from Cohasset who joined us for lunch. After the meal we joined a larger group to hear a presentation on heart health. Diane Burke, R.N., of Welch Care Services, defined terms used in connection with the heart, and how it works for the body. She told of the things one can do to keep the heart healthy.

The monthly seminars for March are as follows:

March 7 – Michelle Mix, Hannaford dietitian, will discuss healthy food options.

March 14 – Cheryl Bambury, Norfolk County Deputy Sheriff, will present "Are You O.K.?"

March 21 – Susan Gillum will speak about home modification. This should be of interest to those elders planning to stay in their own home.

March 28 – Hind Douki, Hannaford Pharmacy Manager, will discuss medication management.

March 15 – we will have our annual St. Patrick's Day dinner of corned beef and cabbage. This will be at St. Anthony's Parish Center at noon. Make your reservation now by calling 781-383-9112. The charge is $8 per person.

Girl Scouts of the USA are celebrating their 100th anniversary this month. I served as a troop leader here in Cohasset, and what a joy it was. I was fortunate in having some great Moms and Dads who helped with troop activities. We sang, danced, played games, did crafts, worked on badges and met new friends. We had overnights at the Boston Museum of Science, the Children's Museum, and on one occasion spent the night on the huge aircraft carrier USS Massachusetts. The highlight of the year was our weekend camping trip. The girls spent several meetings planning activities, planning the meals and who was going to be doing what. Who can forget campfire stew, blushing bunny, foil dinners and of course, s'mores.

The Cohasset Historical Society has set up a display of scouting memorabilia at the Pratt building. It will run from March 5 to April 6. If you were a former scout, you might like to stop in to have a look. The hours are 10 to 4 p.m.

Volume 38 - Report No. 9 Feb. 27 - Mar.2, 2012

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives and local senators on roll calls from the week of February 27-March 2.

SUPPORTIVE SERVICES FOR LOW INCOME HOUSING (H 3963) * Y

House 154-0, approved a bill that would require several state agencies to collaborate on a memorandum to coordinate the procurement of community-based supportive services and subsidies for new and existing housing for residents with very low incomes. This would also be designed to facilitate the creation of a demonstration program that creates up to 1,000 units of supportive housing by 2015. According to the Citizens' Housing and Planning Association, supportive housing is defined as "affordable housing linked with supportive services designed to help tenants with modest incomes maintain housing stability and maximize their independence."

Supporters said the measure would help persons with disabilities, seniors and homeless families who need help and services live independently. They noted it will also save the state money by keeping residents at home and out of more expensive nursing homes, institutions and shelters. They argued the proposal does not cost the state any new money but instead uses existing resources.

The Senate has approved a different version of the bill and the House version now goes to the Senate for consideration.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill.)

CONTINUING HEALTH CARE COVERAGE DURING CANCER TREATMENT (S 2148) Y *

Senate 35-0, approved and sent to the House legislation designed to help patients whose employers switch their health care plans or whose current plan changes while they are undergoing an active course of treatment for a chronic disease at a comprehensive cancer center or pediatric hospital. The measure provides that if the patient ends up in a health care plan that is limited and includes tiered networks, he or she is allowed to continue to receive ongoing cancer care at the same facility without paying the new plan's higher co-payments or deductibles.

Affordable limited and tiered networks, in order to charge lower premiums, exclude many high-cost providers, often including Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and Children's Hospital, from their insurance plans. Or they shift more of the costs for treatment at these higher-tier facilities onto these consumers through higher deductibles and/or co-pays.

Supporters said the bill would allow these patients to be treated without an added cost that many of them cannot afford. They cited several cases including 125 patients at Dana-Farber who were in a difficult and confusing position when their health plan removed Dana-Farber from its network and their options were at best unclear and at worst non-existent or more expensive.

$3,024,083 FOR SHERIFFS (S 2112) Y *

On four roll calls of 35-0, the Senate overrode Gov. Deval Patrick's veto of $3,024,083 in funding for sheriff's offices. The cuts include Worcester by $200,000, Barnstable by $1,000,109, Bristol by $952,095 and Plymouth by $871,879.

Override supporters said sheriffs need this money to properly run their operations. They argued it would prevent staff cuts that could jeopardize the safety of corrections officers and the public.

In his veto message, Gov. Patrick said he reduced the funding because it authorized unaffordable spending by sheriffs in excess of his budget recommendations.

(The vote next to the senator's name represents his or her vote on all four roll calls. A "Yes" vote is for the additional $3,024,083.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

EASIER HIV TESTING (S 2158) - The Senate gave initial approval to and sent to the House a bill that would allow doctors to test for the HIV virus with only verbal consent of the patient. Under current law, Massachusetts is one of only two states that require written permission from patients.

Supporters said the change would reduce the transmission of the virus from mother to child, which is almost totally preventable if the mother is tested. They argued there are an estimated 5,000 people in the state who don't know they have HIV because they have never been tested. They noted the change will result in more people getting tested and receiving life-extending treatment.

BAN SMOKING IN SOME SENIOR HOUSING (H 2110) - The House gave initial approval to a bill requiring local housing authorities to provide for non-smoking buildings in multi-building senior housing complexes or for a no-smoking floor in single-building senior housing.

The bill phases in the proposed law, grandfathers in current smokers and prevents their eviction.

$7,600 PAY HIKE FOR LOTTERY CHIEF - The Board of the State Lottery Commission voted unanimously to raise the salary of Executive Director Paul Sternburg from $122,400 to $130,000. According to a chart presented at the meeting, Sternburg's $122,400 salary was lower than all other executive directors in states with large lotteries, except for New Jersey. The hike to $130,000 still leaves Sternburg with a salary less than the average for comparable officials in other states.

SPECIAL DAYS - The State Administration and Regulatory Oversight Committee held a hearing that included proposals designating the last day of February as Rare Disease Day to increase public awareness of rare diseases which affect millions of Americans (H 3378); the week of April 16 as World Voice Week, in recognition of the many citizens of the commonwealth suffering from voice disorders (S 2107); and February 2 as Ayn Rand Day in recognition of her contributions to the literature of America and her philosophy of man as a heroic being (H 2307). Rand is best known as the author two best-selling novels "Atlas Shrugged" and "The Fountainhead."

NEW STATE SEAL AND MOTTO (H 3039) - The State Administration and Regulatory Oversight Committee's hearing included a proposal creating a special commission to examine the state seal and motto and develop a revised version of it. The current state seal includes a Native American holding a bow and arrow. The motto is "By the sword we seek peace, but only under liberty." The commission would "determine whether the seal and motto accurately reflect and embody the historic and contemporary commitments of the Commonwealth to peace, justice, liberty and equality, and to spreading the opportunities and advantages of education."

Supporters of the revisions say the current seal is politically insensitive and historically inaccurate. They note that it depicts a Native American who represents a tribe from Lake Superior rather than Massachusetts and argued that the bow and arrow depict violence. Supporters of the current seal say that it is appropriate and noted that arrow is pointing downward which is known as a Native American symbol signifying peace.

A vote for Coughlin, Cohasset Town Manager

SUSAN PLAYFAIR

Mike Coughlin was hired by the Town of Cohasset to be our Town Manager. He wasn't hired to be a rubber stamp for the Board of Selectmen.

Before next Tuesday, we need to ask ourselves what kind of town we want to live in. Do we want to live in a town where people are treated with respect and decency? Or do we want to live in a town where we print up fine-sounding proclamations but attempt to destroy anyone who doesn't agree with us? Do we want to live in a town where we condemn bullying in our children but condone it in adults? Or do we want to commit ourselves to supporting the men and women most qualified to work for our town, not just those who say what we want them to say and do what we want them to do?

Mike Coughlin was hired by the Town of Cohasset to be our Town Manager. He wasn't hired to be a rubber stamp for the Board of Selectmen. He and his wife moved here in good faith and on the strength of a job with a town they trusted. From everything we know to date, Mike Coughlin has been scrupulously honest in carrying out the duties of the job he was hired to do. He had been on the job only six months when the Board of Selectmen fired him without cause. The only reason appears to be that he didn't want to give away our town water supply, and he didn't want to approve the Request for Proposal (RFP) as it was written, without first getting approval from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In other words, he didn't sign a document that the Selectmen had wanted him to approve without making sure it was in the best interests of the town.

For this, his character was impugned in The Boston Globe by our Town Water Commissioner; he was stripped of his office, and when he went back to the Town Offices to return his town-owned computer, he was escorted out to his car by Mr. Milanoski, the selectman-appointed interim Town Manager. Mr. Milanoski appears to be the square peg the Selectmen place in round holes when they have removed the dedicated, experienced, and well-educated men and women who don't agree with them. Thus, the Selectmen put Mr. Milanoski on the Conservation Commission in place of the members they removed; they appointed him to the governance committee that was supposed to be examining actions of the Board of Selectmen; and they made him our acting town manager in place of Mike Coughlin.

Is this what you want? If not, you should attend the public hearing on March 13, and speak up in favor of reinstating Mike Coughlin as Cohasset's Town Manager, the job he was hired for and is still being paid for. If you want to live in a town run by and for the Selectmen and their friends, then we don't need a Town Manager. In any case, if we fire Mike Coughlin, it is difficult to believe that any competent, capable man or woman will apply for the job in the future.

An added benefit to keeping Mike Coughlin as Town Manager is that it will give the Board of Selectmen an opportunity to show us how serious they are about complying with the stipulations in their recently-drafted Code of Civility. Perhaps, for once, members of the Board can set a good example.

Susan Playfair lives at 249 Jerusalem Road.

COMMENTARY

Senior study should go forward

ROBERT C. ERNST SR

What makes this topical is that I am concerned that the town's current political problems will have an adverse effect upon the Center, which is, in my opinion, struggling from serious inattention by Town government.

I know very little about Cohasset politics in general but there is one regard on which I am an expert. I am a recent resident, since Feb. 2, 2006 to be exact, who has made a successful and very happy transition to a new life here and in which the Cohasset Senior Center had a very helpful part. What makes this topical is that I am concerned that the town's current political problems will have an adverse effect upon the Center which is, in my opinion, struggling from serious inattention by Town government. Let me explain.

The Center has had two positive advances in the last six years; Coral Grande became the director and the League of Social Services secured a site for a new facility and committed $1,000,000 to its construction. On the other hand the Center has suffered from a lack of attention, limited space, poor funding, reduced activities and dwindling attendance. However, an event that I regard as extremely important was taken by Mike Coughlin at the Board of Selectmen meeting of Dec. 5, 2011 in which he authorized over a 4 to 2 negative vote by the Advisory Committee, a study of senior needs in Cohasset in the amount of $15,000. This expenditure remains under consideration.

I regarded the proposed study as an important initiative for several reasons:

- Cohasset seniors have not been kept informed at a time when neighboring communities have up and running senior facilities;
- I sensed that the study would be opposed because of growing opposition to Mr. Coughlin;
- The study would provide exactly the kind of information needed by the Senior Center Planning Group.

Consequently I pursued the matter with these results. The Governor's office put me in touch with an official of the state office of the Council of Elder Affairs. He informed me that there were no trade journals about senior center facilities but that he had just seen a study done for the Town of Marshfield which was "the best thing" that he had ever seen and he put me in touch with Carol Hamilton, director of Council of Elder Affairs in Marshfield. She confirmed the official's evaluation and offered to e-mail a copy to Cohasset at their request I so informed the Board if Selectmen.

I believe that the people of Cohasset have much to learn from the study in question. Marshfield's study was prepared by UMass and cost $15,000. While Cohasset government is otherwise occupied this seems like a very good time for them to order this study so that, not only the SCPG, but all citizens can have information from which all can benefit. I urge you to tell them that you want it done.

Robert C. Ernst Sr., lives at60 Elm St. Apt. 21.

Election reflection from Buckley

Peter J. Buckley of Cohasset is the newly elected Republican State Committeeeman. He won a three-way race for the seat with two-term incumbent John Cafferty of Hingham and William Harris of Duxbury. Buckley's district-wide vote total was 5431 to Cafferty's 4908 and Harris' 2567. The Mariner asked for his reaction to his victory.

"Now that we were fortunate enough to win the election, it won't be Disney World, but I am going to take the family somewhere to thank them for spending their February vacation handing out campaign literature and then spending all day election day freezing at the polls on behalf of my campaign. My campaign was a friend and family effort led by my wife Emilia who took her experience running a house of six kids and became my de facto campaign manager. Family and friends from all over the district rallied in support of the campaign and this was most evident on Election Day as we had sign holders most of the day at every town in the district.

Peter Buckley the new Republican State Committeeman for the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District.
COURTESY PHOTO

"I want to thank my two opponents John Cafferty and Bill Harris for waging a competitive campaign. John has served the district ably for several years and Bill is considered one the most respected and hardest working Republican activist on the South Shore. I feel fortunate to have won.

"I look forward to serving the people of the district on the State Committe and I look forward to restoring the Party's image, attracting competent and competitive candidates at all levels of government, and working hard to ensure that those candidates have all the necessary resources to win elections.

"I am grateful for all the support and all those who volunteered their time and energy on behalf of the campaign."

BOYS BASKETBALL

Tremendous effort

Skippers just short at Westport

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

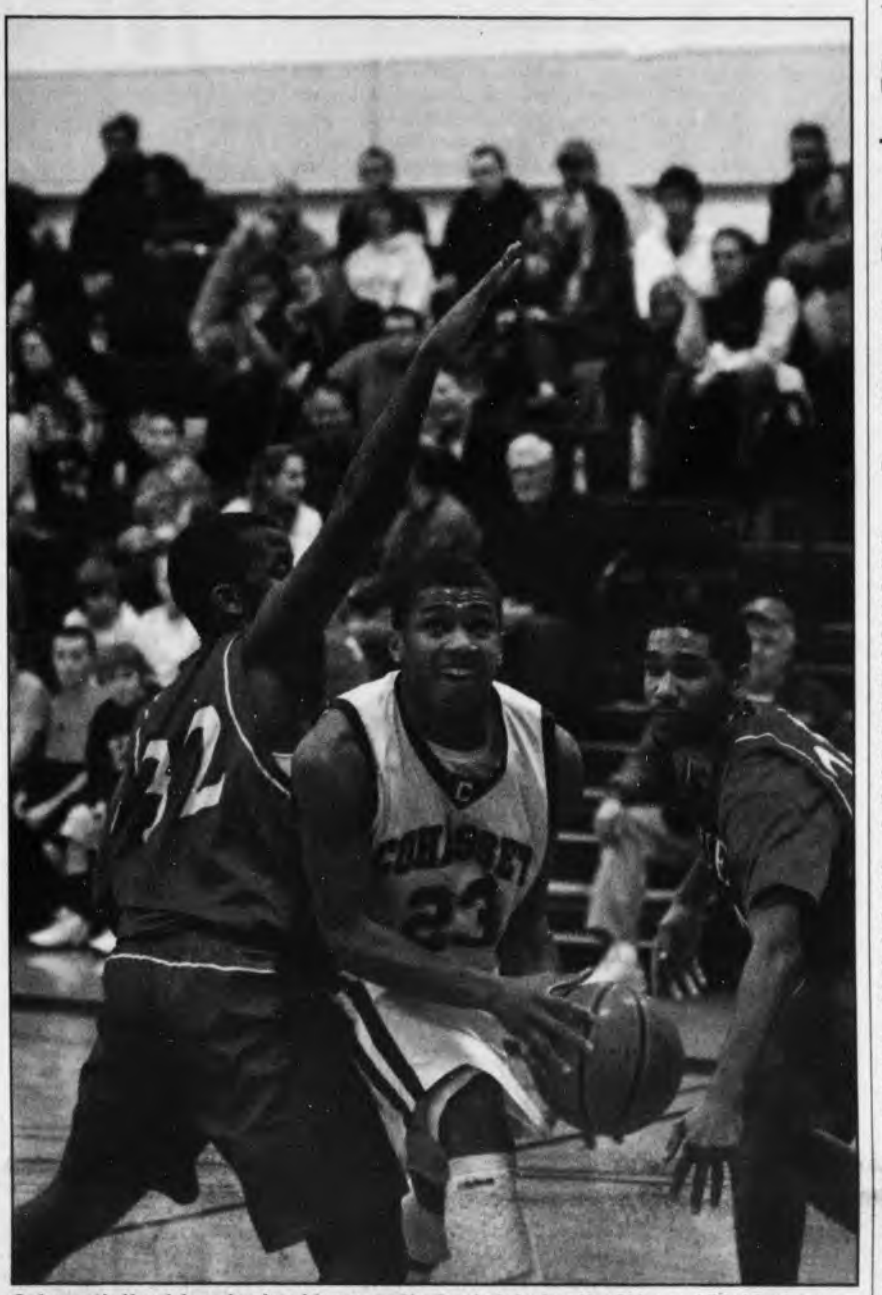
The outcome wasn't what they had hoped for, but the No. 6 seeded Cohasset boys basketball team played a game to remember Saturday in a 70-68 loss at No. 3 Westport in a Div. 4 South Sectional quarterfinal game.

Christian Davis scored a career-high 26 points and Shane Haggerty added 20 for the Skippers, who battled back from a 12 point deficit in the third quarter with a 15-0 run to take a 43-40 lead.

From there the game was even, but Westport had the lead at the final buzzer.

"It was a very good game," said assistant coach Jim Willis, who along with Dick Lawless was filling in for head coach Bo Ruggiero, who was injured in a car accident before the Tournament on the way to practice. "Westport is a very god team. They are an excellent shooting team. We felt we had a chance inside, but it doesn't help when the other team is making three's."

Westport made 6 of 8 three pointers in the first half while rolling to a 15-point cushion in the first quarter.



"We're taller than they were down low, but their guards were bigger. They shot over us."

It didn't help when Haggerty injured his ankle at the end of the first quarter.

Still, Cohasset hung around.

"Our goal was to cut the lead by the half," Willis said. "At halftime we were down 30-21. Then it was gangbusters in

Notre Dame skiers third at states

Hingham's Brown second in giant slalom

GateHouse News Service

The Notre Dame Academy ski team went to the MIAA state alpine ski championships on February 28 with one goal in mind, to take first place and continue their unbeaten streak from the regular season. The Ski East champions put up some great times and had some amazing individual performances, but just fell short of their ultimate goal, finishing in third place overall for the second straight year.

With 22 of the best teams in the state represented at Wachusett Mt., the competition was stiff for the Cougars who sent nine individual qualifiers to the states for the second year in a row.

Notre Dame had the largest contingent of qualifiers in the state among the 138 girls that earned the trip to the state championships.

The format as in years past was two runs with the top three finishers for each team counting towards the team totals for each event.

The morning run for the girls was slalom and the afternoon run a giant slalom. The NDA girls had their best ever performance in a states event, putting up 249 points in the morning which only had them two points out of first place which belonged to Westford Academy.

Amelia Brown, coming off her third straight Ski East league championship started things off for the Cougars with a blistering fast run of 37.28 seconds. The defending state slalom champion's time was good for a third place finish overall, just a half second out of first place.

Nailing down the second finisher points for NDA was sophomore Victoria Mulkern with what might be the most clutch states run for NDA ever. Mulkern, starting way in the back with bib number 106, had a jaw dropping run on a rutted out course with soft snow.

The junior's time of 39.47 was good for 20th place overall and very high scoring points for the Cougars.

Senior Captain Marie Gilman (Cohasset) came thru as she has all season getting the third finishing points with a fantastic time of 39.50, good for 22nd place overall.

Junior Grace Petro had a great run finishing in 45th place with a time of 40.92 seconds. Audrey Madigan, with bib 66, had a time of 43.24, good for 75th place overall. Erin Murray and Katie McNamara had solid runs for NDA with times of 43.79 and 44.98 seconds, good for 81rst and 94th place respectively. Jessica Peterson finished in 100th place for NDA with a time of 45.99.

Freshman Julia Flanagan, racing in her first states had a great showing in the slalom with a 107th place finish and a time of 48.26. With NDA only two points out of first after the morning slalom, it all boiled down to the afternoon giant slalom to see what team took home the state championship hardware. Junior Amelia Brown, starting with bib 9, laid down what looked to be a state championship run on an icy, steep, technical course.

Icewomen finish first varsity season on a roll

GateHouse News Service

The Cohasset / Hanover Girls Hockey team finished their inaugural year as a Varsity team going 4-1-1 in their final six games of the season.

After an understandably slow start of 0-10-1 the girls of C/H put together a nice winning streak to end the year. The team played an abbreviated schedule last year as a J.V. team after being started by Cohasset parents Jim and Nancy Farren and Hanover parents Tom and Jean Graf. This year's team was coached by Deb Beal. She was assisted by Paul and Sue McHugh.

Also helping coach Beal were Ted Coyle, Kathy Fenton and Andrew Mahoney.

Starting in goal was junior Kelsi Orcutt. Kelsi had an outstanding year, she kept the team within striking distance all year.

The first line had the unique distinction of featuring the three Farren sisters of Cohasset. Freshmen Valerie, Junior center Nicole,and senior co-captain Amanda.

The defense was anchored by Hanover's MacKenzie Dunphy, and the Cohasset trio of Sophie Arnold, Jenna O'Brien, and Sara Campadelli. Rounding out the Hanover girls were Courtney Sepeck, Emily Siroonian, Nina Slowey,Kayla Garrity and Erin Smith, all of whom played key rolls in the team's success. Contributing mightily from Cohasset were Makayla Barrow, Kylie Coffman, Sara and Meredith Corry, Emily

COLLEGE HOOPS

Kelly leads Bates

It was another good season on the basketball court for Cohasset's Meredith Kelly.

In her sophomore season at Bates College, the former Skipper star led her team with 12.4 points per game.

Along the way Kelly was named to a pair of All-Tournament teams. She was an All-Tournament selection at the Hockenbury Classic at Norwich College and the Daytona Beach Shootout.

Kelly's 12.4 ppg was seventh best in the NESCAC Conference, while shooting .476 from the floor.

She also averaged 1.67 steals per game, with 40 in 24 games and was tied for third on the team in rebounding with a 3.7 average.

Kelly was Bates' leading scorer in 11 of 24 games, with a high of 21, which she did twice, against MCLA and Thomas. Bates won both games.

Like she did at Cohasset, she had some of her best games against top competition, including a 17-point game against 2011 Div. 3 National Champion Amherst.

While Bates lost the game 75-63, Kelly had a strong effort, going 7-of-12 from the field.

She was also 3-for-3 from the free throw line with three rebounds and two steals.

Leafs continue to dominate Canadiens

South Coastal Hockey roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The South Coastal Hockey League Classics Div. Maple Leafs turned thirty this past Sunday.

Marty DeCourcey scored two goals, Shawn Malloy and Jeff Gauthier added a goal each the Leafs defeated the Canadiens by a 4-1 score. The win kept the Leafs undefeated streak alive against the Canadiens as they are 30-0-1 in their last 31 meetings.

Mike Fahie of Pembroke scored the Canadiens goal.

Hanover's Joe Craig and Jeff Uva scored a goal each and Jim O'Toole of Rockland had two assists in the Rangers 2-1 win over the Red Wings in a Classics Div. matchup.

Paul Lyons of Pembroke scored two goals and Scituate's Dave Howe and Tim Fallon added a goal each as the Black Hawks pulled out a 4-2 Classics Div. win over the Bruins.

John Zimmer of Marshfield had a goal and an assist and Pembroke's Jim Mulhern added a goal for the Bruins.

Steve Lemish of Pembroke scored a goal and assisted on another in the final 5:17 as the Stingers rallied for a 3-2 win over the Crusaders to take over first-place in the Legends Div.

Norwell's Joe Murray had a goal and an assist and Marshfield's Alan Smith also scored for the Stingers while Jim Donovan also of Marshfield and Scott Mondeau scored for the Crusaders.

Saints goalie Justin Stratton of Marshfield had 17 of his 31 saves in the first period and Charles Ryan scored two goals and assisted on another in their 4-2 Legends Div. win over the Toros.

Bill Spillane and Jim Callahan added a goal apiece and Jonathan Graham had two assists for the Saints.

Pembroke's James Ward of Norwell scored both of the Toros goals in the second period.

Norwell's Mike Verrochi, Jim Toner of Hanover and Chuck Morrison of Marshfield scored a goal each and Mike Rober had two assists in the Whalers 3-1 Legends Div. win over the Sharks.

Dana Dolabany of Norwell scored the goal for the Sharks.

Brown's time of 48.72 seconds could not hold up for first place though and she finished in second place overall, just 9/100's of a second out of first.

Grabbing the second place finishing points for Notre Dame was Marie Gilman with a very fast run of 51.14, good for 33rd place overall. Grace Petro had a fantastic run for the Cougars finishing in 45th place overall and a time of 52.41 and got the third finished points for NDA. Audrey Madigan had a great GS run with a 62nd place finish and a time of 54.09. Freshman Julia Flanagan had a fantastic run with a time of 60.65 seconds and number 101 finish. Katie McNamara grabbed 108th place with a time of 62.71. Jess Peterson finished in 125th place with a time of 83.22.

Erin Murray and Victoria Mulkern both had great runs going but got caught up in some of the heavy soft snow on the outside of the course and did not finish.

After the giant slalom place points were all calculated, NDA finished in 4th place for the GS with 229 points and a grand total of 478 points, putting them in third place overall in the state, only 14 points away from first.

It was another banner year for the NDA ski team with their 4th straight Ski East championship and another fantastic states performance.

The team features skiers from several nearby towns, including Cohasset.

Breakers win league title

The Bay State Breakers Girls U 10 Elite team defeated the Boston Junior Eagles Girls U10 Elite Team in a physical battle on the ice last weekend to become the Eastern Hockey Federation Girls U10 Champions posting a 14-1-1 season record.

The Breakers Casey O'Brien of Milton scored the first goal to put the team up midway through the first period. The Eagles came back strong with a goal to tie the game at 1-1.

Lauren Farren of Cohasset charged the puck back into the Eagle's zone late in the second period and finished with a crossbar ping goal to score what would eventually become the game winning goal.

Olivia O'Brien of Duxbury iced the game for the Breakers with a big goal in the third period smoothly assisted by Katie Pyne of Cohasset. Lindsey Beiche of Cohasset came up strong at defense along with stellar goaltending by Cameron McCrystal of Marshfield keeping the Eagles to just one goal.

Three girls from Cohasset Lauren Farren, Lindsey Beiche and Katie Pyne are members of this State Tournament bound team.

This team has had quite a season as the EFH champions and the NEGHL U10 National regular season champions posting a record of 13-1-5.

The Breakers girls also swept and won the prestigious 2011 CT Polar Bear Christmas Tournament (one of the only Breaker teams in history to accomplish this feat) in December.

The team will be competing in the State Tournament this weekend March 9, 10 &11 at the New England Sports Center in Marlborough, Massachusetts.

the third quarter. Christian Davis stepped up and Shane came back. We won the quarter by 11."

Unfortunately, runs like that can take it out of a team.

"It was an emotional run," Willis said. "They made some plays and they started making shots again."

That didn't mean Cohasset was going down without a fight.

"Christian made a three from beyond NBA range that cut the lead to two in the last minute," Willis said. "We just couldn't get that last one."

One factor was the 12 fouls called on Cohasset that sent Westport to the line.

"We fouled and they made enough shots to hold on," Willis said.

He also enjoyed being a part of it.

"The kids fought so hard to come back," he said. "It was fun to watch them come back and take the lead."

Willis said Ruggiero hated to miss the game.

"He was upset he missed it," Willis said. "This is the time of year he loves most."

For Willis, who is also the boys soccer coach, it was a great season for several reasons.

"Coming off last year, going to the Garden we expected to be good, but we didn't know how good," he said. "Overall I'd say this was a rewarding season for all three coaches."

Cohasset will lose senior captains Robbie Mahoney, Kyrel Jaundoo and Chris Murphy, but has a solid group returning for next season, including Haggerty.

"Robbie was a four-year varsity guy," Willis said. "But I had Kyrel and Chris Murphy on the JV, so they've been with me a long time. I'll miss them. Those three have been a big part here. They bring character and energy.

"They're also the class clowns. They are a lot of fun. Kyrel, Chris and Robbie show you can have fun in practice and still work hard. It will be interesting next year to see who steps up."

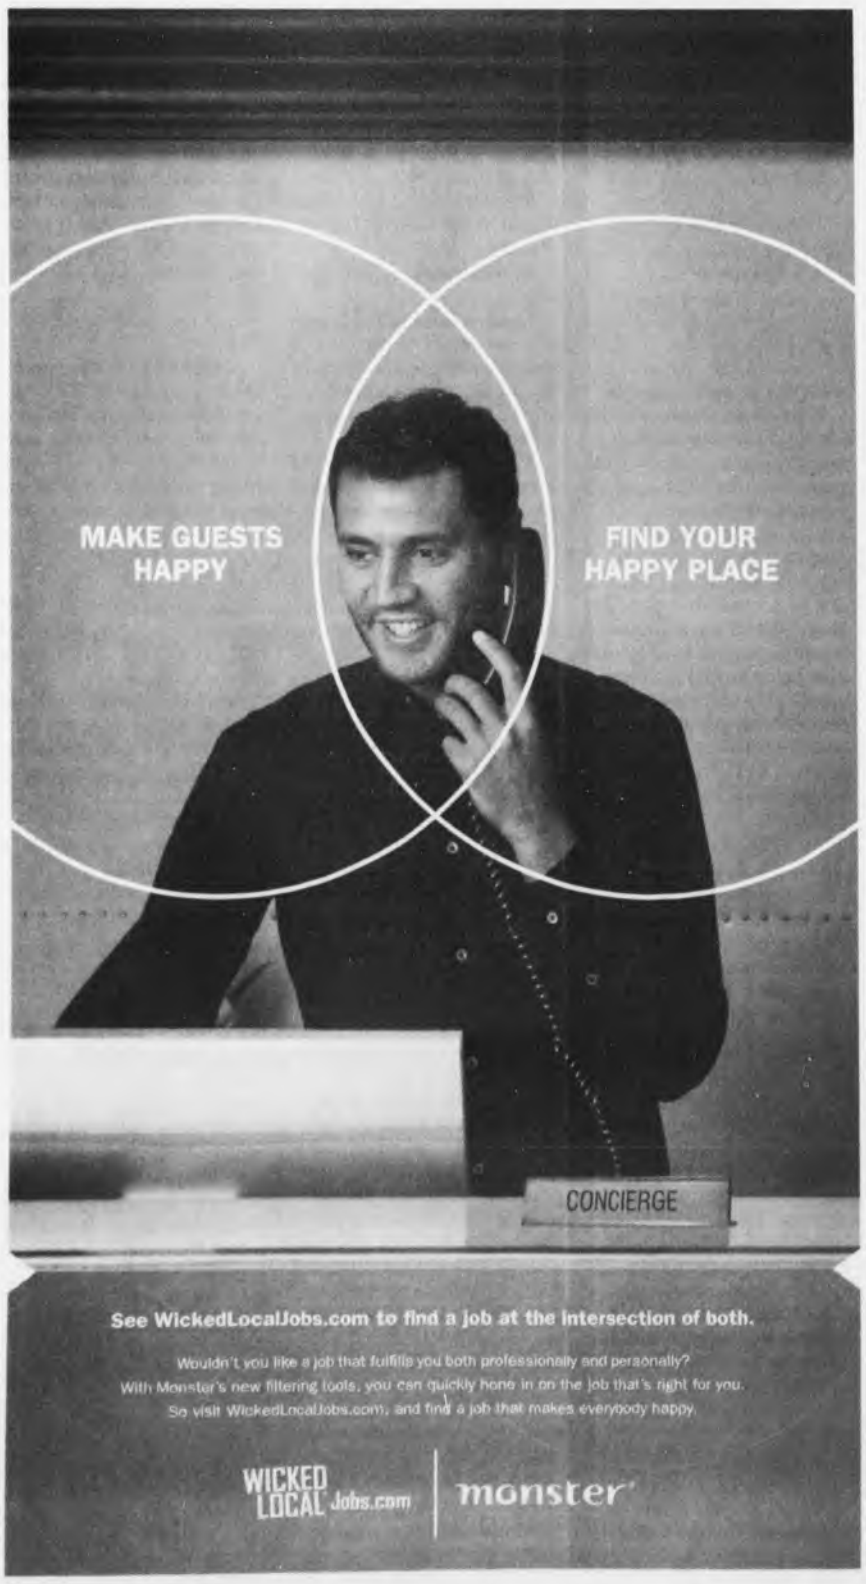
As for the overall success the program has had the past four years, Willis had a thought.

"The players and coaches included would say we have a pretty good teacher," he said. "They left everything out there. The effort level was great. You can't ask for anything more."

Bruins Alumni to play benefit game in Hingham

Hockey fans looking for a fun evening for a good cause won't have to go far on Saturday, March 10 as the Boston Bruins Alumni Team will be in Hingham to play the International Rett Syndrome Foundation All-Star team in a fundraiser to raise awareness and money to help battle the disease.

Rett syndrome is a devastating neurological disorder seen almost exclusively in females. It is marked by severe developmental disabilities, including loss of communication skills and purposeful hand function. Many experience all or some of the following: seizures, anxiety, apraxia, dystonia, orthopedic problems, impaired cardiac, circulatory and digestive functions, autonomic instability and sleep disturbances...the list goes on. Currently there are no effective treatments for Rett syndrome. Most survive into adulthood, requiring total, 24 hour a day care.



The game promises to be a fun afternoon where kids and adults get to see former Bruins play, have pictures taken with them and autographs signed.

The IRSF All-Stars have many local players from Hingham and surrounding towns on the squad and most have played college or professional hockey at some point.

Players for the IRSF All stars will be Hingham Youth Hockey coaches, Mike Flynn, Bill Engel, Jack Diamond, Tim Delay, Dan Rakauskas, Frank Forbes, Bill Fitzpatrick, Tom Guidi and Hingham High School hockey coach Frank Messina will also be playing....

IRSF Coaches will be Chuck Curley and Mike Joyce, both who have daughters with Rett Syndrome

Tickets are $5 for children, $10 for adults and can be bought at the door or by contacting Tom Guidi at tguidi@verizon.net.

Local Swimmers break the 10&U 400 Free Relay Record at the 12&U New England Championships

This February 23-26th, 2012 was the 12&U New England Championships in White River Junction, VT. The Weymouth Waves started off the event on Thursday evening with a 1st (Will Barao), 2nd (Dean Spicer), 5th (Eric Barros), and 13th (Aleksa Jovanovic) for the boys 10&U 500 Freestyle and a 9th (Leigh Spicer) for the girls 10&U 500 Freestyle.

They continued on Friday placing first in the boys 10&U 200 Medley Relay with a team of Brian Doherty, Will Barao, Eric Barros, and Dean Spicer; 1st (Will Barao), 2nd (Dean Spicer), 5th (Eric Barros), and 18th (Aleksa Jovanovic) in the boys 10&U 100 Freestyle; 3rd (Will Barao), 6th (Eric Barros), and 18th (Aleksa Jovanovic) in the boys 10&U 50 Fly, and 1st (Will Barao), 3rd (Dean Spicer) and 6th (Eric Barros) in the boys 10&U 200 IM

Saturday, the girls were up first in the 400 Freestyle Relay. The relay team of Mary Kate Kelley, Sarah Rice, Emily Appleton, and Leigh Spicer, all nine years olds, managed to place 14th overall. This was against teams consisting mostly of 10 year olds. The boys' team of Dean Spicer, Eric Barros, Aleksa Jovanovic, and Will Barao who had already made a name for themselves, continued to shine. The team broke the New England record of 4:12.74 by almost two seconds. Their time of 4:10.90 will be the time to beat!

With all of their amazing swims the team managed to place 8th overall with only twelve swimmers at the meet. This is the highest the Waves have ever placed at the 12&U's Age Group Championships.

The boys continued to explode off the blocks following up their record breaking relay with a 1st (Will Barao), 2nd (Dean Spicer) and 8th (Eric Barros) in the 50 Free; 1st (Will Barao), 2nd (Dean Spicer), and 5th (Eric Barros) in the 100 Back; and a 1st (Will Barao), 3rd (Dean Spicer), and 6th (Eric Barros) in the 100 IM. The girls swimming against mostly 10 year olds had great swims as well.

Sunday, the girls again competing with teams who consisted mostly of 10yr olds, finished a respectable 15th place overall in the 200 Freestyle relay. They continued to swim fast throughout the session. Leigh Spicer placed 15th overall in the 200 Freestyle.

The 10&U boys started Sunday by once again winning the relay. This time it was the 200 Freestyle relay with a team of Will Barao, Dean Spicer, Eric Barros, and Aleksa Jovanovic. They swam the fastest time any relay team has swum in 10 years! The boys then went one, two, and three in the 50 backstroke with Will Barao placing first, Dean Spicer placing second, and Eric Barros placing third. Dean Spicer continued the boys' streak by placing 4th in the 100 Fly. They finished the meet with the 200 Freestyle where once again the boys medaled; 1st (Will Barao), 2nd (Dean Spicer), and 6th (Eric Barros). Our 12&U's, Patrick Doherty and Jenny O'Neil, had great swims during the morning session as well.

If that was not enough, the 10&U boys brought home three plaques for high point scorers for the entire meet! Will Barao placed first, Dean Spicer placed third, and Eric Barros placed sixth. Also scoring points was Aleksa Jovanovic who placed 33rd overall for the boys and Leigh Spicer who placed 32 overall for the girls. With all of their amazing swims the team managed to place 8th overall with only twelve swimmers at the meet. This is the highest the Waves have ever placed at the 12&U's Age Group Championships.

SPECIALTY CAMPS & CAMPS FOR SPECIAL POPULATIONS: (PART 2)

THE CAMP EXPERIENCE IS SPECIAL! BUT, NOTE WHAT THE WORD "SPECIAL" MEANS AT CAMP

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Part 2 of this article is continued from last week's Camp Directory

Specialty Camps – Some children have an interest or passion and an emerging aptitude and skill level in a particular program area. The fine and performing arts, computer programming and game design, sports, and adventure tripping (white water rafting, hiking, biking, and the like) are some popular types of specialty camp. Specialty camp can be a great way to explore and further a specialized interest in a community of like-minded adults and children who just love the interest area. While there are many ways to provide specialized programming—living, breathing, eating, sleeping the sport, art, adventure or other specialty is certainly the most common approach. There are two primary models of this sort of camp, a specialty camp which is single focus and a specialty session within a camp that might have other areas of focus. The specialty is almost always reflected in the name of the camp itself or the name of the program. When choosing a camp like this, find out how the day is structured. What activities, if any, don't involve the area of specialty? Staff should know all about the area of specialty and the teaching approach should be well-articulated in the camp's print and online information. But what do these specialists know about camp and about child development? Expertise in the specialty area is critical, knowledge about creating camp communities and about child development should be a priority also! It's possible to search by program area in our online Find A Camp tool: http://www.acanewengland.org/families-public/finding-your-camp

Family Camp – These camp environments or sessions are focused on fostering family connections. Whether at a dedicated family camp, where the camp offers family sessions all summer long or at the family camp sessions that happen at the end of the season at traditional children's camps, most often after the campers leave and before Labor Day and fall arrive, the programming has been designed with the entire family in mind. The schedule (including family time vs. individual time), the program offerings, and the entire vibe of the experience happen because special attention is paid to fostering family experiences and adventures. That doesn't mean that families don't bond with other families—they certainly do. (And then they try to return to camp at the same time in subsequent summers.) What it does mean is that families can expect to bond and grow with their own family members. It's possible to search for a camp for the whole family in our online Find A Camp tool: http://www.acanewengland.org/families-public/finding-your-camp

Religiously-Affiliated Camp – If you are looking for a camp with a particular religious focus, you'll find different types of religious specialty camp options. Some are more observant than others, and many are open to campers outside the religion. Some have services that campers attend while others might be more informal in the practice of the religion. Camps in this category do an excellent job of outlining their philosophies so families can explore how the camp experience might enhance the religious education a child already receives. It's possible to search by religious affiliation in our online Find A Camp tool: http://www.acanewengland.org/families-public/finding-your-camp

IDEAS FOR PARENTS

Happy parents, happy students

Academic enrichment while enjoying summer

By Ellen Blum
Tips On Trips and Camps

When I was a teenager, parents had few choices available to them when planning their teens summers. Over the years these options have expanded exponentially. The problem parents face now is how to choose the program that is right for their child. The seemingly endless options can be bewildering. One great option is academic enrichment.

There are several kinds of programs that give high school students the taste of life on a college campus. In addition to academic study, programs can offer SAT Prep (essay writing), college visits, leadership courses, as well as weekend excursions. Most of these programs are offered in large cities. The directors of these programs look to provide unusual course offerings. Classes range from crime scene investigation to architecture to acting for the camera. If, however, your child is looking for straight-up academics, those courses are available too.

One recent trend is internship programs. If your child has a specific career interest and wants to gain experience in that field, or try it out before committing to a college major, they can work alongside professionals in areas like archaeology, fashion design or medical research. Internships on college campuses are available abroad, and in large U.S. cities, like New York City, Boston and Philadelphia. After their daily ork, students can participate in evening activities, weekend excursions or college visits.

Regardless of what program is chosen it is important to note that although this age group is more mature, they probably need more supervision, not less. Many universities offer coursework for high schoolage students, but few offer the type of residential supervision that would make the parent of a high-schooler feel comfortable sending their child to live on a college campus.

When exploring a pre-college program, parents should consider the following:

- What do the kids do in their free time? What is offered on the weekends?
- Can credit be awarded for a course?
- Who teaches the course?
- Is there flexibility in changing courses after the program has started?
- What are the dorm arrangements? How are they supervised?
- Can the kids walk into town alone?
- Will I receive feedback at the end of the program on the students academic courses?
- How much independence will my child have?

Kids tend to be overstructured during the year. Fortunately, these programs can give students a break from the pressure cooker of competitive school environments and allow them to find a passion and have a summer they will always remember.

College Summer Programs FOR HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS

AT WELLESLEY COLLEGE

Academic rigor in the good old summertime

By Carole LaMond
Correspondent

The Summer Session at Wellesley College provides the best of both worlds, academic rigor in a beautiful lakeside setting.

Two co-ed summer sessions offer a range of college courses, with open admission to college students, qualified high school students, and professionals who want to take an intensive four-week academic class, but also enjoy the laid back summer beauty of the campus.

"It's a nice feeling on campus because it's not the same rush of the regular school year," said Corinne Frazer, Director of Summer Session. "The students are still working very hard, but it's summertime, and they have a lighter course load. It's a more relaxed atmosphere in which to soak up all the information and learn."

The campus is buzzing in the summer with many camp and specialty programs, but the Summer Session is an extension of the academic calendar. Wellesley College faculty members teach the full-credit classes that range from Arabic to organic chemistry.

The small class size affords personal interaction with top scholars and teachers at one of the most selective liberal arts colleges in the country as well as the chance to delve more deeply into a subject area.

"Class size does not go above 15, which is one of our selling points along with the one-on-one time with our faculty," said Frazer.

Session I runs from June 11 - July 6 and Session II from July 9 through Aug. 3.

Tuition ranges from $2,300 for a one-unit course to $2,875 for a 1.25-unit course such as a science course with a lab.

Of the approximately 250 students who attend Summer Session I and II, about 10 percent of the first session and 20 percent of the second session are high school students.

The program began 14 years ago as an opportunity for college students who spent a semester abroad to catch up on courses, or for any student to focus more intently on one or two courses at a time.

Though geared toward college-level students, the college ran a two-year pilot program that included three high school students to see if the younger students could keep up with the academic demands of a college-level course.

"The high school students exceeded every expectation, and after the pilot the summer session was open to all high school students in good academic standing," said Frazer. "Our faculty thinks the high school students are great to have in class. They are dedicated, they come ready to learn, and they are excited. They are rising to this level for the first time and they take it very seriously."

High school students must attend as day students, although the college is looking at allowing them to be resident students in the future, said Frazer.

One benefit of the program cited by alumnae of the women's college is that their sons may attend the co-ed summer program and get the "Wellesley experience," said Frazer.

"One of the most popular courses with high school students are the writing courses, which makes sense to get that writing experience in before college applications are due," said Frazer. "Math and science courses are also popular with high school students."

High school students must have a letter from their guidance counselor to be admitted to Summer Session.

"We ask this because we certainly don't want students who come in and have a bad experience because they are not ready to take a college-level class," said Frazer. "We want them to come in and have their first college experience to be a good one. We want them to excel."

Some high school students "chose to come and see if they really wanted to attend college after high school, and the success stories are numerous," said Frazer.

"The environment of this campus is so beautiful, and you see students taking the time to enjoy being here," said Frazer. "It's a busy campus in the summer and it's a fun time to be here."

Taking the Plunge!

Polar event supports Special Olympics

The 14th Annual Polar Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts took place at Nantasket Beach last Saturday, and what a great time was had by a record number of over 500 registered plungers. The day began with the fun Costume Parade with outfits ranging from Video Game characters to Pirates, Mariners, Polar Bears, and dancing Ice Cubes, with more than 1,000 spectators huddling together in the cold air and wind to cheer the Plungers on.

Then followed the serious, adrenalin-pumping business of dashing out and plunging into the icy, roaring surf! Teams came from high schools and colleges, businesses, and Special Olympics community programs, with men and women ranging from age10 to near 80! All survived!

The important result is that, together with the simultaneous Plunge at Revere Beach, close to $400,000 was raised to support our year round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for 13,000 athletes in Massachusetts. As we don't charge our athletes or their families to participate, these funds are vitally important. Even with the help of 12,000 volunteers, it costs almost $500 per year to support each athlete!

Our local 27 member South Shore Mariners Team again won the award for Highest Fundraising team state-wide with $37,306 raised and still counting. Cohasset Mariners included: Jay Nothnagle-Captain, Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Steve Myers, Jeff Nothnagle, Maria Osborne, Pat Plante, and Doug Yeager. Also plunging but for the Ssharcs of the South Shore were Phil Faulkner, Brook Miele, and Charlotte, Graham, and Nick Sida. Jay Nothnagle again won the Highest Individual Fundraiser Award with over $11,500 collected. The funds raised come back to our local Mariners program which has 90 athletes, ages 8 to 76, from seven South Shore towns from Milton to Duxbury. We in turn donate more than half of the money to other local programs based in cities where the fundraising is extremely difficult.

If you haven't yet had a chance, please support our athletes with a pledge! Send a check to your favorite plunger, payable to Special Olympics, or go on-line at "www.PolarPlungeMA.org", our secure site to pledge.

Again, a sincere "thank you" from your local team to all who pledged and supported this wonderful organization that builds self-confidence, pride, and healthy athletes!

Happy Friday, Cohasset! I hope all of you had a great week – it was very busy in the High School!

Both the boys' ice hockey and the boys' basketball teams lost in the playoffs last week, which brings our winter sports season to an end. On March 19th, spring sports start up again. Get ready to watch the reigning state champ baseball team, two incredible lacrosse squads, a huge track and field team, and boys' and girls' tennis teams for the next two and a half months. I'm confident that this will be the school's most successful season this year, with many talented and dedicated players ready to play hard and win! It's guaranteed to be a fun season.

Wednesday was a half-day, our only break in March unless we miraculously get a snow day (but with this week's spring weather and our lack of snow this winter, it's highly unlikely). At 6pm, the first annual Recycled pARTS exhibit took place in the Middle-High School. There was a great turnout and participants had a great time piecing together their recycled works and presenting them at the event. Dresses made up of magazines, clothes fashioned out of scraps, and papier-mâché elephants were all present at the exhibition.

March is going to be an exciting month at the High School. Not only are spring sports starting, a bunch of events are lined up as well.

The school's One-Act play entitled "The Miracle Worker" was presented at the Drama Festival last Saturday. The performance tells the story of Helen Keller and her mentor Annie Sullivan, and is so powerful and inspiring that it was able to bring some of the audience members to tears. Unfortunately, the play was against tough competition, and was not one of the three plays picked to move on to Semi-Finals. The actors did have the opportunity to perform for family and friends on Tuesday night, and the entire High School on Friday during school. Congrats to all on a job well done!

March is going to be an exciting month at the High School. Not only are spring sports starting, a bunch of events are lined up as well. Next Friday, March 16th is the annual Mr. Skipper Pageant. The Pageant is the most lucrative fundraiser for the senior class. Local vendors, please consider making a donation to the raffle! Everyone else, make sure to show up next Friday for this hilarious event. Try to buy tickets in advanced as they often sell out quite quickly! Additionally, there will be the second and final Blood Drive of the school year organized by the Student Council later this month. The Student Council has also organized the school's first-ever Dodge Ball tournament! This thrilling event is scheduled for Wednesday, March 14th at 2:30 pm. Get your friends together to form a team and compete against others to be crowned champion. The tournament is another fundraiser for the senior class to make up for funds lost by not having a Semiformal dance this past January.

Well, that's all for this week, Cohasset. Have a fun, relaxing weekend.

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High School; her column runs monthly during the school year.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 19, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This is a good time to reassess important relationships, both personal and professional, to see where problems might exist and how they can be overcome. Keep communication lines open.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's not easy to bring order to a chaotic situation, whether it's in the workplace or at home. But if anyone can do it, you can. A pleasant surprise awaits you by week's end.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Be careful that you don't make an upcoming decision solely on the word of those who might have their own reasons for wanting you to act as they suggest. Check things out for yourself.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A personal relationship that seems to be going nowhere could be restarted once you know why it stalled. An honest discussion could result in some surprising revelations.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) That unexpected attack of self-doubt could be a way of warning yourself to go slow before making a career-changing decision. Take more time to do a closer study of the facts.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A workplace problem needs your attention, now, before it deteriorates to a point beyond repair. A trusted third party could be helpful in closing the gaps that have opened.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A recent family situation could give rise to a new problem. Keep an open mind and avoid making judgments about anyone's motives until all the facts are in.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Rely on your always-sharp intuition to alert you to potential problems with someone's attempt to explain away the circumstances behind a puzzling incident.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Although you still need to do some snipping off of those lingering loose ends from a past project, you can begin moving on to something else.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) With your self-confidence levels rising, you should feel quite comfortable with agreeing to take on a possibly troublesome, but potentially well-rewarded, situation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Travel is favored, both for business and for fun. The end of the week brings news about an upcoming project that could lead toward that promised career change.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might feel suddenly overwhelmed by a flood of responsibilities. But if you deal with each one in its turn, you'll soon be able to hold your head above water and move on.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a wonderful way of offering comfort as well as guidance. You would do well in the healing arts.

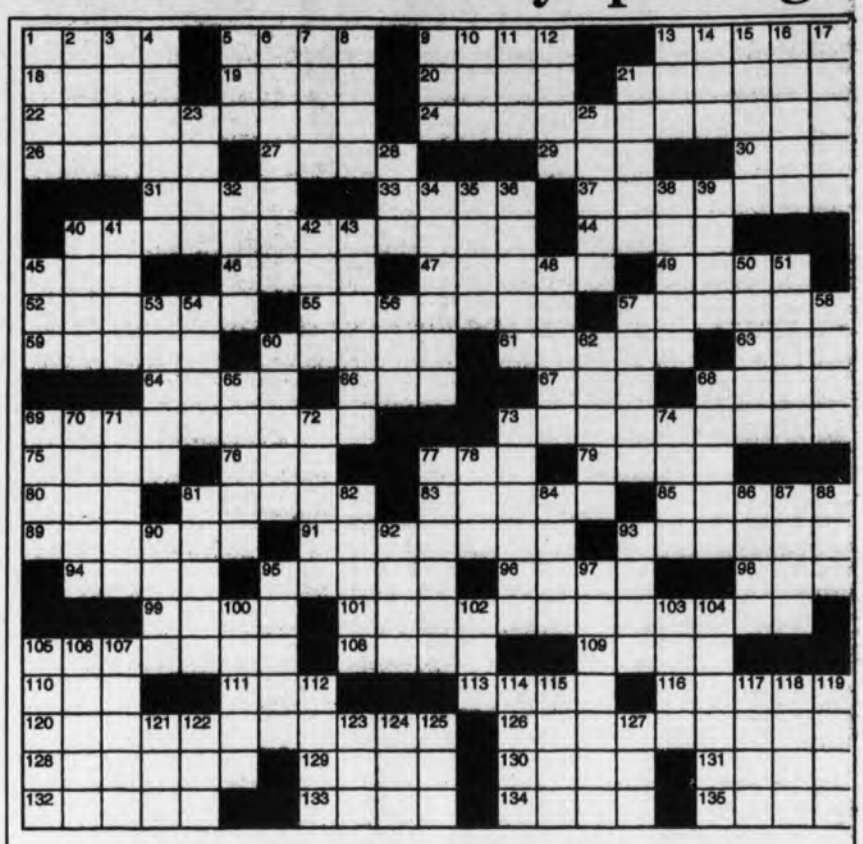
Fun By The Numbers



Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Moderate

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Virtuoso organist coming to Cohasset

First Parish Cohasset is delighted to welcome virtuoso organist Erica Johnson for the first time. The program will include music specially chosen to feature our historic Hutchings organ, which was built in 1892. First Parish is located on the green at North Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. The concert will take place on Sunday, March 19 at 3 pm. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Dr. Johnson will present a program of European organ music from the 17th-20th centuries. The program is designed to highlight the musical character of the Hutchings instrument and will include selections by the Baroque composers Muffat, Poglietti, J.S. Bach; Bach's student Johann Krebs; and the twentieth-century composers Karg-Elert and Jongen.

Dr. Erica Johnson has performed across the United States and Europe, playing a wide variety of instruments and repertoire. Upon receiving a generous grant from the Frank Huntington Beebe Fund for Musicians in 2001, Erica investigated historical keyboard technique and instruments in Bremen, Germany for two years. She was able to play a number of organs by Arp Schnitger, one of the most important builders active in Germany in the 17th and 18th centuries. In 2002, she won second prize in the Norddeutsche Rundfunk International Organ Competition, In November of 2004, she received the 2004 International Arp Schnitger Preis in Hamburg, Germany, by the Arp Schnitger Gesellschaft in recognition of her experience on these organs.

Dr. Johnson is a graduate of Oberlin College, Oberlin Conservatory, New England Conservatory, and the Eastman School of Music, where she earned the Doctorate of Musical Arts. From 1999-2001 she was Organ Scholar at The Memorial Church of Harvard University. She taught Organ Literature at Oberlin and Eastman for several years, and served as Interim Professor of Organ at the University of North Carolina School of the Arts in 2008-09. She is currently Director of Pastoral Music at Blessed Sacrament Parish in Walpole, MA.

The organ at First Parish Cohasset was built by the prestigious Boston organ builder George Hutchings, whose work was unexcelled at the turn of the century. It is comprised of two keyboards and pedal controlling 21 stops and 15 ranks. The Morel Organ Company rebuilt the organ in 1970.

ON STAGE SOON AT TOWN HALL

Noted choreographer on board for local production of 'Chicago'

By R. Scott Reedy
correspondent

When the powers-that-be at Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) decided it was time to razzle dazzle South Shore audiences with the musical "Chicago," the company not only gave the production the largest budget in its 91-year history, but also found a choreographer familiar with the show from both sides of the footlights.

Director and choreographer Wendy Hall, who choreographed CDC's memorable 2009 mounting of "The Wedding Singer," helmed the John Kander and Fred Ebb musical for New Bedford Festival Theater a decade ago and, just last January, choreographed it for Old Rochester Regional High School. In 1989, while a New Bedford High School student, Hall was cast in a professional production of "Chicago" at New Bedford's Zeiterion Theatre.

"That was my first paying gig as a performer," recalled Hall by telephone last week. "I played June and I learned so much from Clay James, who had been a Broadway dancer and who directed and choreographed that production. At the very first rehearsal of 'All That Jazz,' I took to the Bob Fosse-style of choreography like a fish to water. I was the right body type and, right from the get go, I knew I loved it. As a little girl, I had always thought about ballet. Doing Fosse, however, made me realize pretty quickly that I could be something other than a ballerina."

Just six years later, and fresh out of Boston Conservatory where she earned a BFA in musical theater, Hall played Hunyak in a six-month-long national tour of "Chicago."

"Doing that many performances really ingrains a show in you. It was during that tour that I realized I wanted to be a director. The whole time that I was dancing eight shows a week, I was thinking, 'If I were in charge of this production, what would I do with it?' I minored in directing in college and I guess I had always known that I wanted to direct."

Set in Prohibition-era Chicago, and based on the 1926 Broadway play of the same name by crime reporter Maurine Dallas Watkins, "Chicago" was first made into a silent movie in 1927, and then, in 1942, remade and retitled "Roxie Hart" as a vehicle for Ginger Rogers. The story of two female inmates being defended by the same slick attorney was developed into a musical by legendary director and choreographer Bob Fosse at the request of his wife, performer Gwen Verdon, as a collaboration with Kander and Ebb, the songwriting team behind "Cabaret." Opening on Broadway in 1976, and starring Verdon, Chita Rivera, and Jerry Orbach, "Chicago" was shut out at the 1976 Tony Awards by "A Chorus Line" but still managed a very respectable two-year run.

A revival of "Chicago: The Musical," directed by Walter Bobbie and choreographed by Fosse muse Ann Reinking in his style, opened on Broadway in November 1996 with Reinking, Bebe Neuwirth, and Joel Grey in starring roles. That Tony Award-winning production, now the longest-running revival in Broadway history, is still playing in New York, spawning seemingly endless tours and a feature film version, starring Renee Zellweger, Catherine Zeta-Jones, and Richard Gere, that won the 2002 Academy Award for Best Picture.

"The company we have assembled in Cohasset is absolutely great. They work on the show even when they don't have a rehearsal scheduled."
Wendy Hall

Hall is enjoying sharing responsibility for the CDC production, which opens at Cohasset Town Hall Theater on March 16, with director Lisa Pratt.

"The company we have assembled in Cohasset is absolutely great. They work on the show even when they don't have a rehearsal scheduled. That is good, too, because Fosse was all about the intricacy of the movements. To be done right, they must be razor-sharp even when sometimes it may be just a shoulder that is moving. Our cast is really committed. They are doing a great job with not only the dancing but also the acting."

Hall, the mother of three sons from her first marriage, will be making a commitment of her own later this month when she weds Walter Chomak in an afternoon ceremony at Boston's Mistral on March 31. Although the Acushnet native who now lives in Plymouth says she doesn't plan any elaborate choreography for the dancing that may happen at the event, she is not promising that she won't direct some of the proceedings.

"We'll be having a wedding rehearsal, of course, and I'll probably be telling people where things should be placed to ensure our guests have the best views," says Hall with a hearty laugh.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "Chicago: The Musical" from March 16 to April 1 at Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset. Tickets may be purchased at Paperscapes or Buttonwood Books & Toys in Cohasset or online at brownpapertickets.com. For more information, visit cohassetdramaticclub.org.

Cohasset doctors help launch urgent care facility

South Shore community gathered to watch as Weymouth Mayor, Susan M. Kay joined Dr. Christopher Whelan and Dr. Michael Hughes of Cohasset to help reveal the first look at the new urgent care facility, Health Express. Health Express is the first of its kind urgent care facility in the state staffed exclusively by Board Certified Emergency Medicine Physicians. With the addition of Health Express to the community, the South Shore will play a key role in the future of Massachusetts healthcare.

Health Express is advantageous for the patient, for insurance companies and the health care system as a whole. Citizens of Massachusetts, and more specifically, the South Shore, are now able to access medical care customized to meet the needs of today's fast-paced lifestyle. Health Express will open its doors to the community on March 15th, 2012.

Health Express is the first of its kind on the South Shore, offering unique benefits, including:

- All patients will be seen by a Board Certified Emergency Room Doctor
- Walk -In Service for pediatric and adult urgent care medical needs.
- No waiting
- No referral
- Most insurance welcome

DOLLARS TO DOUGHNUTS

Just no debate

CRAIG SALTERS

Back in the school days, we students had to pick a weekly club activity and I chose debating club. It was really fun because it seemed a more organized version of the dysfunctional family arguments I was already having.

But one week we were searching for good debate topics – school busing, energy use, freedom of speech – and one student suggested "child abuse." It was an honest suggestion but our debating coach told us it wouldn't work. Why? Because you can't legitimately take the "pro" side of child abuse. Oh, yeah.

That was a lesson I never forgot but, apparently, some people never learned it. That's why I'm hearing so many television and radio pundits get up on their proverbial soapboxes and debate about topics that, in my mind, aren't debatable. In fact, they're no-brainers.

Over the weekend, I learned that the former defensive coordinator of the New Orleans Saints allegedly had a bounty program where his players received cash rewards for knocking other players out of games. And just what exactly is worthy of debate here? If true, the guy is a Class-A jerk and his players are losers for not reporting him. Yes, it's a violent sport and players are rewarded for knocking someone out of their cleats... within the rules. When the intent becomes to injure, what should be a clear bright line becomes blurry and there's absolutely no excuse for that. Anyone who supports one athlete trying to intentionally hurt another athlete, at whatever level, is empowering a bully and a coward.

On Friday, while listening to the radio I found out that a parent of a Winthrop High School girls hockey player had allegedly used a green light laser pen to disrupt the vision of the opposing team's goalie during a game. The Winthrop team won and now there's debate as to whether they should move on and what should happen to the alleged perpetrator. I can see why the game might be a tough call but, if true, the dad should face charges. It's abhorrent behavior, game or no.

Later, I found out that a popular conservative talk show host had called a private citizen rude names simply because she was trying to speak her mind. Again, all the clouds of conservative and liberal come into play and people start confusing very debatable topics – health care, birth control, the role of the government – with the non-debatable topic of civility. Person X used a nationally syndicated radio program to call Person Y a name I wouldn't feel comfortable putting in this newspaper. Well, person X should apologize. Next question.

Finally, and most sadly, I find discussion about a man who allegedly heckled a witness in the so-called "Mattapan Massacre" trial. This is a case where four people were killed, including a 2-year-old. Thankfully, 99 percent of people believe this heckler is a dirtbag but I find it sad that anyone can think otherwise.

Debating topics is vital to an open and civil society. I think it's important that everyone have the right to speak their minds on whatever topic they choose. But I also have that right and, to me, wasting one's breath on cruel coaches, idiot fathers, bombastic talk show hosts and "code of silence" enablers seems like a waste of time.

TOWN MANAGER

Citizens have their say

Coughlin controversy aired out at meeting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Nearly 100 Cohasset residents filled the high school library Tuesday night, March 13, to speak their mind on the possible firing of Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who has been suspended with pay after six months on the job.

The Board of Selectmen are seeking to terminate Coughlin, who took the helm as town manager on Aug. 1, without cause, citing failure to communicate with the selectmen, inability to work cooperatively with town board members, and disagreement with the selectmen as to how town matters should be handled as the reasons for their resolution.

Coughlin's attorney, Douglas Louison, said that if slectmen remove Coughlin without cause, his client would have grounds to file a whistleblower lawsuit against the town. More than one resident told the selectmen they would rather keep Coughlin as town manager than see the town engage in what could become a lengthy legal battle.

Selectmen Chairman Edwin Carr said that the purpose of the public hearing, which lasted for five hours, was for the board to hear from Coughlin, his lawyer, Town Counsel, and the townspeople, and decide whether to proceed with Coughlin's removal.

The room was packed to near capacity, and supporters argued to the selectmen that six months is simply not enough time to determine that Coughlin is unfit to do the job. Those who agreed with the selectmen's resolution to remove Coughlin, however, cited lack of communication and poor fiscal management as reasons the town should end this "marriage" with Coughlin in divorce.

Dozens of citizens spoke in support of Coughlin, saying that they had no trouble communicating with them; if anything, he over-communicated with them. A few others said that he often ignored their requests and failed to meet important deadlines for sewer hookups and the need to find a new veterans' service officer, among other issues.

When the meeting ended at midnight, the selectmen deliberated on when to hold a public session to relay their final decision. The board plans to meet this Friday evening, but since Coughlin and his attorney requested to be present but said that they cannot be there this Friday, the selectmen might hold the meeting next Monday night.

'Irreconcilable differences'

Many used marriage as a metaphor to describe the town manager's employment with the town.

Resident George Charmillard said the town should chalk it up to "irreconcilable differences" and move on; Coughlin and the town simply weren't compatible, he said.

Louison said that his client's relationship with the town "isn't about dating in high school, and we're just not getting along anymore. This is a contract the board of selectmen entered into seven months ago. It was a pretty broad search; the board engaged a consulting company and after a long, expensive process, Mr. Coughlin was recommended as the top candidate."

Coughlin said that if it's like a marriage, they should seek conflict resolution, since relationships are "built on communication."

Two attorneys represented the town at the hearing: Peter Berry and Kimberly Saillant of the Boston firm Deutsch Williams. Saillant engaged

Town contracts under fire

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Following last week's discussion on non-union town employee contracts, the Board of Selectmen voted Monday night to reject 12 contracts.

Town Manager Michael Coughlin, who was suspended three weeks ago with pay, made changes to these contracts during his sixth month of employment with the town. These employees would have received raises for fiscal year 2013. The board, along with Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, said there were enough problems with these contracts to reject them.

The board is giving Milanoski 30 days to negotiate with each employee whose contract has been rejected and to have them sign a letter of agreement.

These contracts, said Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr, "are not in the best interest of the town."

Selectmen stressed that none of these employees are losing their jobs; they also said the employees should be held harmless because they bargained in good faith with the town.

Milanoski told selectmen that these contracts "were not done according to protocol" and that Coughlin should have given notice to the board. "Some of the salary increases were up to 21 percent, and some were done in the last three weeks before [Coughlin's] suspension."

COMMUNITY PRESERVATION COMMITTEE

Church and state at center of debate

Funding First Parish Meetinghouse project called into question

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Members of Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee, at times, ponder the philosophical ramifications behind projects seeking funding.

Case in point was recent correspondence from Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz objecting to the CPC's recommendation for $65,000 to restore the windows at the First Parish Meetinghouse.

The emails between Altholtz and CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti propelled CPC members into a philosophical discussion at their recent meeting about the First Amendment, and whether allocating money for rehabilitation of a historic church crosses the line on constitutional grounds in terms of separation of church and state.

After learning about the CPC's recommendation, Altholtz wrote to Bonetti stating that many aspects to the proposal inappropriately blur the lines around government funding and support of religious institutions.

Altholtz, who was out of town and could not attend the recent CPC meeting in person, stated in the email that using taxpayer money for the renovation would be unconstitutional. He wrote that separation of church and state, enshrined in the First Amendment, is a fundamental principle, which has served the country well and ultimately insures the protection of religious freedom.

Bonetti, who said all CPC articles proposed for Town Meeting are vetted by Town Counsel before being put into the warrant, pointed out that there was plenty of precedent statewide for using Community Preservation Act funds for restoration of historic churches over the past 10 years. "I find it hard to believe if there was something that would make a project like this ineligible that it would not have come up by now," Bonetti said.

Water RFP Public Forum is March 26

On Monday, March 26 at the Middle/High School Auditorium, the Water Commission will be hosting an information session regarding our upcoming contract renewal.

The commission will be discussing all options for the water company, including the proposed concession contract, and the process leading up to a likely change in operators on June 30. The forum will begin at 7 p.m. and will include a short presentation followed by an extensive Q&A period. All are encouraged to attend.

'In Our Closet' lecture at Pratt Building

Cohasset Historical Society's Wednesday Night Lecture Series will continue with "In Our Closet" Part II on Wednesday, March 21. Martha Hurtig and Martha Fisher will continue exploring the costume collection with accessories stored in boxes. A plethora of hats, gloves, stockings and other accoutrements will be offered for viewing. The history and unique features of some of the items, as well as the diversity of fabric and technique used to produce them, will be discussed. One item of particular interest is a collar made from the silk of the milkweed plant. The Society's textile room holds many boxes each housing a part of Cohasset's past.

The program will begin at 7:30, p.m., on Wednesday, March 21, at the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., Cohasset. There is no fee for this evening's entertainment and light refreshment will be served.

CAT DAM

Officials meet with MEPA

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Milanoski said that he and Shea have drafted an ENF that will be submitted to the MEPA office within the next few weeks.

The Board of Selectmen reported Monday night that steps are being taken to resolve the flushing issue at inner Little Harbor, also known as Cat Dam.

A selectmen-designated committee met with the deputy director of the state's MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Protection Act) office to discuss potential next steps.

Cat Dam is a tide gate mechanism with three gates that has been used to control the water flow for more than 100 years. The dam and tide gate structure are owned by the town, but located on privately owned property. The crux of the Cat Dam issue, which has sparked many public, heated debates between residents and abutters, is how often to flush inner Little Harbor to maintain water levels, improve or maintain water quality, and prevent the noxious odors that result when inner Little Harbor becomes a mudflat.

The town's proposed Cat Dam project involves changing the flushing schedule for the tide gates; these changes were the subject of an Order of Conditions issued by the Conservation Commission last July. This was appealed by group of neighbors calling themselves the Environmental 20, or E-20.

The Conservation Commission approved a new Notice of Intent (NOI) in late July, but that decision was appealed to the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) by another citizen group. A representative from the DEP conducted a site visit in September and later issued a letter to the town stating that the project triggered the MEPA threshold, which requires the town to file an Environmental Notification Form (ENF) and a mandatory Environmental Impact Report (EIR).

Town counsel wrote in a letter to the MEPA office that they disagreed with the DEP findings that said the proposed project would alter the wetlands as defined by the state's Wetlands Protection Act. In a letter dated Dec. 6, 2011, MEPA responded that the DEP has the final word in interpreting its own regulations. Arrangements were then made for town officials to meet with MEPA.

Selectman Paul Carlson and Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski, who is also an associate member of the Conservation Commission, both attended the meeting, along with Conservation Commissioner Jack Creighton and the commission's conservation agent, Paul Shea, and Town Counsel Richard Hucksam.

Milanoski said that the meeting involved a productive discussion on the history of the flushing project, going over multiple reports. The MEPA office provided guidance to the Cohasset officials.

Under MEPA regulations, projects that call for a MEPA review require that the project's proponent file an Environmental Notification Form (ENF) with the Secretary of the Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs; the proponent must also circulate copies of the ENF and publish a Public Notice of Environmental Review.

According to the regulations, the ENF must:

- Include a concise but accurate description of the project and its alternatives
- Identify any review thresholds the project may meet or exceed and any agency action it may require Present the Proponent's initial assessment of potential environmental impacts, propose mitigation measures
- May include a proposed scope

Milanoski said that he and Shea have drafted an ENF that will be submitted to the MEPA office within the next few weeks. It will then be advertised in the Environmental Monitor to "open up the public process," said Milanoski.

Look for updates in an upcoming issue of the Mariner.

POLICE BEAT

Motorized bicycle rider faces charges

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

A 29-year-old Weymouth man is being summonsed to court to face two charges after police pulled over the motorized bicycle he was riding inside the fog line northbound on Route 3A on Wednesday, March 7 at 9:54 p.m. As it turned out, the man did not have a registration sticker and his driver's license had been revoked for being a habitual traffic offender. Police said the man explained that the store where he purchased the sticker told him he did not need a license.

He is being charged with operating an unregistered motor vehicle and operating with a revoked license. His motorized bicycle was towed.

Summonsed

A 21-year-old Marshfield woman is being summonsed for operating an uninsured and unregistered motor vehicle following a traffic stop on Thursday, March 8 at 9:51 p.m. at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street. An officer conducted a computer check on the 1992 Toyota Camry that showed the registration had been revoked due to cancellation of insurance. The car was towed.

House egged

For the second time in two weeks a house on Deep Run was vandalized with eggs. The 51-year-old homeowner who has school-age children reported the latest incident on Monday, March 5, police said.

Guy wire

At 9:36 a.m. on Monday, March 5, police responded to an accident on Depot Court involving a 2009 International WD Mason delivery truck, operated by a 24-year-old Plainville man, that hit the guy wire. The incident damaged the top of the truck and destabilized the utility pole. Both Verizon and National Grid were notified to steady the pole. The truck driver was cited for failure to use care. There was more than $1,000 in damage to the truck, police said.

Deer struck

Police responded to an accident on S. Main Street at 5:54 p.m. on Monday, March 5 involving a deer. Police said a 53-year-old woman driving a 2010 Jeep Grand Cherokee said she was headed toward Scituate when three deer darted out. She hit the third one, police said. The deer was killed in the accident – the other two deer kept going. There was substantial damage to the Jeep, which had to be towed. The woman driving was not injured, police said.

Bad check

A local jewelry store notified police on Monday, March 5 that a customer had purchased some jewelry with a check that was returned due to insufficient funds. Police explained that the store needed to notify the customer in writing about the bounced check and if the customer does not respond, then police can pursue a criminal charge.

Erratic operation

Police pulled over a 2006 Mazda operated by at 56-year-old Marshfield woman on Sohier Street at around 7:15 p.m. on Monday, March 5 after receiving a report that the Mazda was being driven erratically and was all over the road. A sergeant observed the operation and pulled the car over. The driver admitted to having been distracted but was otherwise not impaired. She said she would be more careful, police said.

Dispute

Two neighbors, who are both building new houses in town, have been having disputes over property lines, police said. Police said they consider the issue a civil matter at this point with no way to prove who is in the right. One of the neighbors is seeking a no-trespass order against the other, police said.

Dog located

A S. Main Street woman notified police last week thinking that her English Spaniel had been stolen out of her house. Police said the dog, which was fine, was located upstairs in the resident.

Gunshots

Police have been investigating two separate reports from Tad Lane last week from callers who reported hearing gunshots. Police have been unable to locate where the shots have been coming from.

Dog complaint

A local eatery complained to police that a golden Lab mix named Princess was in their trash. The complaint came in at 10:53 p.m. on Wednesday, March 7. Police referred the matter to the Animal Control Officer.

Keyed

A 21-year-old man working at Shaw's reported to police on Sunday, March 11 that his 2003 Saab had been keyed in the parking lot at the plaza. Police reviewed surveillance footage but the car was not parked in view of the cameras. At this point there are no suspects.

EVENT

CCTV open house

Cohasset Community TV (CCTV) kicked off its new 143TV Studio this week with the airing of the Board of Selectmen's public hearing on Town Manager Michael Coughlin on Tuesday, March 13.

With the new studio opening, the show "Our Town" will be back in action. A two-part episode was filmed this week with Coughlin and selectmen chairman Ted Carr.

Local viewers catch the show starting next Monday, March 19 through Thursday at 8 p.m. on Comcast channel 10 and Verizon channel 37.

Pat Martin, President of CCTV, would also like to invite members of the community to the station's open house on Saturday, March 24 from 2-5 p.m. The event will begin with a ceremonial ribbon cutting.

Water Department issues drought advisory notice

Cohasset Water Department's Drought Management Plan phase has been raised from normal to advisory based on the dry conditions and lack of precipitation experienced over the past several months.

Cohasset Water Department regularly monitors precipitation, reservoir levels and flow in Bound Brook and Aaron River. Routine monitoring indicates that precipitation for the months of December, January and February is well below normal.

Reservoir levels in both Lily Pond and Aaron River Reservoir remain at near 100 percent and habitat flows through the fish-ways at the Bound Brook Control Structure and at Aaron River Dam are being maintained.

Cohasset Water Department recommends and encourages prudent use of water by all customers. One significant spring precipitation event could return the Drought Phase to normal. Check the website at www.cohassetwater.org home page banner for the current drought status.

EAGLE SCOUT

Project paves way for park trail

By Erin Dale

Rob Hillman at the trail and boardwalk he built for his Eagle Scout project at George Ingram Park on Beechwood Street. STAFF PHOTO CHRIS BERNSTEIN

One of the Boy Scouts in Troop 28 has become quite the trailblazer.

To attain the rank of Eagle Scout, Rob Hillman, 16, a junior at BC High, built a trail and boardwalk for the Cohasset Conservation Trust in its property known as George Ingram Park on Beechwood Street.

The rank of Eagle Scout is the highest a Boy Scout can achieve. In order to become one, a scout must have earned 21 merit badges and completed a service project that shows leadership skills and benefits a local community non-profit.

Cohasset Conversation Trust member Dick Avery, who also serves as a troop leader, pitched the idea to Hillman. He ended up supervising Hillman on the project, along with fellow Trust member Gary Vanderweil.

"Eagle Scout requirements focus on the leadership aspect of the troop," said Hillman. "Merit badges were created to not only give boys a chance to experience things like that, but to open up the opportunity to look at future jobs and college. I believe that was actually one of the reasons scouting was created."

Hillman's project helped him foster some vital communication skills since he had to appear before both the Cohasset Conservation Trust and the Conservation Commission to get his project approved, since the Commission and Trust own the land together. He also had to seek approval from the Scouting Council.

The Eagle Scout met with the two boards last summer and began working on the project that fall.

"It took over 100 hours accumulatively that everyone helped out," said Hillman (Eagle Scout projects require at least 100 hours). "It took two days of solid work in the actual park, clearing the trail, raking away leaves, cutting down trees and making a trail there."

Hillman and his team of helpers – which consisted of most of Troop 28 and friends of Hillman's from other troops in the same council – had to come up with a solution to create a trail that runs over wetlands.

"It's a wet, marshy area when it rains," said Hillman. "To make a trail through there, we had to find some way around that. We came up with a two-plank boardwalk with two foot-wide boards... On a wet day, it stays still. We got lucky with that."

Hillman and his friends also had to make a set of stairs for the part of the trail that slopes down into the woods.

Now, said Hillman, "It's dry land in the beginning, then it goes to the marsh. The end of the trail gets back onto dry land and extends another 100 yards back into the woods. The trail ends back in the woods, and there's a clear area where people can still walk around."

Hillman, who turns 17 this April, started scouting as a Wolf Scout at age 9 and worked his way up through Cub Scouts before becoming a Boy Scout at 11. He has served as Quatermaster, Patrol Leader and Senior Patrol Leader and has been through National Youth Leadership Training at Camp Squanto in Plymouth.

Hillman also attended the Boy Scout's National Jamboree at Fort AP Hill in Virginia in 2010, which was the centennial year of boy scouting in America.

"It's a huge weeklong experience where scouts from all over the country and invited scouts from the world come to meet each other, earn badges, trade things from all over... It was amazing to be a part of."

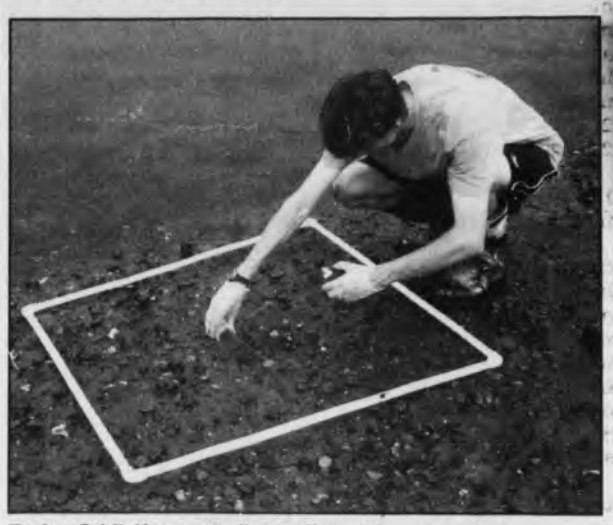
Hillman said that another highlight of his scouting career was a 2009 trip to the Philmont Scout Ranch in New Mexico that involved two weeks of backpacking and mountain climbing.

"This experience has been one of my most treasured moments from scouting, and I still wear a belt that I branded there everyday."

Hillman was awarded Eagle Scout on Dec. 12, 2011.

He said that both the Conservation Trust and Commission expressed interest in doing more work in George Ingram Park, including future Eagle Scout projects that would involve extending the woods.

Hillman, for his part, had fun blazing the trail.



"I was fortunate to have so many people help out over two weekends," said the Eagle Scout. "There were a lot of good guys working on that. We got it done efficiently, very quickly, and it turned out great."

When he's not involved with the Boy Scouts (Hillman also works a summer job at Camp Squanto), the Eagle Scout keeps plenty busy at BC High as a member of the National Honor Society, Drama Society and two school bands. Hillman plays the trumpet both at school and around town as a member of the Rusty Skippers Band, which he joined when he started high school. He also plays in a band in Scituate.

The high school junior is not yet sure where he wants to go to college in a few years or what he'd like to study. He is considering attending a small, liberal arts college and is interested in science, engineering and psychology.

"I have enough time to figure it out," he said.

STATE OF THE HARBOR

Tucker Oddleifson sampling sediment for measuring enterococci bacteria in Cohasset Harbor. Tucker will present his research results to the public at State of the Harbor 2012 at 7 p.m., on April 10, at the Lighthouse Keepers Residence.

Public forum will take place April 10

His analysis reveals that both the sediment and water Enterococci concentrations in the Cove far exceed the more moderate levels found at the Sailing Club and the low levels at the Yacht Club.

2012's State of the Harbor is fast approaching on April 10, and in order to prepare, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research will release summaries of the projects that will be presented at the event. The first is the Cohasset Harbor Marine Sediment Enterococci Study, belonging to Tucker Oddleifson, a Cohasset High School senior and active CSCR staff member.

Through a grant awarded by the Marjot Foundation in June 2011, Oddleifson set out last summer to study the understood elevated bacteria levels in Cohasset Harbor's waters in relationship to the unknown bacteria levels of the harbor's sediment. Tucker's hypothesis was as follows: "The Enterococci concentration and speciation in sediment will directly correlate with that of ambient water Enterococci," and in fact, he was correct: The data suggests the sediment is contributing to Cohasset Harbor's high level of water bacteria.

Oddleifson arrived at these conclusions by conducting three triplicate sampling events throughout the summer at Cohasset Yacht Club, Cohasset Sailing Club and in Cohasset Harbor Cove. In addition to analyzing bacteria in the water and sediment samples from each of these sites, he monitored salinity, conductivity, dissolved oxygen and temperatures at each of the three locations.

His analysis reveals that both the sediment and water Enterococci concentrations in the Cove far exceed the more moderate levels found at the Sailing Club and the low levels at the Yacht Club. This data corresponds with tidal flushing data for Cohasset Harbor: The Cove experiences far less tidal exchange than the other two sites.

For a greater understanding of the impact of sediment on Cohasset Harbor health, be sure to attend CSCR's State of the Harbor 2012 initiative to hear more on Oddleifson's research in addition to the other student projects. The State of the Harbor 2012 public forum will take place at the Lighthouse Keepers at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, April 10. Admission is free and the forum is open to the public.

DELINQUINT BILLS

Water dept. to begin shut-offs

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Water Commission announced during Monday night's Board of Selectmen meeting that it will soon enact a shut-off policy for Cohasset ratepayers that have not yet paid their fiscal year 2012 water bills (from July 1, 2011 to present).

Water Commissioner Leonora Jenkins read aloud from a statement:

"A June 21, 2011 report from the Treasurer's office indicated that $436K was owed to use from Cohasset ratepayers... This amount did not include $69K of water being pumped into the pond on the common or the almost $100K unpaid bills from the school between '03 and '08."

Jenkins added that the water department also had to pay $50K in legal bills to defend the town against a lawsuit from neighbors who did not want AT&T cellular antennas on the top perimeter of the Bear Hill Water Tank. This case was dismissed, but Jenkins said that if the town had won, the water department would have received $40K annual income from the phone company to help stabilize water rates. The antenna would have also provided service to Cohasset customers and supplied cell service for the Emergency Center at the Deer Hill School, said Jenkins.

The water commissioner told the selectmen that the group who filed the lawsuit claimed to be protecting their private property rights, "but none of the proposal was on anyone's property."

The water department has a receivable deficit of $436K with a payable number of $274K, Jenkins said.

The result is that the water department is owed almost $480K from Cohasset customers. The best solution, according to the commission, is to take "an aggressive, proactive approach" to collecting the funds owed to the department.

Jenkins said that the water commission reached out to the community through bill stuffers and articles in the Mariner beginning in July of last year to elicit the town's opinion on the matter. "The wholehearted response was to commence the shut-off policy."

The water department will begin by sending letters to the ratepayers that owe the highest amount, followed by another letter 30 days later. Customers have 105 days to pay their water bill from the time they get their bill.

Once shut off, customers will have to pay a $350 fee to the water department in order to have the water turned back on.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that it's important to note that there are provisions for those in hardship who cannot pay their bill. Jenkins said that customers are entitled to a hearing. She added that while some people have hardships, it appears that repeat offenders are simply not paying their bills.

"It's not fair to our customers who are paying and not fair to taxpayers if we have to come to Town Meeting and ask for more money," said Jenkins. "We're trying to get this cleaned up. So many people are paying their bills consistently. We're providing a service; why should we have to wait 17 months to receive payment for that service?"

The water commissioner said that there are a few options to cover the water department's deficit aside from shut-offs; these include:

1. Continue collecting the funds through Town Hall and putting delinquent payments on a tax lien six months after the end of the fiscal year

Do as Town Manager Michael Coughlin suggested by hiring more Town Hall staff and offer amnesty

Jenkins said that the first option would leave the water department asking for Free Cash from Fall Town Meeting, which would result in bills from July 2010 not getting paid until February 2012. She opined that the second option would increase expenses and "not provide the needed cash flow."

The water commissioner said that the water department will be acting very quickly to enact the shut-off policy and will begin sending out letters soon.

Cohasset events running amok?

Selectmen consider policy to limit races, walks

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Selectmen are going to put on their agenda in an upcoming meeting a discussion about the number of road races, walks and events in the town during the milder months that tie up the roadways.

The issue surfaced last week when three groups came before the board seeking permission for their events: the annual Walk MS Cohasset event for Multiple Sclerosis; the annual Jack Hubbard Fun Run (being renamed the Hubbard Fun Run) that benefits the Cohasset Maritime Institute; and a new family fun run and 5-kilometer race, co-sponsored by the Cohasset Education Foundation and the Cohasset Recreation Department.

"I have never heard anyone in town saying we need more events to tie up the streets on a Saturday or Sunday morning."
Selectman Paul Carlson

These events are in addition to the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea, Little League Parade, Arts Festival, Cohasset Triathlon and Cohasset Day, among others.

The board, particularly selectmen Diane Kennedy and Paul Carlson, said the number of events was getting out of hand.

Carlson pointed out that all the events are for good causes but there can be too much of a good thing.

"I have never heard anyone in town saying we need more events to tie up the streets on a Saturday or Sunday morning," Carlson said.

Kennedy said she receives more calls and emails at her house about this issue than anything else.

"I am not against them," she said about the non-profit events, pointing out that her husband is a runner and participates. But she said the board should talk about a policy that could include limiting the number of events so they do not occur every weekend in the nicer months.

"We need to think about as a community whether we want to have one a month or spread it out," Kennedy said.

Selectman Fred Koed thought an events calendar would be a good idea.

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr said he would schedule a strategy discussion.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia and Police Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor, who were both in the audience, said the MS Walk and the Hubbard Fun Run had not created any public safety problems in the past.

Approved last week:

- Walk MS Cohasset: May 5.
- CEF and Cohasset Recreation Dept. 5K/1 mile Fun Run: June 10.
- Third running of the Hubbard Memorial fun run: July 21

AROUND TOWN

Irish eyes will be smiling this weekend

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Hello Cohasset! What a great week for the most part in terms of the switch from winter to "almost spring" and even though Daylight Saving Time is always a little tricky to adjust too, it is so nice to have the extra hour of light at the end of the day. This weekend, St. Patrick's Day arrives tomorrow (Saturday), so make sure to look around for any teeny green footprints, green crumbs or other signs of those pesky little Leprachauns. On Sunday at 1 p.m. in Scituate, the annual St. Patrick's Day Parade kicks off heading down First Parish Road into Scituate Harbor and is always great fun for everyone. Whatever your plans, make sure to enjoy the weekend with safe partying in mind. Have a wonderful time with the nice weather and make sure to tell your family and friends how much they mean to you.

Happy St. Patrick's Day Cohasset...

Library events

A number of events are coming up for you to enjoy at the Cohasset Paul Pratt Memorial Library soon. Vincent J. Cannato, author of "American Passage: The History of Ellis Island" will visit on Sunday, April 1 at 4 p.m. Wine and cheese reception and book signing to follow. Seating is limited. Reserve your free ticket at the library, Buttonwood Books, or the Cohasset Historical Society. Sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cohasset.

Another event for you to enjoy is a free daytime movie on Friday, April 6 at 11 a.m. This month's feature is "True Grit" starring Jeff Bridges. Free admission and light refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

The last event is for you to learn how to search the Internet at a Basic Internet Search workshop on Wednesday, April 11 at 10:30 a.m. This event is free, however, seating is limited. Call the library at 781-383-1348 to register.

Shelter sale

Save your spring-cleaning treasures! Scituate Animal Shelter volunteers will be collecting donations of your new or gently used household items in preparation for the huge yard sale April 14-15. Items may be dropped off at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Route 3A, Scituate, during the following times: Wednesday March 28, 6-8 p.m.; Friday March 30, 10 a.m.-noon; Saturday, March 31, 10 a.m.-2 p.m.; Sunday, April 1, 11 a.m.-1 p.m.; and Saturday, April 7, 10 a.m.-2 p.m. Items that are not accepted are: TVs, computers or computer accessories, exercise or ski equipment, large furniture, clothing, used bedding or damaged/broken items. Proceeds from the yard sale will benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter, an independent, non-profit animal shelter which serves the greater South Shore community and beyond. More details online at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org or call 781-544-4533.

Hoops jamboree

Come join the fun at the "Cohasset Basketball Jamboree" to celebrate a fantastic boys and girls rec/travel season! There will be dribble relays, shooting, agility, and lay-up contests for grades 1-8, a "coaches" shooting contest, some "parent vs. player" games for grades 5-8, food, face painting and so much more. All of this will take place at the Cohasset High School gym on Sunday, April 1 from 3-4 p.m. for grades 1-4 and 4-6 p.m. for grades 5-8. If you would like to play in the grades 5-8 "parent vs. player game" or are interested in volunteering for the event, please email cohassetballssignup@gmail.com to register. Otherwise, no need to sign up, just bring the kids and have fun!

Swim staff

With the warm weather this week, we are all starting to think about summer! The Cohasset Swim Center is gearing up for its best season yet and is seeking applications for a pool director, guards, swim instructors, and front desk staff. They are looking for personable, outgoing, fun individuals that are ready to help make this summer a great one for all our members.

Full and part time positions are available. Weekend only staff is also an option. Lifeguards need to have or be willing to get lifeguard certification this spring and the director and swim instructors should have or be willing to get WSI certification. Please log onto cohassetswimcenter.com to download an application.

Treasure trove

Opening the boxes in the Textile Department at the Cohasset Historical Society is like finding a chest full of treasure. On March 21st, the Cohasset Historical Society will continue its Wednesday Evening Lecture series with "From Our Closet" Part II. Martha Hurtig and Martha Fisher will continue their program sharing the treasures from our textiles collection with a presentation of the accessories worn through the ages. Hats, stockings, gloves, even a collar made from the silk of the milkweed plant are among the items that illustrate our history through what the people wore. The public is invited to join the society in this fun and interesting evening beginning at 7:30 p.m. in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St., Cohasset. There is no charge for the program and light refreshment will be served.

Spring art

South Shore Art Center announces its spring schedule of courses and workshops, including several master workshops with visiting artists.

Among the many classes scheduled for the spring is a Wednesday evening portrait class with Dianne Panarelli Miller, and an eight-week course in creative photography. Classes begin the week of April 23rd. There will be an April Vacation Camp for children in grades 1-4 from Tuesday, April 17 through Friday, April 20 - 9:30-12:30. An art show will be held at the end of the week with students encouraged to invite friends and family to attend. Register online at www.ssac.org or call for more information call 781-383-2787.

That is the news this week Cohasset. I hope that everyone who reads the column remembers that even though many of us have accounts with social networks on the computers, there are still a large number of Cohasset Mariner readers who do not. For this reason, it is so important to still make sure to share all of your event news, fundraiser information, special celebrations, birth announcements/birthdays/milestones and any other wonderful piece of news that you may have shared on your social network account. Please send in all your news no later than Tuesdays by 5 p.m.

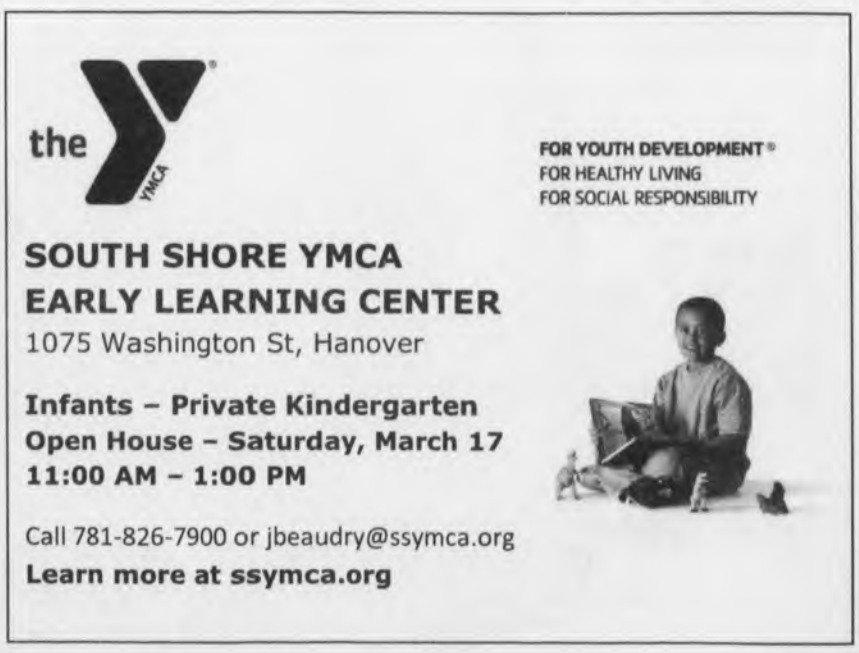
Virtuoso organist coming to Cohasset

First Parish Cohasset is delighted to welcome virtuoso organist Erica Johnson for the first time. The program will include music specially chosen to feature our historic Hutchings organ, which was built in 1892. First Parish is located on the green at North Main Street. The concert will take place on Sunday, March 19 at 3 pm. Admission is $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Dr. Johnson will present a program of European organ music from the 17th-20th centuries. The program is designed to highlight the musical character of the Hutchings instrument and will include selections by the Baroque composers Muffat, Poglietti, J.S. Bach; Bach's student Johann Krebs; and the twentieth-century composers Karg-Elert and Jongen.

Dr. Erica Johnson has performed across the United States and Europe, playing a wide variety of instruments and repertoire. Upon receiving a generous grant from the Frank Huntington Beebe Fund for Musicians in 2001, Erica investigated historical keyboard technique and instruments in Bremen, Germany for two years. She was able to play a number of organs by Arp Schnitger, one of the most important builders active in Germany in the 17th and 18th centuries. In 2002, she won second prize in the Norddeutsche Rundfunk International Organ Competition, In November of 2004, she received the 2004 International Arp Schnitger Preis in Hamburg, Germany, by the Arp Schnitger Gesellschaft in recognition of her experience on these organs.

Dr. Johnson is a graduate of Oberlin College, Oberlin Conservatory, New England Conservatory, and the Eastman School of Music, where she earned the Doctorate of Musical Arts. From 1999-2001 she was Organ Scholar at The Memorial Church of Harvard University. She taught Organ Literature at Oberlin and Eastman for several years, and served as Interim Professor of Organ at the University of North Carolina School of the Arts in 2008-09. She is currently Director of Pastoral Music at Blessed Sacrament Parish in Walpole, MA.



The organ at First Parish Cohasset was built by the prestigious Boston organ builder George Hutchings, whose work was unexcelled at the turn of the century. It is comprised of two keyboards and pedal controlling 21 stops and 15 ranks.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Green experts of the week

ERIN DALE

This week, we're doing something a little different with the Green Beat. When this column first started, we asked for readers to share their green tips and ideas.

The team behind the Cohasset-based Wolfe Painting Company, which we recently featured, stepped up to the plate, sharing green tips of their own as well a few from fellow home improvement professionals that work in and around Cohasset. Check out what they have to say and look forward to future submissions.

And don't forget: we want to hear from you, too! Whether you're a green guru or avid recycler, or someone who simply wants to share your thoughts and concerns, we'd love to learn more about how you're going green.

For now, some tips to keep in mind, courtesy of these local experts:

Wolfe Painting Company, Cohasset
www.wolfepaintingco.com
James Wolfe, owner, on eco-friendly paint:

"When painting your home, a key part of the preparation process is determining how much paint you need. A typical gallon of paint covers about 400 square feet, although coverage varies by brand and the type of material you are working with. This important step ensures that you don't buy too much paint and therefore reduces the amount of paint cans being purchased and thrown away in landfills. We also suggest using a low VOC paint when possible."

Jack Conway Realtor, Cohasset
Matt Weaver, Green Designee/National Association of Realtors (Realtor), on building a green home:

"While the issues, complexities and choices can vary greatly in deciding to purchase a 'Green Home,' the home owner can rest assured that the costs to operate and maintain a home built in the traditional fashion will continue to rise substantially over the next 30 years of their investment. The wide menu of choices in 'Green Home Building' can afford a home owner reduced savings year after year, have a better resale value, and support their families, businesses, and community with how the 'living by the green example' makes perfect sense. Today, families can reduce their environmental footprint, save and secure vital resources, and provide a profound peace of mind in the decision to invest in a green home, all while having the continued enjoyment of comforts found in a traditional built home at a competitive Green cost. Green is the new gold!"

Eck/MacNeely Architects Inc., Boston
www.eckmacneely.com
Jeremiah Eck, FAIA, Partner, on green home renovations:

"When building or renovating a home, the three most important areas to focus on for energy conservation are windows, roofs and floors; walls, less so. Purchasing the highest quality windows within your budget will pay off in dividends over time. Well-constructed and insulated roof and floors are also paramount to conserving heating and cooling energy."

Go Green! Landscape Supply, Scituate and Hanover www.gogreenlandscape-supply.com
Tim Lopes, owner, on greener gardening:

"Early spring is a perfect time to mulch with an eye toward weed suppression. Getting the mulch down prior to the weeds germinating is the key to keeping them at bay. We carry an Organic Dark Mulch, which is a great way to suppress weeds, feed your garden, beautify your home, and help Mother Earth. Go Green! makes Organic Dark Mulch by recycling all natural, green waste. Brush, grass, and leaves are ground up and composted into rich, dark brown mulch that is the perfect food for your garden beds."

Donna Morgan Interior Design, Cohasset
dmorgandesign@hotmail.com
Donna Morgan, owner/designer, on green redecorating:

"A simple way to think green in redecorating your home is to think thoughtfully about your purchases and to be open to redecorating with gently used furniture and antiques. Taking the time to browse through consignment shops, Craigslist, thrift stores, and the many antique stores in the South Shore area can make a huge impact on keeping items around a little longer and giving them a new home. A little tender loving care with polish, cleaning, coat of paint or reupholster can give new life to furniture for another generation to use and enjoy."

Democratic Town Committee's Movie Night

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee's next Movie Night is at 7 p.m. Friday, March 16, at the Paul Pratt Library.

"The Best Government Money Can Buy" is the first behind the scenes, comprehensive, non-partisan examination of the system of lobbying in Washington, D.C. The cost of election campaigns has spiraled out of control, to the extent that, on average, our representatives spend more than 25 percent of their time fundraising. There's so much time spent on fund-raising surely cutting into the time legislators have for doing the public's business. Even our Presidents interrupt the nation's work in order to spend time fundraising. Veteran documentary filmmaker, British-born Francis Megahy, makes a journey of discovery as he tries to answer some questions which puzzle him: who provides money? What impact does it have? How is it connected to the financing of political campaigns? And most crucial, is it in the public interest? This film explores these issues with interviews with real Washington beltway insiders, key participants in the process - who often speak with surprising candor.

Currently there are more lobbyists than members of Congress. According to a study by The Center for Responsive Politics, "special interests paid Washington lobbyists $3.2 billion in 2008—more than any other year on record. This was a 13.7 percent increase from 2007 (which broke the record by 7.7 percent over 2006)." "The Center calculates that interest groups spent $17.4 million on lobbying for every day Congress was in session in 2008, or $32,523 per legislator per day." Center director Sheila Krumholz says, "The federal government is handing out billions of dollars by the day, and that translates into job security for lobbyists who can help companies and industries get a piece of the payout."

According to the Center, "health interests spent more on Federal lobbying than any other economic sector. Their $478.5 million guaranteed the crown for the third year, with the finance, insurance, real estate sector a runner up, spending $453.5 million."

State of Harbor Forum II is April 12

CSCR, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, will be hosting Cohasset's second State of the Harbor Forum at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 12, at Bancroft Hall (Lightkeepers Residence). The event is sponsored by Cohasset Rotary and is free to the public.

The second State of The Harbor (SOTH) public forum will feature research conducted by CSCR students and staff that speaks directly to the clear consensus voiced by the 75 residents who attended SOTH I- that Cohasset Harbor is suffering continued deterioration in ecosystem health because the inner Cove inadequately "flushes out" the increasing volume of fresh water coming into the Cove. New, ground-breaking research will also be presented regarding two other topics of great interest to all those who care deeply about maintaining a healthy and vibrant harbor: the high enterococci bacteria counts in the Harbor that often lead the Board of Health to "close" Bassing Beach to swimmers; and the mysterious foam that fouls boats at the waterline, and turns the harbor into anything but the picture of health.

Mark the date on your calendar for an important discussion among town leaders, residents, scientists, and elected officials as we debate mitigation strategies and next steps designed to protect and nurture Cohasset Harbor, one of the town's most precious resources.

Sixth graders take part in Re-Use-A-Shoe campaign

The Cohasset Middle School sixth graders are participating in the Nike Re-Use-A-Shoe campaign. Students can bring in old sneakers to school to put in donation boxes around the school. These sneakers will be recycled to make school tracks, tennis courts, basketball courts, etc. Acceptable items are any brand of sneakers. Do not bring in flips or sandals, UGGs, cleats, or any shoes with metal. The students have come up with a goal to collect 500 pairs of sneakers by March 31. Drop off anything you wish to donate at the Cohasset Middle School Office. Visit cohassetk12.org and select the Cohasset Middle School tab under schools for more information on the campaign.

Diane Burke, RN, BS, of Welch Home Care Services, displays one of two prizes raffled off at the recent Healthy Heart presentation at Allerton House Assisted Living in Hingham. The Mayo Clinic's Essential Heart Guide and a Welch Home Care cozy fleece blanket went home with two attendees.

Libby Zotos of Cohasset enjoyed a heart-healthy lunch at the recent free Healthy Heart presentation at Allerton House, co-sponsored by the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group's assisted living community and Welch Home Care Services.

Heart-healthy presentation at Allerton House

About 35 seniors from around the South Shore attended a free educational luncheon program on how to stay heart healthy at Allerton House Assisted Living Community at Harbor Park in Hingham. The focus was on controlling risk factors, such as diet and exercise, monitoring blood pressure, sodium intake and cholesterol levels, and maintaining oral hygiene as recent studies suggest.

Welch Home Care Services' Diane Burke, RN, BS, and director of Community Services Corinne Duncan, RN, talked about the importance of maintaining a diet rich in fruits and vegetables, managing stress, getting plenty of rest, managing medications and learning the warning signs of a heart attack and stroke.

Due to high demand for the program, Allerton House is offering a second, free educational program, Healthy Eating for Your Heart, at noon, on Tuesday, March 27. Seating is limited. Register by calling 781-749-3322 by March 22. Visit Allerton House at Hingham and Welch Home Care Services online at www.welchhrg.com.

GIMME SHELTER

Duke is one handsome guy

He would like you to know that he is totally non-aggressive, will use the scratching post and of course, the litter box.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Duke, a jet-black, shorthair adult male, who once had a home. HSAR doesn't know just what transpired but someone found Duke and his littermate, Duchess in an unoccupied apartment. They had been living there for quite some time. The shelter thinks someone may have been feeding them, as they are quite healthy looking. They were so good at hiding that HSAR finally had to trap them in order to bring them to the shelter. They are doing fine now and though it would be great if they could be adopted together, they would be O.K. on their own.

Duke is quite handsome He's been neutered and is up to date on all his shots. He would like a home where he can interact with humans. He would make a great companion for any animal friendly family. Duke is hoping that people will come by to meet him. He would like you to know that he is totally non-aggressive, will use the scratching post and of course, the litter box. Like all cats adopted from the shelter, it's imperative that they be kept as INDOOR only cats. Duke would appreciate it if you'd stop by and visit him.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

CONTRACTS

and to have them sign a letter of agreement. Milanoski has already done so with one employee whose contract had been called into question, Building and Facilities Director Mark Kelly, and asked the board to approve this letter, which they did unanimously.

According to Milanoski, only one of 13 contracts for fiscal 2013 "was done perfectly," and that was the contract for Finance Director Mary Gallagher, who was appointed in December. Coughlin appointed Gallagher, and the selectmen were given 15 days to either accept or reject the appointment; according to Cohasset's Town Manager Act, the selectmen have the 15-day window to veto appointments made by the Town Manager.

The contracts for the deputy police chief and assistant fire chief were ratified by the selectmen, Advisory Committee and Capital Budget Committee. Deputy Police Chief William Quigley and Assistant Fire Chief John Dockray were not hired anew but promoted with a swearing-in ceremony during a selectmen's meeting.

The 10 contracts that came under fire Monday night were extensions for appointments that had already been made. Under the Town Manager Act, only new appointments must be vetted by the selectmen. Coughlin contends that these contracts are under his purview as town manager; Milanoski, meanwhile, said last week that there is no renewal provision in the Town Manager Act but that there is a reappointment process that gives the selectmen the same 15-day period to deliberate once they have been notified.

According to Milanoski, Coughlin approved a total new cost of $164,708 for these contracts; $78,000 of that amount appears to be a new cost in fiscal year 2012.

"All of a sudden, Christmas came in the middle of January," selectman Diane Kennedy said on Monday night. "It's very upsetting to me that this has happened and we're here. We as the board of selectmen have a right to be notified of renegotiations."

Coughlin said in a phone call Tuesday that these renegotiations "are not, in mind, reappointments. If you ask any of the long-term serving department heads, their personnel contracts have always been signed by the town manager."

Coughlin also stated in an email Tuesday that he believes officials are trying to make it look as though he approved these raises as a parting gift in anticipation of his removal.

"They are doing creative accounting to make me look bad," he wrote, adding that he did not expect to be removed after only six months on the job and therefore did not promise these raises as a parting gift. He expected, instead, to be subject to a professional review.

Coughlin said that the bulk of the $78,000 is for Mark Brennan's position as Operations Director, which was paid from the town's general fund. Previously, Brennan's salary came from grants. The grant money is still coming into the town, said Coughlin, but instead of paying Brennan's salary, it's being counted as revenue.

"This looks like a big increase, but it really isn't," Coughlin said. "With respect to money, as you know at the end of the year and at the annual town meeting, departments transfer monies. For some of the smaller adjustments— this is not a big deal. Mark Brennan is being paid at a rate commensurate with the DPW Directors in the region. All salary adjustments most that kick in FY 13 were 'benchmarked' on the basis of what various professionals are being paid in the South Shore. As to Mark's salary— we are taking the salary monies out of Building and Facilities and Highway. Both have unfilled positions."

Coughlin added that there are no legal problems with Brennan's contract because it was approved by interim finance director Eric Kinsherf, the accountant who served in the position prior to Gallagher.

Milanoski's Monday night budget presentation to the selectmen revealed that the $250,000 Operations Department budget has been reduced to $0 for fiscal 2013 because there is no money in the budget for it.

Milanoski explained in a phone call that the Operations Dept. had asked for that amount for the next fiscal year, but the town simply cannot afford it: "There's no money to fund an operations department."

What does this mean for Mark Brennan? Milanoski said he would work with Brennan to reach an agreement.

"He was appointed as a full-time employee; we need to work with him to find a solution the town can afford," said Milanoski. "The services he's offered have been valuable. We're going to have to look into what we've done for the last seven years; his contract went into effect on February 1."

Brennan was paid as a contractor with grant money for seven years, but Coughlin said it was illegal to retain him as a 1099 employee while Brennan works full-time for the town; he is entitled to benefits like vacation.

Karen Quigley, Clay Spring Road, commented that the town employees negotiated in good faith, and that "it's unfair to punish employees because you don't think their contracts are correct."

Carr responded that he thinks the issue is unfair for different reasons: "The employees were put in an awkward position."

Milanoski said that while this is "a sensitive issue," he is committed to working with the employees to reach an amiable solution. "Understanding it from their side, a lot has happened in the last 10 days."

The acting town manager added that it's time to update Cohasset's personnel policy plan. According to the town bylaws, Milanoski said, only four non-union positions are allowed to have a longer than one-year contract: these are for the police and fire chiefs, the finance director/town accountant, and the town manager. "Over time, the town has executed more positions than allowed."

Milanoski added that he hopes the employees whose contracts were rejected will sign letters of agreement in the next 30 days.

Coughlin continued to defend his decision to give raises.

"When I became town manager in August, there was more instability in [Cohasset's] professional workforce than in any of my four towns, more worry whether people would be able to continue to do their jobs on day to day basis," Coughlin said Tuesday. "It's essential in the political turmoil environment we have in Cohasset that our professionals are given stability; that's what they needed, and that's what they got so that they can give their unfettered professional advice without fear of retribution. What they're doing on these contracts is nothing more than breaking apart the very cohesiveness Cohasset needs to turn a corner."

DEBATE

CPC member Susan Hoadley said, while Altholtz makes a compelling argument, many national landmarks, including churches are protected by the federal government because they are considered national treasures.

"If it is our responsibility to preserve monuments that educate the town on the town's history – where do you draw the line between separation of religion and government?" She said the church, which is merely a tenant in the historic building, was doing the town a favor by maintaining the building in its present form. "So if you think of that in terms of taxpayer money it is actually of good value," she said.

The 1747 Meetinghouse, considered the centerpiece of the Town Common, sits in the middle of a National Register Historic District.

The committee, with the exception of member Leland Jenkins, reached a consensus that not allowing historic churches to apply for funding was in fact discrimination. Committee members said by their recommendation they are in no way endorsing the establishment of a religion but are dealing with their stewardship obligation for a vitally important resource in the town.

Jenkins continued to oppose the appropriation on the grounds that it would "open up a can of worms. I feel other churches will come in and do the same thing," he said.

But Bonetti said there is nothing stopping other churches, clubs or any non-profit from coming forward with requests. He noted that the sailing club was recently before the CPC with a request and there would be nothing stopping the yacht club from also coming in.

Church windows newer than once thought

The Community Preservation Committee has recommended a grant of $65,000 from the community preservation fund's historic restoration account for the windows at First Parish Church, built in 1747.

Since that initial vote, further investigation by Westmill Preservation Services of Halifax, which will handle the project, revealed that a large portion of the window sash is later replacements from work done in the 1950s. During that restoration much of the original glass was salvaged. The proposed project will allow all the modern glass to be replaced with salvage or reproduction to match the original glass.

"It is in the spirit of full disclosure that the church has come back in on this to bring this to our attention," CPC Chairman Russ Bonetti said.

The discovery did not change the CPC's recommendation for funding, which will go before voters at May's annual Town Meeting. The CPC reaffirmed its vote with member Leland Jenkins voting against the proposal (see related story).

CPC member Al Moore noted that most, if not all, antique structures have had work done.

"It strikes me that any historic structure going back to the 1700s has probably had untold work done along the way — otherwise it would not still be here." As an example, he said he had heard that someone would be hard pressed to find an original board in the USS Constitution.

Bonetti noted the "new" windows in the church were in fact, quite old.

"Hitting my middle 60s, I was discouraged to find that I qualify easily – once you hit 50, you are considered an antique," he quipped.

Positions available for May 19 Town Election

The last day to take out nomination papers for the May 19 annual Town Election will be Thursday, March 22. In order to hold an elected office, one must be a registered voter of the town. Note: People are not running for office until they take out papers and the Board of Registrars certifies signatures.

A resident commented that the five-hour duration of the hearing for the Town Manager was directly related to the comfortable seats of the Selectmen

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Examining evil vs. good

"Imagined evil vs. intended good," a commentary column in the Mariner of March 9, seems to allege that most of Cohasset's elected and appointed officials ignore the public interest and subvert "process and procedure" to have their own subversive way and to serve "special interest groups." It suggests recourse to the ballot box to replace the evildoers, but laments that it would be difficult to find impartial candidates "without agendas/vendettas."

Sounds like a pretty evil town!

On the other hand, a few months ago about 120 of our most passionately involved citizens signed a petition demanding the reinstatement of three appointed officials that the Selectmen had just replaced at the end of their terms. These righteous and well-intentioned petitioners fancied an injustice, without considering that the Selectmen had good reasons unrelated to and prior to any input from the E20 group. But the intent of the protestors was noble, just as was the Selectmen's courage in doing what they considered best for the town despite the anticipated furor.

So, does the town have an excess of evil office holders, a plentitude of honorable people that may lack sufficient interest in "the rest of the story" but are unquestionably well-meaning, or should other categories be postulated and quantified?

'It is time to end the fiasco'

SAM WAKEMAN

For any organization to run smoothly, move forward, and correct or clean up past messes, it is essential that the leadership be on the same wavelength and be moving in the same direction. This applies to businesses (Board of Directors and CEO), nonprofits, and government entities (Board of Selectmen, Governor and Legislature, The President, Senate and Congress). Without this commitment we create a climate of confusion, confrontation, and wasted effort. More importantly the entity itself stops moving and becomes fragmented. The Whole "TEAM" must be moving toward the same goal.

It is clear from activities of the past six months that the Town of Cohasset has been wallowing around with no agreement and common direction between the Board of Selectmen (BoS) and Town Manager(TM). This probably goes back to the vetting process for hiring the TM, which may be flawed. There was not enough time spent exploring where each party (BoS and TM) was coming from and what their vision for the Town moving forward should be (we must assume each was representing themselves accurately).

This, however, does not solve our problem. It only points out what should have been done.

If leadership cannot find common ground and resolve their differences for the good of the town, it is time to "cut the cord" and move on. It will do the town no good to continue a charade, which is confrontational and noncollaborative. We have too many problems to be solved.

The BoS is the elected body charged with setting the overall policy, direction and goals for the town. They are authorized to set rules and regulations. The TM is responsible to carry out those policies and enforce the rules and regulations. A lack of policy and or rules or regulations does not mean the TM can do as he sees fit. He must push and shove the BoS to develop those policies so that a common framework will exist in solving the myriad of problems. The various boards and committees of the town manned by volunteers act as a valuable resource to advise and counsel the BoS and TM. They act as ongoing voter input into town affairs outside of the ballot box and provide long-term stability and consistency to the affairs of the town. It is especially important that over the last several years both the Budget Planning Group, Advisory Committee, and Capital Budget Committee have been able to develop some long term fiscal policies to get the town on a solid footing (unfortunately these have not yet taken hold).

It was very clear to me at Tuesday's meeting/hearing that both the BoS and TM were significantly apart in philosophy, wavelength, and direction. Both parties felt it necessary to be represented by attorneys, which only clouds the issues and does nothing to solve the divide.

Unless the BoS and TM can sit down and develop a common base to move forward in the same direction, it is time to end the fiasco. Our interim town manager has already pulled committees and constituencies together and is moving the town forward according to the direction given by the BoS.

Town manager deserves more time

The following letter submitted to the Selectmen in advance of Tuesday night's hearing, was provided to the Cohasset Mariner.

Board of Selectmen:

I have debated whether to send an email expressing my thoughts with regards to tonight's hearing on the town manager, because it is very clear that your decision has already been made. But I felt my opinion needed to be added to the public record. It is my belief, that the BOS hired a known "independent" town manager and then did not provide the proper support required for him to succeed.

The town manager has been in place for six months, hardly a sufficient amount of time to determine he needs to be fired. As the "managers" of the town, it is unconscionable to me that the first performance management action to be taken is dismissal. I realize that there must be issues that we, as a public, are unaware of, but in my opinion, that which has been explained thus far does not warrant dismissal.

I watched numerous BOS meetings both in person and on TV in which I found the behavior of the advisory chair and members of the Capital Budget Committee to be disrespectful, argumentative and dismissive of the town manager while he was speaking. Clearly this was indicative of a bad working relationship that was allowed to grow worse by the BOS. This town manager was brought in with an existing financial mess, a financial accounting software program that wasn't fully implemented and wasn't helping the situation, and the legacy of a previous town manager who clearly was resting on his laurels as well as letting our citizen volunteers do what they wanted. In comes a self proclaimed TM to shake things up, and shake things up he did. And what fell out? A completely dysfunctional town government system with no one in charge except maybe the bullies. This town manager was clearly never fully supported by the BOS or the disrespectful behavior of the leaders of our town boards would never have been allowed to continue.

I point out almost as an aside, that I find most of the criticism of the town manager by the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee to be related to budgets and numbers. I find it almost amusing that the people who oversaw the creation of the financial mess of our town – including deficits, accounting issues and bad accounting software – have been the ones most critical of the town manager's ability to sort out what the real numbers are. Instead of being supportive of his efforts to find "real" numbers they criticized his lack of forthrightness; maybe he was actually trying to take the time to ensure accurate numbers, instead of just responding to numerous requests for numbers he couldn't stand by.

I respectfully request that you reinstate the town manager and do what you should have done from the beginning, support him fully and ensure that he has the resources to succeed in his job. When he came to town hall it was an absolute mess, I'm incredulous that as a board you haven't given him more time to clean it up before passing judgment.

Teresa Polhemus, 14 Tad Lane

Where did we go wrong?

It was a very distressing evening at the Cohasset High School. How did we end up here? What happened to our "Code of Civility?" Our town is full of wonderful, capable people dedicated to make Cohasset a desirable and stable place to live. Where did we go wrong? It is time for everyone — elected officials, town leaders and private citizens — to take a good, hard look at themselves and ask, "Am I doing the best job I can? And, am I doing what is in the best interest in the Town of Cohasset; a place that I am lucky enough to call home?"

I want to share with you something I wrote and delivered at my sixth grade graduation from the Deer Hill School in 1970. Enjoy and reflect. Let us all get back to work and do our best to preserve Cohasset, one of the most beautiful places on earth!

Marita Durkin Carpenter, 370 King St.

My Town is Different

The place where I live has to be
A town that is rich with history.
Free for all men to do their thing;
to raise a family, worship or sing.

High standards of living must have been set
By the pilgrims at Plymouth, I'm willing to bet.
The colony expanded and new towns appeared,
By 1770 my town had reared.

A town where education will always excel, with results which have led few to rebel.
Friendly people to help us in need;
always available to do a good deed.

The town where I live is set next to the sea.
20 miles south of where they threw out the tea.
One if by land, two if by sea,
a phrase well remembered in history.

My town is different; it's better by far,
You can get there by boat or drive there by car.
If you traveled too far and think that you've passed it,
Just look on the map for that town called Cohasset!

Concession contract best meets water needs

WATER COMMISSIONERS

Much has been said these past few months about the water department's contract plans, most of it inaccurate. In advance of our public forum on March 26, at 7 p.m., we thought it time to dispel the myths, and present an overview of what we actually are considering for your water system.

Our current contract with American Water for plant operations expires on June 30. We have identified three possible courses of action: Take operations completely in-house with no outside contractors; issue another contract similar to what we have now for outsourced management albeit on shorter terms (probably just one year); issue a concession contract, which calls for outside contract operations over a 10-year period.

Before we address the merits of each, we need to explain what we aren't doing. (1) We are not selling the water system. Due to restrictions in bond covenants, the water system cannot be sold until all debt is paid off, 20 years from now. Towns that foolishly sold off their assets and lost control of their systems are now suffering for that. Selling was never considered by the commission; (2) we are not giving up control over water rates, our assets, or our capital expenditure plans. This is something that Hingham officials have complained about, but a circumstance we will never face. Our RFPs are clear – we maintain control over rates, quality, and capital expenditures. Cohasset's water system will be managed by Cohasset's water commissioners, working through the Board of Selectmen, and subject to Town Meeting votes, as we always have and as it always should be.

The Water Planning Group, formed in 2010 to address and solve prior operating problems in the department, wanted to achieve three things: (1) reduced budget and operating risk; (2) lower and more stable rates for our customers; and (3) better control over our assets. Since this water commission is an extension of the Water Planning Group, no matter the chosen course, our objectives with our new contract are the same.

We can take operations in house. We have very good personnel. We can save money with an in-house operation, but this approach would add to the town's already heavy pension and health care burden. The in-house option also puts us in the personnel business and increases risk from turnover – to protect against that means spending more. Most importantly, an in-house option does nothing to solve Objectives #1 and 2 – we would still be responsible for all cost increases and revenue shortfalls, both of which would cause budget fluctuations that would likely increase rates. Lastly, an in-house solution makes us choose between immediate rate decreases or bonding for capital expenditures.

Our current contract with American Water for plant operations expires on June 30. We have identified three possible courses of action: Take operations completely in-house with no outside contractors; issue another contract similar to what we have now for outsourced management albeit on shorter terms (probably just one year); issue a concession contract, which calls for outside contract operations over a 10-year period.

We can also easily find an operator to assume operations on a short-term basis, much like the sewer commission just did. Many have already approached us. While we would likely save money with this approach over our current contract, we wouldn't expect to save as much as with other approaches. Unfortunately, here, Objectives #1 and 2 are also not realized. With costs uncertain, rate increases are the only answer to revenue shortfalls. There is also the need to bond for capital expenditures immediately.

You have heard a lot about "concession contracts," our third option. Under a concession, we pay the operator a fixed fee; he gives us a large upfront payment, which can be held to offset either sharp declines in revenue and/or fund capital projects. A concession changes the equation in our favor. It enables us to best meet our objectives at a lower, predictable cost. In a concession, we fix all of our operating costs for the term of the contract, and make known what historically has been unknown. Said another way, under a concession, we know exactly what it will cost to run the water company for the next 10 years.

Of the three options, it is the only one that satisfies Objectives #1, 2 and 3. Unlike the in-house option, a concession allows us to reduce rates and avoid bonding for capital projects immediately. It is the only solution that will allow for an immediate reduction in rates. Furthermore, because costs are fixed for the length of the contract, those new, lower rates can be theoretically fixed as well, hopefully for the length of the contract. Also, our ability to avoid rate hikes is much better with a concession than with any other approach. Lastly, while it fixes costs, a concession still allows us to participate in potential revenue growth over time.

The five-year O&M contract we have now was the single biggest contributing factor to our operating problems. After two years on the commission and one year on the Water Planning Group, I can state with confidence that the water company never had a financial problem, but it did have a contract problem. We assume too much risk the way we do business now. A concession contract best addresses that thereby enabling us (and future commissions) to plan with more certainty. There are also many, non-financial reasons for choosing a concession over our other options. The contract will also provide for an incentive plan to reward the operator for good performance toward laudable goals, like better water quality and customer service, contract provisions that couldn't be offered if costs weren't fixed.

Some have expressed concern over the concession's term. But, the simple fact is pricing is substantially better the longer the contract term, as it is in most industries or contracts. We don't believe we would be assuming any more operator risk over a longer term. Veolia operated the sewer plant for 19 years and American Water has operated ours for 14. While we might not have liked the last contract we got, we had few issues with American Water as an operator. They were as diligent in the last year of the contract as the first, and oversight was always our responsibility anyway. All contracts, concession or otherwise, have standard exit clauses. The risks we assumed with American Water over the past 14 years will be assumed with our next operator, and it doesn't matter if the term is one year or 20. If a contractor is in breach, the contract term is irrelevant.

Now, falsehoods designed as scare tactics are being circulated, to what end we don't quite understand. Among them are fears that a contractor would "steal our water," sell it to neighboring systems, and deplete the resource. This belies a misunderstanding of our operations and ignores the control Mass DEP has over our operations. It, not us, determines staffing levels, the quality of our finished product, the amount of water we can consume, and how much water we can ship out of our basin. Whether we outsource operations or not, controls are established and enforced by the state, no matter what we do or say.

The point of a concession contract has nothing to do with making the water company independent. We are an enterprise fund within the town. The point of a concession is to fix the department's expenses for many years to come to avoid a negative surprise in the future. We most certainly can run the water company under the other scenarios discussed, and have known that from the start of this process. The issue is whether they are best for our customers. For the reasons enumerated above, we believe your best choice is a concession contract.

Peter DeCaprio, chairman, Chris Seebeck, Leonora Jenkins - Cohasset Board of Water Commissioners.

Hiring Coughlin 'was a mistake'

Board of Selectman, thank you for a very informative meeting last night (Tuesday, March 13). I want to especially thank Ted Carr for an incredibly well run session under very difficult circumstances. While it was a difficult and uncomfortable process, let's remember that it was conducted at the insistence of Mr. Coughlin.

I held my comments last night so as to be respectful to those who had direct experience on the matter. Here is my perspective based on everything I heard last night and throughout this whole ordeal.

In summary, I was disturbed by much Mr. Coughlin's presentation and answers, which seemed evasive and contradictory. I think the evidence overwhelmingly shows a six-month history of antagonism, jockeying for control, communication problems and disrespect on the part of the town manager. Not just his own communications issues, but what also appear to be efforts to stifle open, honest and civil discussion and information exchange between employees, boards, committees, etc. I think the town's interests were completely subordinated in service of not team Cohasset, but Team Coughlin.

In my 13 years in town I have never seen this level of divisiveness and acrimony, which seems to have spun out of control with this hiring. It's a terrible distraction from the very real and immediate problems we face as a community.

Clearly the hiring was a mistake. And we could probably learn a thing or two to improve the process, vetting etc. – inasmuch as the publicly available history in his previous towns appears to essentially mirror our own experience: The acrimony, the divisiveness, pitting one group against the other... communications issues, right down to the impugning of the integrity of decent citizen volunteers, and filing ethics charges against fellow officials, etc.

What is the common denominator there?

Insubordination is not a form of 'checks and balances.' Is six months enough time? In the private sector this behavior would stand for about six minutes. With all the military metaphors tossed around, think about the consequences of someone repeatedly thumbing their nose at their commanding officer.

Currying favors with some, (at taxpayer expense), and intimidating others by hiding behind slogans like, ' chain of command', while refusing to be accountable to his own boss: The Cohasset Board of Selectmen. That's the real Chain of Command.

I have no doubt that morale is at all-time low... and it seems to have achieved new depths by the actions of this hire.

I applaud the Selectmen for the courage to acknowledge their mistake and correct it for the sake of the town. Someone at the meeting used the metaphor of how messy and costly such a divorce (firing) might be, but the only thing costlier and more damaging to the community, would be to stay in such a dysfunctional relationship.

You don't stay in a relationship based on threats as were repeatedly made last night and over time. You don't retain an employee because he threatens to sue you.

Thanks for your efforts and let's move to tackle our serious problems in the spirit of cooperation.

Howie Altholtz, 5 Woodland Drive

Buckley receives congratulations

The South Shore Republican Group congratulates Peter J. Buckley, who was elected State Committeeman for the Plymouth/Norfolk District.

In one of the most competitive races on "Super Tuesday," Peter won over incumbent State Committeeman John Cafferty of Hingham, and Duxbury Republican Town Committee Chairman Bill Harris. The Plymouth/Norfolk District consists of the following towns: Hingham, Hull, Weymouth, Cohasset, Marshfield, Scituate, Norwell, and Hull. Mr. Buckley grew up in Marshfield, and resides with his wife and family in Cohasset.

Bill Harris is a well-respected South Shore GOP operative, and ran an impressive campaign. Bill promoted important issues: Investing in technology and Town Committees, focusing on Representative races, and energizing "the base."

John Cafferty ran a strong campaign as well, and deserves our thanks for his many years of service to the State GOP.

One common theme among all three candidates during the campaign was supporting the "grassroots" activism among Republican volunteers, and emphasizing candidates at the local level, as well as the statewide level.

We look forward to helping newly elected State Committeeman Peter Buckley achieve these goals.

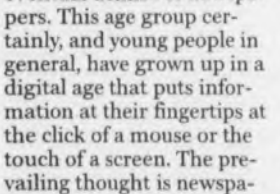
Ed O'Connell, South Shore Republican Group

Polar Plunge supporters thanked

Special Olympics Massachusetts and the Polar Plunge Management Team wish to thank the following local businesses who supported our successful Plunge on Saturday, March 3, at Nantasket Beach: Atlantic Bagel of Cohasset, Dunkin' Donuts of Hull, Marylou's News of Hull, Panera Bread Bakery of Derby Shoppes, Nona's Homemade Ice Cream, The Fruit Center, The Upper Crust Pizzeria of Hingham, Crow Point Pizzeria of Hingham, The Pizza Box of Hull, The Red Parrot Restaurant, DJ MAXX – Jack Maxwell of Weymouth, and WAAF. Thank you also to the stores who each allowed our athletes to solicit donations for one or more days before the Plunge: Stop & Shop Stores in Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell, Riddle's Market of Hull, and the Village Market in Scituate.

Taffy Nothnagle, Polar Plunge Management Team

Thanks for playing



On behalf of the Carriage House Nursery School, we would like to thank all of our sponsors, donors, parents and teachers, who so generously gave to our Come Play Casino Night fundraiser this past Saturday evening. Those who attended had a fun time "gambling" and dancing, and with the help of the silent auction, we were able to raise enough to fund our new playground for the children to enjoy. Thank you again for all of your support.

FOR THE RECORD

Some good news for our future

GREGORY MATHIS

As we sit around throwing out theories about why and when newspapers will die, here are a few thoughts that came out of a recent visit to a high school AP English class.

A rudimentary survey students were asked to fill out revealed most of the 19 juniors in the class read a newspaper at least once a week. That's good news.

Granted, many in the class have had articles published in their hometown newspaper during the course of this academic year, but the survey was anonymous, and therefore there was no reason to lie or exaggerate the truth.

Of the 19 students, 10 said they read a newspaper at least once a week. I'll take that as very good news as the paper in their town is one of our weekly papers. Three students said they read a newspaper "a few times per week," and one student reads a newspaper daily. Two said they never read a newspaper and three had "other" reading habits not listed on the survey.

Still, 74 percent of the high school juniors in that particular AP English class say they read a newspaper once a week or more.

A lot of industry veterans are worried the younger generation's lack of interest or need will lead to the eventual demise of newspapers. This age group certainly, and young people in general, have grown up in a digital age that puts information at their fingertips at the click of a mouse or the touch of a screen. The prevailing thought is newspapers will not be able to compete for people's time and the lack of immediacy will soon make print obsolete.

Not so fast.

If this survey is any indication, even teenagers seem to have a use for newspapers, at the very least their hometown community newspaper.

Of course, this age group likes reading about themselves and their friends in the newspaper and online. High school news and sports was consistently rated high in the survey. The police log and police news fell next in line in terms of interest, followed by local editorials and local commentaries. That would normally be surprising, but many of the articles written by members of this class have appeared on the opinion pages, so seeing their articles there may have drawn them to other opinion pieces.

For the students who get news and information from news websites, local video, blogs on local topics and poll questions rated highly, as did photo galleries.

We tend to spend a lot of time and energy trying to figure out who is reading the newspaper and why, and the type of content readers are interested in online. Getting out of the newsroom and standing before a class of engaged, young minds was a great exercise in getting some of those questions answered.

None of the students raised their hand when asked if they were interested in pursuing a career in journalism. Even though many in the class had written well-thought-out commentaries, or stories on high school sports or the arts and music programs, none seemed to have their sights set on becoming a reporter.

At least not yet.

CALLING ALL VETERANS

A man for all seasons

RONALD WHEATLEY

Early in the morning three times a week he brings freshly cut long stem red Amaryllis for display to the French Memories in Cohasset. There he commandeers his favorite table for his morning coffee and pastry. Long time Scituate resident Clyde Gurney also delivers his flowers to Oro's Restaurant in Scituate and the South Shore Hospital Cardiac Center. He is well known as a gardener and bird lover.

It takes patience and dedication to nurture a virtual green house of over a hundred bulbs and plants at various stages of development in your home during the long winter months. But there is another side of his life, of his patience - not chronicled. He longed to serve in the Navy during World War II; a goal denied him almost half a decade.

"My father was from England and my mother from Scotland and that is how I got the name Clyde - for the Perth of Clyde in Scotland."

Gurney attended Rockland High School where he was a straight-A student because "I had an excellent memory." Gurney graduated from high school in 1935.

"I was lucky to get a job," Gurney said. "It was with the HH Arnold Company in Rockland manufacturing weaponry. I was working on brass casings for shells. The owner of the company actually got involved in teaching me the necessary technical skills to do the job."

In 1939 while working for the company Gurney received a draft notice, and he tried to enlist in the Navy.

"The building where we worked in Rockland had all the windows painted black. We would work all night long. Because the company was fulfilling a War Department contract, they wanted to keep me deferred."

The months at the plant turned to years while many of Gurney's mates went off to serve in the war. "I was wondering how I would answer the question 'what did you do during the war.'"

"I finally pleaded with my boss to let me go. I told him all my buddies were in the service and I wanted to serve."

In 1944, his employer finally granted him leave to go and serve on active duty. He had waited nine years.

"I joined the Navy in 1944 and went to boot camp at Sampson in New York."

After Boot Camp, Gurney was selected for a top-secret research project that the Navy was working on in conjunction with Harvard and Columbia.

"I was assigned to the USS Babbitt. It was a World War I destroyer. We were carrying out scientific research in sonar under battle conditions."

According to Gurney at that time Harvard and Columbia had taken a lead in the study of underwater sound - sonar.

"We would sail from Port-of-Spain, Trinidad to Greenland, and there would be a submarine shooting dummy torpedoes underneath us so we could check the sonar readings under cold and warm water conditions."

The stark contrast of the ship's route still impress him.

"So we would be down in Port-of-Spain listening to the workers singing 'Rum and Coca Cola – working for the Yankee dollar,' and then we would go up to Greenland where we would be surrounded by huge iceberg that towered over our ship."

Gurney admits to bouts of seasickness.

"I did a lot of cooking on ship as well. When we were in port, I would do the cooking so that the cooks could be able to get off the ship."

After three years of service in the Navy, Gurney was honorably discharged in 1947. He returned to the same company where he been employed since 1935. He became highly skilled in the craft of precision cylindrical grinding.

"When I first went there we were working to a thousandth of an inch, and when I retired we working at a millionth of an inch."

Part of Gurney's work took him to Switzerland where he would buy advanced machines for the company.

"I bought a 1790 home in Middleboro on 16 acres for $12,000, and spent five years restoring it. It had four fireplaces. I married in the early 70s. My bride, Mimi Cohen, was from Casablanca. Her brother was a chef at some of the top French restaurants in Boston, and introduced me to that world. I built a barbecue. I put in a swimming pool."

It was there that he hosted Sunday barbecues for the Boston restaurateurs and guests.

Gurney retired in 1970. "I worked in the same place for 65 years - from 1935 to 2000 with a three year stint in the navy. When I first came to Scituate in 1972, I went to Widow's Walk and over to Marshfield country club and put in birdhouses. I have always been in to birding."

HEALTH NOTES

Putting your health to the test

STEVE BOBO

Makeup of humans to cope with change brought to you in part by the Social Service League who are strong in support of a new Senior Center for Cohasset.

Last week's column was a clear demonstration of a typical winter weather double cross. The weather might as well been in April rather than having anything to do with seasonal affective disorder (SAD) as written. Researchers may have discovered a gene that may make people prone to SAD. Those who work with the gene believe that a version affects a person's response to light. However, it could have a purely psychological component. Symptoms are possibly a natural and desirable response to winter. In nature, animals are generally less functional in winter.

This week's column will talk about making sense of one of those periodic checkups one is supposed to have with the doctor who will doubtless order a series of lab tests regardless of how the checkup was prescribed. The Town Health Nurse is certainly one source as well as the doctor at your pharmacy or, of course, your primary care physician.

Abnormal test results are fairly common, especially among older adults who tend to take more medications that often skew the results. For example, diuretics can alter sodium and potassium levels and Heprin can decrease platelet count; both abnormalities requiring further treatment. Also, many older people with chronic conditions require more testing. Generally it's a good idea to schedule an appointment with a caregiver after undergoing lab work.

Look out for the following factors that can throw off any test results: Running or other high intensity exercise can cause slight dehydration and show up as kidney insufficiency. Sunburn can elevate white blood count; signaling inflammation. A sick housemate or child can raise or lower white blood cell count. An improper blood draw can cause a potassium spike and eating too much licorice can make it drop. A specimen drawn and left to sit before testing can skew blood sugar readings. And, of course weight and waist measurement are the old signs of too little attention to diet.

The American Association of Retired Persons has a magazine available to members ages 50 to 89 and spouses 45 to 89, (bordering on some kind of male/female partisanship, if not something else). In its February/March issue, it lists only a few of the various ailments in an article titled "Health Report" from which some of the material herein was borrowed.

Tests performed in a physical examination are usually aimed at detecting a symptom or sign; positive or negative. Quantification of a target substance, a cell type or another specific entity is a common output of, for example, most blood tests. This is not only answering if a target entity is present or absent, but also how much is present. In blood tests, the quantification is relatively well specified, such as given in mass concentration, while most other tests may be quantifications as well although less specified, such as a sign of being "very pale" rather than "slightly pale." Similarly, radiologic images are technically quantifications of radiologic opacity of tissues.

Especially in the taking of a medical history, there is no clear limit between a detecting or quantifying test versus rather descriptive information of an individual. For example, questions on the occupation or social life of an individual may be positive or negative for the presence of various risk factors, or they may be regarded as merely descriptive, although the latter may be at least as clinically important.

Positive or negative? The result of a test aimed at detection of an entity may be positive or negative; this has nothing to do with a bad prognosis, but rather means that the test worked or not, and a certain parameter that was evaluated was present or not. For example, a negative screening test for breast cancer means that no sign of breast cancer could be found, which is in fact very positive for the patient. Additional factors that influence a decision whether a medical test should be performed or not include: Cost of the test, availability of additional tests, potential interference with subsequent tests, diagnosis, costs and unnecessary follow-up.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Making plans for summer

JON BELBER

With the arrival of spring next week and the warm temperatures, many kids might hear the call. Come learn to sail. Explore adventures at an away camp in the mountains. Hone your skills in sports such as tennis, soccer and swimming. Take on a new role in a local dramatic production. All of these opportunities and more await children here on the South Shore. And I know many kids who will take advantage of what local organizations and towns have to offer.

So, why would someone come to Holly Hill Farm to sow carrot seeds, make compost and weed around a tomato plant that may not yield its fruit until August? These are questions that I hope to answer. Everyone looks forward to summer and may not even wish to take on an activity, other than bicycle to the beach, read a good book or lollygag under the shade of a tree.

I grew up playing soccer in the summer and that eventually morphed into a counselor in training role and then to becoming a soccer coach. I feel fortunate to have had the chance to learn, grow as a player, feel confident enough to teach others and to enjoy myself with a neat community of players and coaches of many ages.

I rarely, if ever, thought about what a plant needs to grow, or the magic of how compost happens or how to rotate crops so as to better avoid potential pests and probable diseases. I was busy juggling the soccer ball and practicing my dribbling and nutmegs. I still care about soccer and even find myself coaching a bit in town when needed, but now as a parent and a farm teacher, I certainly think much more about what I consume, the traces of chemicals that may have been used on fruits and vegetables and the fact that everybody eats.

Holly Hill Farm is in the unique position to offer organic vegetables and flowers to folks at our farmstand and to the community at the Cohasset farmers market, starting in June. And the fields, woods and barnyard serve as the classroom and learning spaces for teaching kids, adults and families about how this great produce, beautiful flowers and tasty herbs make it to market. Picking a fresh carrot from the ground, washing it of its dirt and taking a bite is quite delicious. Digging and searching for potatoes is a great exploratory treasure hunt. Observing and feeding many chickens is a great study in animal and human behavior. Designing and building a garden bed or a bat box fosters confidence. Growing, harvesting and taking vegetables to market to sell and then earn money can be quite satisfying. Preparing fresh, healthy produce and delivering it to those in need at a food pantry can instill a long lasting effect of making a difference in people's lives.

There are many more tasks and skills and general enthusiastic endeavors awaiting kids and families at the farm this summer. Right now, I have mentioned that seeds are germinating, table space in the greenhouse is at a premium and plans are well underway for turning the farm beds and directly sowing some seeds right into that good black earth, after a long winter of not working the soil. We are also planning a wide variety of programs and discoveries for kids ages 3 to 22.

Families have a lot of terrific considerations. There are plans being made and decisions debated as people in the midst of busy school days and parade preparations begin to think about the lazy days of summer. Summer at the farm may seem a bit too much to ask, but perhaps a week or two or more might allow folks to find themselves studying the goats, holding a worm, chasing a dragonfly or sipping sumac tea. The summer will come soon, and with it, hopefully the option for kids to engage in an activity that is rewarding and fun.

College financial aid workshop offered

Matthew Cunningham of The Bulfinch Group will offer a free seminar on College Financial Aid, featuring Stan Ezekiel from The College Planning Group at 2 p.m. Saturday, March 24, at Mathnasium 226 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset.

This workshop will discuss: How higher income families earn financial aid. How a "private" college may cost less than a "state" college. What colleges do not want you to know about the financial aid process and how to negotiate for more.

Interested parties should RSVP to Patricia Murphy at the Bulfinch Group on or before March 20 at patricia_murphy@bulfinchgroup.com or at http://www.thecollegeplanninggroup.com

Coughlin in a lengthy question and answer session during which she cited emails between Coughlin and various board members to demonstrate his poor communication with these officials.

Louison at first rejected the idea of this back-and-forth, asking, "Can't we also put the board of selectmen on the stand to be cross-examined?"

In a tense moment between the lawyers, Berry said that they were merely there to hear from Coughlin and the people of Cohasset before the selectmen make their final decision.

Saillant leveled several questions at Coughlin, asking if he often ignored officials' email requests or failed to meet with them in a timely matter when it came to several crucial deadlines, including state mandated sewer hookups and finding a new veteran's service officer (VSO). The attorney also said that Coughlin insulted Capital Budget Committee members in emails and shouted at them in meetings.

Coughlin responded that he is not a perfect person and sometimes "got his Irish up," and that many discussions between he and these board members had been "spirited." Regarding the VSO issue, retired agent Joseph McElroy told the crowd that he had tried to communicate the need to find a new VSO several times to Coughlin starting last summer, but that he had been continually ignored. Coughlin explained that he thought he had found a replacement in Hull's VSO, Bill Leamy, but that Leamy had pulled out while Coughlin was on vacation in December. Leamy has since retired from the position. When Coughlin returned, the deadline to find an interim or new VSO in time for McElroy's Dec. 31 retirement had passed.

Both selectmen and McElroy were anxious at the time, and Coughlin told the selectmen they had the authority to appoint a VSO. Police sergeant Garrett Hunt, who is injured and not on active duty, was appointed. Coughlin had said that if an interim could not be found, that as town manager, a veteran of Desert Storm and a former JAG lawyer, he was qualified to act as interim VSO and would have done the job himself. He was therefore not as concerned as McElroy about finding a replacement.

Town employees Mary Quill, Town Assessor, and Coral Grande, Director of Elder Affairs, wanted to go on record and say that they never had a communication problem with Coughlin. Several citizens expressed that Coughlin should not be fired for making unpopular decisions that upset a few board members. Louison claimed that the board of selectmen had been "hijacked" by these volunteer committees, a remark that Water Commissioner Leonora Jenkins later said that she found insulting as a volunteer who is merely trying to help the town.

Resident Al Stefan told the selectmen, "I love the fact that you guys don't like him. What I want to see as a taxpayer are checks and balances." He then asked the selectmen whom they would get to replace Coughlin: "One of your guys?"

The selectmen appointed resident Michael Milanoski as acting town manager last month. Last week, they voted to pay him a stipend of $2,000 a week.

Karen Quigley said she had heard a rumor several weeks ago that the selectmen were going to fire Coughlin and replace him with Milanoski, and "Lo and behold, where are we at?"

However, as chairman of the Governance Committee and an associate, non-voting member of the Conservation Commission, Milanoski is disqualified from being hired as a permanent replacement for Coughlin, since the town manager cannot have served on a town committee within the past year. The selectmen had to vote to make the Governance Committee a Special Municipal Employee in order to compensate Milanoski for taking on the interim town manager role.

Contract controversy

The selectmen also treated Tuesday's hearing as an opportunity to ask Coughlin about 12 employee contracts he had approved without their knowledge (see related story).

Coughlin approved raises for some town employees and made new appointments for others without alerting the selectmen, officials said. Carr said that the changes to the contracts had been discovered after Coughlin had been suspended, but served as the most recent example of a failure to communicate with the board. He wanted to know why Coughlin had not informed them.

"He's entitled [to amend the contracts]; it's his decision," Carr said after the meeting. "But their existence was a total surprise to us. The contracts were inconsistent... why these 12 people?"

Milanoski, along with Finance Director Mary Gallagher, told the selectmen that there is not enough money in the current fiscal year budget, or in next year's, to cover these raises. The selectmen voted to reject these contracts Monday night, with the understanding that Milanoski will work with the town employees over the next 30 days to reach an agreement.

Coughlin said that he approved these raises because the morale in Cohasset's Town Hall was the lowest he had ever seen, compared to his four previous towns and that employees had cried in his office because they were afraid of losing their jobs. Giving them raises, he argued, was a way to ensure stability by providing the employees with job security. He added that these contracts were under his purview as Town Manager, and that he did not need to alert the board of the changes; he was merely doing what he had done in every other town.

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore, who also serves on the Budget Planning Group, said that Coughlin was escalating spending when the town had to tighten its purse strings. He said that he thought Coughlin had understood the town's fiscal problems when he started his position, but that as the months wore on, Coughlin presented reports that contained "fluff" rather than financials. He took issue when Coughlin disagreed with the Budget Planning Group's recommendation to level-fund the fiscal 2013 budget.

"Spending appeared to be out of control," said Pescatore. "This was after three months."

Coughlin issued an email statement Wednesday responding specifically to Pescatore's comments.

"I have helped Cohasset turn a financial corner. The financial system imploded and we did the impossible— submitted to DOR, set the Tax Rate and resolved questions on Sewer. The chair of the Advisory Committee raised questions about numbers and his background in dealing with them. I inherited a problem was perhaps six years in the making. Chairman Pescatore has been on the Advisory for many years. He blinded accepted past administrations' numbers when a blind man could see there was a problem. I have been here six months and we made solid progress.

"One of the issues was inadequate staffing of the financial departments. When [former finance director] John Stanbrook asked Chairman Pescatore for additional help, he objected. I fought him and got Eric Kinsherf back on board and then Dan Sullivan [financial consultants who served as interim finance director and interim treasurer collector, respectively]... Being fiscally responsible starts with creating fiscal stability, and the core is forging a financial team that gets the job done— we did that I am very proud of that fact."

Some residents said that they felt engaging in litigation with Coughlin and his attorney would cost the town even more money in the long run. More than one citizen asked the board to keep Coughlin on to avoid a long, drawn-out legal battle.

"I would rather buy my kids two new bicycles," said Stuart Ivimey, a lawyer and chairman of the Planning Board.

Milanoski said Wednesday that the town has an insurance policy that would cover the legal fees and settlement costs.

Louison told the board that while he did not want to make threats, his client could sue the town as a whistleblower. He claimed that Coughlin got into trouble with the selectmen and volunteer committees when the town manager expressed concerns over the Water Commission's request for proposals for a new water contract. Coughlin felt there was a conflict of interest and filed complaints with the Attorney General's office, State Ethics Commission and Inspector General's Office.

Louison said that Coughlin was merely doing his job and that the selectmen had been "hijacked" by the water commission and committees that disagreed and were pressuring the selectmen to fire Coughlin. He added that as elected officials, they should have better dealt with the political pressures.

"The board of selectmen is elected to shield the town manager from politics. You hired Michael Coughlin to deal with management and business with the town, not to be a popular guy. You knew going in at the outset of this agreement that the town of Cohasset had serious, complicated issues.

"It's very telling in his contract, which is in essence an at-will contract, that the provision says you can fire for cause or no cause. You have decided through your resolution that he has done nothing wrong... he has done every bit of the job and more."

Frances Collins, a resident and retired merchant marine, earned laughs and applause when he said that since Coughlin hadn't stolen any town money, engaged in appropriate sexual relations with a staff member, or burned down Town Hall, the town manager should not be fired.

Resident Adrienne MacCarthy summed up the evening with a quote from the film "Cool Hand Luke": "What we have here is a failure to communicate." But MacCarthy added that she hoped the hearing had opened up a dialogue between the selectmen and town manager. "If you choose to keep him on board and he chooses to stay, which is a whole other issue, then you can all work together."

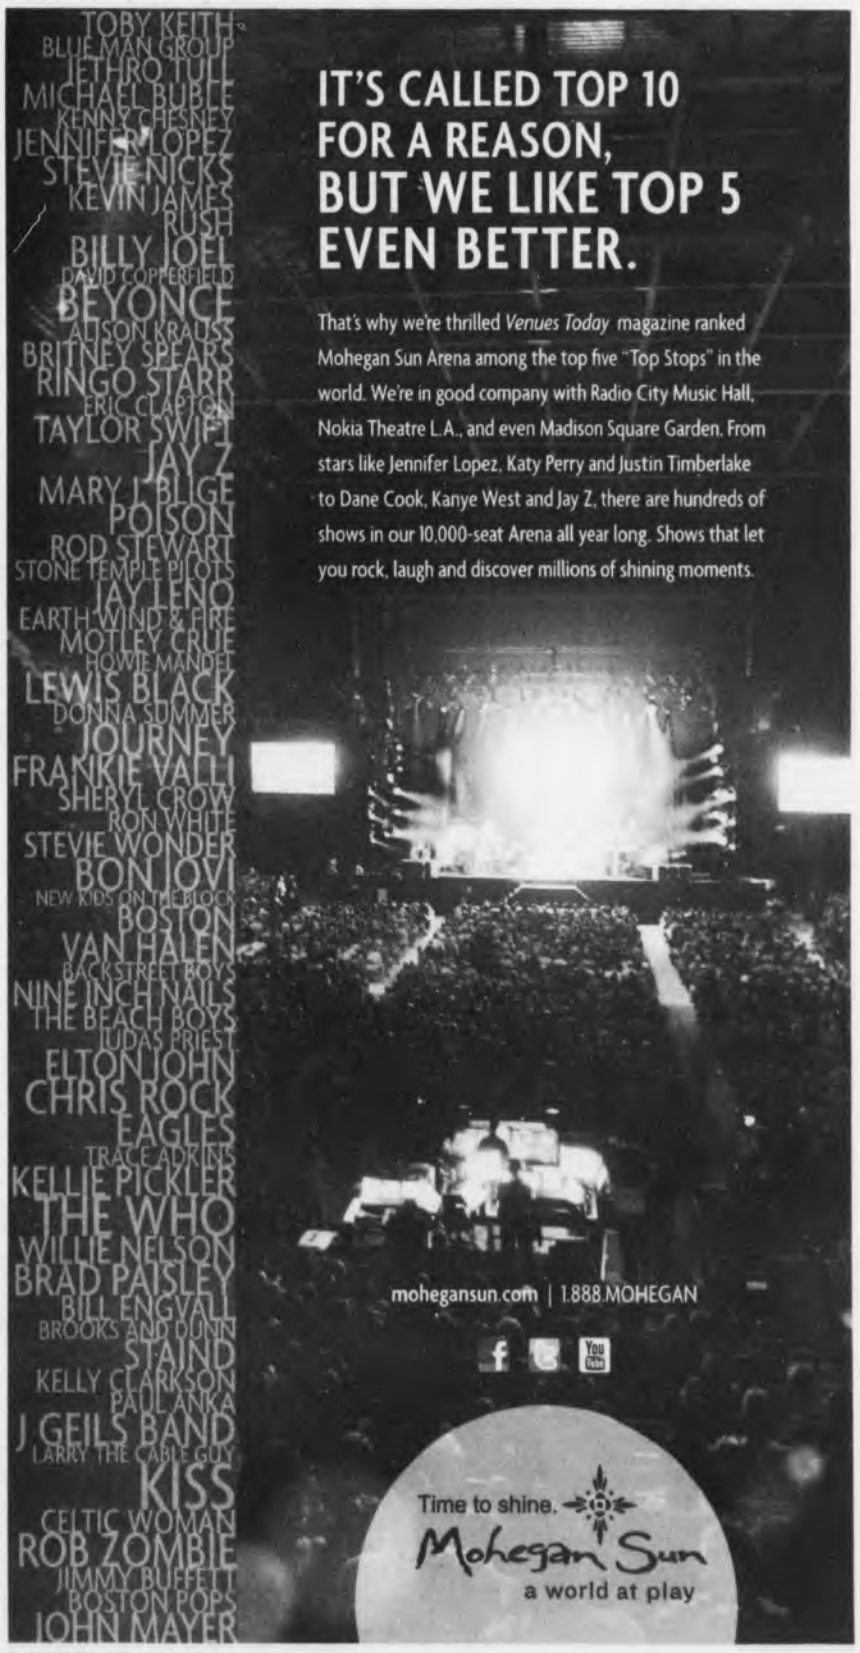
In their own words:

Over a dozen citizens took to the microphone Tuesday night to speak in support of or against the Town Manager. Folks were asked to keep their comments to three to five minutes apiece, but many in the spirit of the event, went over time. What follows below is not an excerpt of the wittiest or most eloquent speeches per se, but rather a "highlight reel" of what people in Cohasset had to say to the selectmen and the rest of the community on what has perhaps become the single most controversial issue this year. Michael Coughlin: Should he stay, or should he go?

Gary Vanderveil, former sewer commissioner: "In my opinion, we hired the wrong person to fill the town manager slot. He and the town are not compatible. I'm not assigning blame or fault; no one's at fault. It's a matter of incompatibility and an issue of mis-hire."

Peter Pescatore, Advisory Committee chair, Budget Planning Group: "In September, Mike Coughlin presented 11 points, his guidelines for 2012. I was very concerned because all 11 points had suggested fairly incremental spending, but there was no monetary indication on the report for anyone to understand. As far as I was concerned, it showed a desire to escalate the budget, which we didn't have any funds to support... I was very pleased with Mike Coughlin's initial direction and structure, but I became disenchanted very quickly... I can only conclude that fiscal responsibility simply was not in Mr. Coughlin's repertoire... What I want out of a town manager is fiscal responsibility; I think that's the primary role of anyone we hire to be in that job."

Patience Towel, Library Trustees chair: "I did not come hear prepared to talk about the budget. I thought that it was restricted, but since prior people have already brought it up, I would like to say... I have been an elected library trustee for 20 years, and I was chairman during the building process and brought the $4.2 million library to the community on time and on budget, so I can look at a number and not be intimidated... The real reason I'm here, though, is to speak to the point of communication. Because we, our board and our director and our department head, have not experienced any of the problems being outlined by other people here. Communication has been flawless and enthusiastic. We have been encouraged to go forward with our ideas and plans at the library... I would ask you to really reflect on the lack of real reason [to remove Coughlin], and to think communications are good and can be good."



George Charmillard, member of Advisory and Governance committees: "I was on the town manager selection committee 15 or 16 months ago. They recommended Mike and other candidates to the board of selectmen for the town manager. I had then, and I still do, tremendous respect for Mike's capabilities and for his experience. However, having said that, I'm convinced that it is time for a change... Mike coined the term 'Team Cohasset' and described his role as 'Coach of Team Cohasset' when he came and I thought that was a very good way to describe it. But there are two 'Team Cohassets' in town: there's what I think of as lowercase, little 't,' and a capital 't'... Lowercase, little 't' tends to be focused around the town employees and Town Hall... Capital 't' team Cohasset expands that and says the governance in this town is successful work between those employees and Town Hall, but also the board of selectmen, and the many commissions that are appointed or elected and the committees. As coach of lowercase team Cohasset, Mike did a very good job and accomplished a lot... But as coach to capital t, Mike has not been as effective. He has been unable to broadly build support, a trust and a confidence... Massachusetts is a no-fault divorce state; this marriage has not worked... It's an irreconcilable marriage, and both parties should wish each other well and move on with their lives."

Agnes McCann, library trustee: "Why is this a hearing if this is no cause? The town might object because it's a horrendous waste of time and money to terminate somebody who has not been in the job long enough to fail to communicate or fail to be effective... I was in a large corporation, and I know the past 30 years of employment law, to terminate even a secretary you have to go through telling them what's wrong and giving them a chance to fix it... but it's not six months. I just think it's an outrage and hope you that don't do it. I think that if you don't reinstate the town manager at this stage, you'll go on in your positions, but you will have lost the trust of so many people in this town that it will do irreparable harm. But if you reinstate him, you at least have the chance to try to earn it back."

Francis Collins, retired merchant marine: "You hire a guy and you have him six months, and you've been telling us what a great job he's doing. All of a sudden he's not doing a great job... I think on the issue of fairness, the guy hasn't stolen any money, hasn't had sexual improprieties, hasn't set the Town Hall on fire... the guy needs a second chance. You people need to reconsider where you're coming from as a whole board. Maybe you're not happy with him; but the way to let him know you're unhappy with him is not to say, 'You're fired.' My sense of fairness says you people have made a serious mistake to terminate this guy without giving him a chance to improve in areas where you say he's not communicating... To cut him adrift like this, I think it's unconscionable."

Roy Fitzsimmons: "I spoke at a selectmen's meeting awhile ago about communication at the special town meeting... New positions were being created and yet we were having financial difficulties in the town. I went to town meeting expecting all of this to be explained, and I was told after the meeting that article one supposedly contained information and funding to support the new positions... Yet I don't remember any explanation at the town meeting how the townspeople's money was being spent for these positions and, for that matter, why they were being created... I've lived in the town for more than 43 years, and I was really appalled to see this going on... In this case, I don't remember any discussion and I was very upset to hear these new positions were being applauded and created, and we were expected to foot the bill and really didn't know much about it. In that case, not only the town manager, but the selectmen and advisory and town committees, have to tell the taxpayers and the people how they're spending our money... I would expect all of that to be fully explained at town meeting, but I didn't hear it."

Leonora Jenkins, Water Commissioner: "For two years we've had to go to town meeting to ask for money because we've had a huge amount of delinquent accounts from our ratepayers, your neighbors. We couldn't cover our expenses because our delinquent accounts were much larger than what our expenses were. We had discussed this prior to Mr. Coughlin coming on board... What this has to do with everything is the communication problem. So here we are in a dire financial situation; the board of water commissioners voted unanimously to go with the shut-off policy. Unfortunately, our town manager disagreed with it. When we were at a selectmen's meeting, and one of the water commissioners asked if the water commissioners totally, unanimously agrees with something, and the town manager disagrees with our vote, what happens? Mike was not reticent in saying, 'I win.' So that's it, he won... This constant barrage of painting us as something... We're volunteers. We're not trying to take anything away from the town, we're trying to help the town. But we're being told we're causing all these problems when we're trying to solve them. The roadblocks that have been put in our way just to get this shut-off policy off the ground has been ridiculous."

4x800: Marshfield, Matt Meehan, Joel Hubbard, Brendan Doherty and Kevin Thomas.

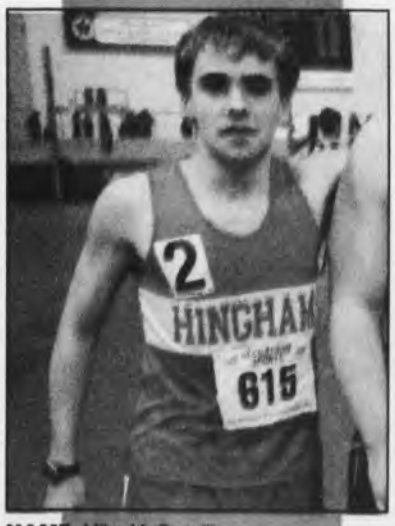
NAME: Andrew Bolze
YEAR: Sophomore
SCHOOL: Hingham
EVENT: Long Jump
STATS: Bolze jumped 21' 3.51 at the MIAA Division 3 Championships for a fourth place finish at the MIAA Div. 3 Championship. Bolze was also outstanding in the 300, where he ran a 36.13 time MIAA All-State Championship Meet.

NAME: Kevin Thomas
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Marshfield
EVENT: 1 Mile
STATS: When it comes to distances, Thomas has it covered. The senior has been running laps around the competition throughout his high school career, and this winter was no different. Thomas finished fifth in mile at the All-State Championships in 4:20.38. An Atlantic Coast League all-star, Thomas won the mile at the Division 2 State Meet with a time of 4:20.16.

NAME: Brian Sullivan
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
EVENT: Shot Put
STATS: Sullivan made it to the MIAA Div. 3 State Championship, but had a best throw of 50' 2.36 at A Patriot League Meet in January

NAME: Charley Petit
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Norwell
EVENT: 55 dash
STATS: Petit may go down as the greatest indoor sprinter in Norwell High School history. He already holds the school record in 55 dash (6.73 seconds), which he set this year as a junior. The Atlantic Coast Leage all-star finished fourth at the Division 4 State Meet and 18th at the All-State Championships.

NAME: Joel Hubbard
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Marshfield
EVENT: 1,000
STATS: From the moment he took off in his first race as a freshman, Hubbard has been at or near the top of the pack. This year in the 1,000, the Atlantic Coast League all-star took it to another level. Hubbard won the 1,000 at the Division 2 State Meet with a time of 2:27.43, and he finished fifth at All-States (2:31.89).



NAME: Nolan Parsley
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
EVENT: 1 Mile
STATS: Although he is only a junior, he is a veteran distance runner for the Wildcats and a member of Weymouth's rising cross-country varsity as well. Also excels in the 2 Mile

NAME: Jack Kahrs
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Scituate
EVENT: High Jump
STATS: Jumped 6'6.00 at the MIAA All-State Championships for a season's best

NAME: Tyler Mulcahy
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
EVENT: 300
STATS: Mulcahy was nearly a one-man track team for the Wildcats, competing -- and winning -- in several events this season. But his forte was the 300, where he posted the best time in the region.

NAME: Mike McConville
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
EVENT: 2 Mile
STATS: McConville finished fifth at the MIAA Div. 3 Championships, but also had a great run of 9.34.02 at the Boston Holiday Meet earlier in the season.

NAME: Sam McKay
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
EVENT: Hurdles
STATS: McKay is headed to the University of Hartford, but not to run track. He is the top pitcher on the WHS varsity. However, he ran the fastest hurdles in the region this winter and earned a berth on the Super Team.

YOUTH BASEBALL AND SOFTBALL

Opening day

Mark your calendars down for April, 28, 2012. We have tentatively scheduled our Opening Day Parade for this date. You'll know it's spring when you see the Fire Engine leading our young players down South Main St.

If you have any questions or can't log into your account to register, please send us an email. Info@cybsa.net.

We're looking forward to a great season.

YOUTH BASKETBALL

Fifth graders win title

In a matchup of the two best defensive teams in the league, the Cohasset 5th Grade Boys B Team defeated Abington 8-4 to win the Abington Stars Western Division title on Saturday night.

Both teams peaked at the playoffs - Abington finished the season 7-5 and was on four-game winning streak coming into Saturday night's game.

Cohasset, also 7-5 in the regular season, defeated league leading Pembroke (9-3) in the regular season finale to make the playoffs - and then defeated Pembroke the next weekend to advance to the finals.

In the Finals, the first half was a defensive struggle and Cohasset was only up 2-0 at the half - thanks to clutch free throws by guard Turner Martell and forward Mark Mahoney.

The second half showcased Cohasset's zone press, led by guard Brendan Cooper and center Jackson Fitzgerald and led to a number of Abington turnovers. But Cohasset did not establish a firm handle on the lead until a baseline jumper from forward Ian Dunkelberger put Cohasset up 7-0.

Rebounds by Aidan Gildea in the 2nd half also led to key scores. Point guards Ian Turpel and Ben Fernando led the team on both offense and defense - the turnover battle was won by Cohasset in a big part due to the way the ran the offense.

Centers Jarrod Seebeck and Jared Nash withstood a much

A season of accomplishment

Skippers an example of skill and class

GateHouse News Service

While the end of any high school sport season is a sad thing, (especially for seniors), this year's Cohasset High School boy's hockey team has much to be proud of.

In the past six seasons that Bob Walsh (67-45-14), has been head coach, the Skippers have made playoffs five times.

Additionally, this year Cohasset finished with their best regular season record to date, at 14-3-3 which earned them the No. 2 seed in Division 3 South.

Finally, the Skippers scored more goals than any other team in Division 1, 2 or 3 in the State with 124 goals.

Senior Alex Evans scored his 100th career point during the last game of the regular season.

"This is a difficult achievement for any high school player to accomplish," said coach Walsh, "But add the fact that Alex didn't become a starter on our team until his junior year and that makes it phenomenal. This season alone, he was credited with 22 goals and 19 assists for a total of 41 points."

Cohasset's Vinny Calorio had a big season for the high-scoring Skippers. PHOTO/WILLIAM WASSERSUG

One additional fact is that Cohasset placed more players on the South Shore League All Star team than any other team, with six players in all as well as having Coach Walsh named as the SSL All Star Coach for 2011/2012.

"When I look back over the season, I'm proud of the performance of this year's team. But more than their performance on the ice, I'm proud of the men they have become. I could go anywhere in the high school hockey world and was complimented on my team and not only how good they were as players but how they carried themselves as individuals in

GIRLS BASKETBALL

True fighters

Girls battle injuries and opponents

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

No one can blame members of the Cohasset girls basketball team if they ask if they can change the channel if there is a medical show on the television.

The Skippers were coming off a 19-4 season with a trip to the Div. 4 State Semifinals and had a number of players back, but a rash of injuries slowed down Cohasset this year.

Cohasset coach John Levangie figures that it is roughly nearly 60 games that his team lost to various injuries, but the good news was that his team hung in there and there is a bright future.

"The girls had a great attitude," said Levangie. "They shook it off and they fought. I have been around a long time. You might lose a player here or a player there to an injury, but I never have seen anything like that. Most of the time, we did not know who was available to play, but the girls never got down."

Cohasset was able to play a number of underclassmen.

They will have three girls that were juniors coming back and they have five freshman, which included two that got plenty of playing time.

Levangie was impressed with the way that his girls handled a tough situation from a season where Cohasset had 13 different starting lineups.

They never had according to the coach their projected starting five for one game during the year.

"Our attitude as I said," Levangie commented. "was great. The girls accepted what happened. At the end of the year we got three starters back and we defeated Nantucket. You wonder what it might have been.

"The attitude we showed was great. We lost to Hull in overtime in our second game

Scoreboard almost there

The Cohasset High Varsity Baseball Team is coming off its second consecutive Division IV State Championship Season and we're looking to commemorate this historic achievement with an exciting project that we hope will celebrate the success of our favorite local pastime for many years to come!

The Cohasset Diamond Club is proudly launching an effort to install a state-of-the-art scoreboard at the home of the State Champions, the Milliken Field Complex.

We currently do not have a scoreboard there. In an effort to enhance the baseball experience for both players and spectators alike, The Diamond Club solicited proposals from local scoreboard vendors and was very fortunate to secure a generous donation from the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund to jumpstart the project. However, to make this project a reality, we need your help.

We are reaching out to all family, friends, and fans of Cohasset Baseball to get us to home plate with sufficient funds to complete the project for the 2012 season. In order to do so, we are asking that you consider making a contribution to the Cohasset Diamond Club so that we can fund this exciting endeavor.

We greatly appreciate any amount that you can contribute and ask that you consider making a donation to help the high school teams.

Thank you very much.

HOOPS FOR BAND AND CHORUS

Taking on the teachers

Friday night, March 23, at 6:30, there will be a basketball game between teachers and the high school team to raise money for the chorus/band trip to New York City this Spring.

It will be a fun evening with face painting, a free-throw contest and concessions.

Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for students.

Teachers scheduled to play are Bill Fish, Jason McCabe, Al Gallotta, Jim Willis, Brian Pattison,

Marty Geoghegan, Ron Ford, Mike Hogan, Shannon Gerrish and Lisa Sugrue.

SOUTH COASTAL HOCKEY LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Rangers edge Leafs

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The Maple Leafs quest to stay undefeated in the Classics Div. in the South Coastal Hockey League came to an end this past Sunday.

The Rangers Mike Crisp broke a 1-1 tie with 3:55 left and they hung on for a 2-1 win over the Leafs.

Pembroke's Bill Sawtelle scored the other Rangers goal and Mike Bartlett scored for the Leafs.

Ted Duggan broke a 3-3 tie with 3:24 left to give the Red Wings a 4-3 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks.

Marshfield's Ron DiCecca, Kevin Barnard and Steve Figioli added a goal each and John Guilderson had two assists to go over the 300 career point total for the Wings.

Tony Rota scored two goals and assisted on another for the Black Hawks.

Scituate's David Howe and Pat Mulkern of Pembroke added a goal and an assist each for the Black Hawks.

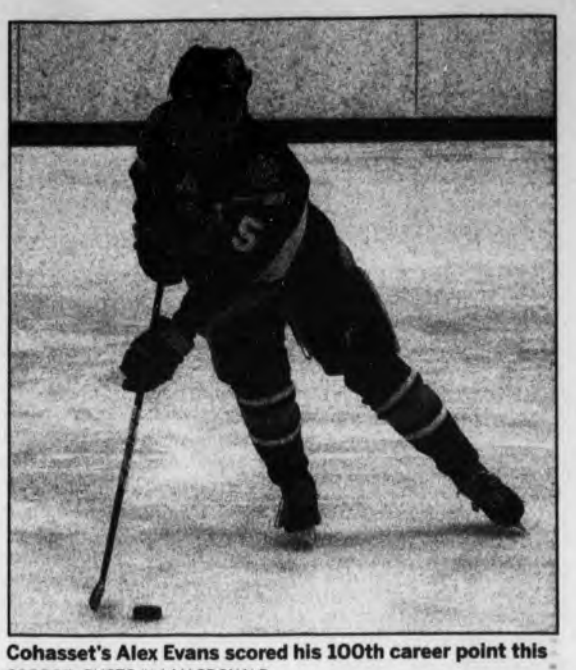
Marshfield's Tim McCrystal and Kirk Souza scored a goal and assisted on another in a five goal first period as the Canadiens held on for a 5-4 Classics Div. win over the Bruins. Duxbury's Don Dudley, Sean Keegan and John MacLellan both of Pembroke had a goal each for the Canadiens.

Mike Martin had a goal and two assists for the Bruins. They also got goals from Hanover's Jim Martin, John Dougenik and Steve Anzuoni and two assists from Tom MacInnes.

Marshfield's Justin Stratton stopped 30 shots overall, which included 18 in the first period as the Saints shutout the Stingers, 3-0 in Legends Div. matchup.

Jeff Nelson of Marshfield, Todd Roach and Jim Callahan scored the goals for the Saints.

Dana Dolabany of Norwell scored three goals including an empty-netter as the Sharks pulled off a 5-3 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders.



Marshfield's Mike Valenti and Richard Petrosino each scored a goal and Tim Cruz had two assists for the Sharks.

Mike Simon, Mark Kaplan and Scott Mondeau scored the goals for the Crusaders.

James Ward of Norwell and Peter Cleary of Pembroke scored a goal each for the Toros in their 2-2 Legends Div. tie with the Whalers.

Richard Keyes and Marshfield's Chuck Morrison scored for the Whalers who took over first-place in the Legends Div. with the tie.

interviews and with other coaches," coach Walsh said.

"As good as this team was however, I believe we can and will be better next year partly because of the legacy of leadership this year's seniors leave us with as well as the talent and strength of the remaining core group of players."

Next year, Coach Walsh and the Skippers look to increase the difficulty of the schedule by adding such opponents as Hanover, Scituate and Silver Lake to the regular season schedule.

"Because of changes within our league, we will have more slots to fill with non league opponents and I intend to play tougher teams in order to better prepare for post season play. I have every confidence we will do well if players will do what they need to do to prepare during the off season."

against them in Hull. Our two biggest cheerleaders in the games were our two captains that were out hurt."

Levangie has good reason to wonder what might have been for his team.

The Skippers had six wins for the season and three of them were against quality tournament teams, Nantucket, Hull in their first meeting and Mashpee, which finished second in the South Shore League.

Cohasset though will graduate some talented players from what has been a very successful run over the past few years.

Allie Farren, Izzy Robinson, Sage Stebbins and Kaye Slamp conclude great careers this year at Cohasset.

"Sage Stebbins did a great job for at point guard," said Levangie. "She had never played the position before and the tough thing for her was that she had to work with different players in each game. Allie Farren was an outstanding captain. Izzy Robinson is one of the hardest workers on the team and Kaye Slamp improved a lot and became our center this year.

"Our seniors were tremendous. Even when they were injured they were keeping the other players working in practice, such as feeding them passes so they could shoot."

Annie Robinson was supposed to be the starting center, but she missed 12 games because of an injury and Kristen Alexander played in the last three games of the season. They will both be back to in the lineup next year for Cohasset.

Cailey Hart is another player that Cohasset will be looking to next year as a key player.

Freshmen Lily McCarthy and Alexa Bleicken got plenty of time this year on the varsity because of the rash of injuries and another freshman Megan Fitzgerald played some for the varsity during the season.

"Success is funny," said Levangie. "The kids hung in there and gave quite an effort."

LIFE AT CHS

Heat is on for Mr. Skipper hopefuls

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

This year there are a lot more photographs of underclassmen, and who wouldn't want to have a book commemorating the best senior class ever?

Hey Cohasset! Finally, some warm weather has arrived. On Monday and Tuesday, people were at the beach, running outside, and some even trying to tan. The warm weather is not exactly good news for the seniors who have already contracted Senioritis, but hey, I'm happy about it. Also, happy belated Pi Day and Ides of March!

On Thursday, the first-ever Student Council organized Dodgeball tournament took place in the gymnasium. Around 15 teams vied to win prized late passes, ice cream was sold, and hundreds of dollars was raised for the Senior Class. The tournament was a lot of fun to watch and participate in, and will hopefully become a tradition at CHS.

Make sure you come to the CHS auditorium tonight (Friday, March 16) at 7 p.m. to see 11 CHS men, 10 seniors and one brave junior, competing to win the prized title of Mr. Skipper! The boys must present formal wear, signature wear, answer a philosophical question, and present a special talent.

This year, the show is going to be hosted by over 10 different teachers, instead of just one, which will add a lot of humor and entertainment. The audience can purchase ballots for $1 to vote for who they believe should be crowned Mr. Skipper, and it will count as a judge's vote for whoever gets the most audience selections. Additionally, numerous local vendors have donated prizes and gift certificates for the huge raffle. Like the Dodgeball tournament, money earned will go to the Senior Class. Come on down to CHS tonight for a great time!

Next Friday is the Faculty All-Star Basketball game. Watch teachers play in a basketball game and compete in contests like a 3-point competition. The money raised at this event will go to the chorus and band's trip to New York City this May.

The MCAS are taking place for ninth and 10th graders within the next few weeks. Make sure to rest and eat a good breakfast the day before! Good luck to all the underclassmen.

Spring sports also start next week. Captains' practices have been taking place the past few weeks, and everybody is ready to begin a new season that should be filled with promise and excitement.

Underclassmen: if you want to buy a yearbook, see Ms. Emond in the main office to reserve a copy! This year there are a lot more photographs of underclassmen, and who wouldn't want to have a book commemorating the best senior class ever?

That's all for this week, Cohasset. Have a great weekend, and make sure you come to Mr. Skipper tonight!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at Cohasset High School; her column appears weekly during the school year.

MOTHERS CAN'T SAY ENOUGH about the personal care and "sense of home" they experience at Jordan Hospital's BirthPlace. As one recent mom put it: "Being certain I knew who'd be delivering my baby—and seeing everyone's concern for my preferences—made it an easy choice. Being right near all the grandparents and relatives was awesome for all of us." And now with the full resources of Tufts Medical Center at-the-ready, there simply isn't a better option for you, your baby, and your whole family.

To schedule a tour of The BirthPlace or find an affiliated OB/GYN or midwife, call 508-830-2230 or visit: www.jordanhospital.org/birthplace.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 26, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Put your restlessness to good use by indulging the Arian love of exploring new places and seeking new challenges. There also could be a new romance waiting to be "discovered."

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surprise message from someone in your past could lead to a long-awaited reunion with a once-close friend. Also, look for a workplace problem to be resolved in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your self-confidence is rising, and that should be a significant factor in helping you adjust to a new social situation, as well as adjusting to a series of changes in the workplace.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Turnabout could be lots of fun when someone who previously accepted your tender, loving care without question now suggests that he or she wants to start taking care of you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Put the lessons you learned from past disappointments to work in planning your future. The way ahead opens to opportunities "purrfectly" suited to the adventurous Lion.

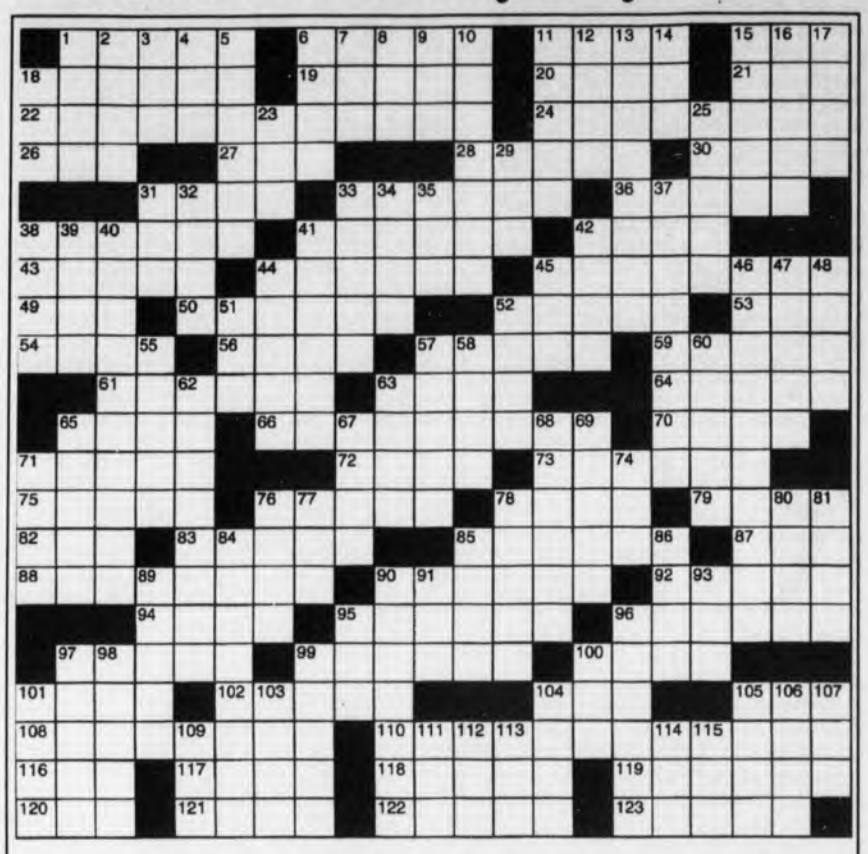
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to renew contacts with family members and/or old friends who somehow slipped off your personal viewing screen in recent years. Travel also is favored.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Most problems surrounding that recent personal situation have been resolved, and that means you should move on to other things that are important to you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Spend this weekend recharging your physical and spiritual energies. When you return to your workaday world, you'll be ready to take on that new project.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Be careful how you advise a troubled friend. Even your wise counsel could be misunderstood. Better to suggest that he or she seek professional help.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family problems once again dominate and, once again, everyone seeks your guidance in these matters. Later, you can indulge in some much-needed relaxation.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some mixed signals create confusion in the workplace. Best advice: Ask for explanations before you attempt to deal with any of these matters on your own.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A patch of roiling water in the workplace could be threatening, but stay the course and you'll soon be clear of it. Then go out and have a great time with loved ones.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your extraordinary leadership qualities mark you as someone people can turn to for guidance in difficult situations.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church: Living Faith, the Later Years

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is an inclusive, Christ-centered community committed to exploring the intersection of our faith and our lives. We invite you to join us on Sunday mornings and through a variety of special programs during the week. All are welcome to worship God with us at St. Stephen's!

This Sunday (March 18th) is the Third Sunday of Lent, the season of the church year in which we focus on our walks with Christ leading to the cross. After the service, the Living Faith Adult Education Program presents "Living Faith: The Later Years," the third of a three part series dealing with issues especially pertinent to our senior members. This Sunday, Dr. Mike Anderson will discuss living wills and DNR orders.

Sunday services of Holy Communion are at 8am and 10am. "The Sermon: Director's Cut" Bible Study meets at 9am; Godly Play (pre-k through elementary school) and CIA (middle school) meet at 10am. ROX (senior high) meets at 11:30am.

Coming this Summer: Vacation Bible School June 25-29! Save the date! Volunteer info meeting this Sunday after church.

AA meets four times a week at St. Stephen's: Sundays at 7 p.m., there is a Closed Big Book Study. Malcolm T. Logan

Malcolm T. Logan

PORTLAND, ME – Malcolm T. Logan, of Portland, Maine, died suddenly on March 8, 2012, of an apparent heart attack. He was 56.

Logan was the only son of Paula E. (Polly) Logan and the late General Edward F. Logan of Cohasset, MA. He also leaves his sister, Martha A. Logan and her husband, Professor Patrick Reid of Bloomfield, NJ, and his cousin Roberta Phippen Collier and her husband, Jeb Collier, of New Bern, NC.

Malcolm was a Partner at Nelson Rarities, Inc., a renowned buyer and seller of antique and estate jewelry for over 30 years, in Portland, Maine. As a Fine Arts major at Harvard University, owner Andrew Nelson recruited fellow classmate Malcolm for his love and appreciation of rare gems and fine jewelry. He established strong bonds with clients throughout the world and made lasting friendships from Europe to Florida, Las Vegas to Hong Kong, New England to London. His pride was the Nelson Rarities catalogue, published annually and a work of art in itself, which shared the rare gems and fine jewelry found throughout the world with similar collectors and admirers. According to Mr. Nelson, the firm's striking and informative website was entirely Malcolm's vision.

An avid reader, Malcolm's interests included mysteries, music, history, and sports. He loved intellectual games, whether the NY Times crossword puzzle, "Name that Tune in Three Notes", or a challenging rubber of duplicate bridge. A former ball player himself, his favorite team of all was the Boston Red Sox, with many evenings spent at Fenway Park or tuned in to WEEI.

From his days at Milton Academy and Harvard University and throughout his life, Malcolm will be remembered as an individualist, always with a smile and positive attitude, generous and loyal to a fault, and typically attired in white bucks, a colorful tie, blue or white blazer, and Panama hat.

Surviving family includes Barbara and Philip Cutler of Seattle, WA, Walter and Martha Phippen of Hull, MA, Susan and Sandy Buxbaum of Towson, MD, David and Wendy Phippen of Bothell, WA, Pat and Mike Rissler of Lenexa, KS, and Fred and Kelly Peterson of Fort Worth, TX.

The wake will be held Friday, March 16, 2012 from 4:00 pm to 8:00 pm at McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home located at 1 Summer Street in Cohasset, MA, and the funeral service will be held Saturday, March 17th, 2012 at 11:30 at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, 10 Summer Street, Cohasset MA. A reception will be held immediately following the service at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to The Polly Logan Fund, Center for Women in Politics and Public Policy, John W. McCormack Graduate School of Policy Studies, University of Massachusetts Boston, 100 Morrissey Blvd, Boston, MA 02215.

Albert Infusino

Albert Infusino

COHASSET – Albert Infusino of Cohasset, passed away March 8, 2012, at the age of 86.

Loving father of Teri O'Brien and her husband, Bob of Wrentham, Tom Infusino and his wife, Vicki of Weymouth, and Bob Infusino and his wife Robin of Humarock. Former husband of Catherine Infusino of Weymouth. Brother of Frances Calvi of Hingham and the late Mary Moore, Charles, Frank, John, and James Infusino. Also survived by many nieces, nephews, and extended family.

Albert was a veteran of World War II, and, until his retirement in 1986, worked for twenty-five years as a Vacuum Technician for High Vacuum Equipment Corporation. He was also a member of Cohasset VFW # 9146.

Albert was a kind and gentle man who enjoyed being with his family, walking his dog Sheba on the beach, and playing cards and exchanging stories with his many friends at the West Corner Men's Club.

Relatives and friends were respectfully invited to attend the visiting hours Monday 4-8 p.m. in the Pyne Keohane Funeral Home, 21 Emerald St., (off Central St.), Hingham. A Celebration of Life service was held in the funeral home Tuesday morning at 9:15 prior to the funeral Mass in Saint Anthony's Church, Cohasset at 10 a.m. Burial followed in Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

See www.Keohane.com or call 1-800-Keohane for directions and online condolences.

Michael F. Meallo

HANOVER – Michael F Meallo, age 50, of Hanover, formerly of Cohasset, died March 6, 2012 after a brief illness.

Beloved husband of Jennifer (Schmitt) and the devoted father of Katharine Hannah Meallo and Max Gerard Meallo of Hanover. Also survived by his parents, Albert and Paula Meallo of Cohasset; his brother Gregory Meallo of Scituate and sister, Melissa Meallo Zani of Exeter, NH.

Michael was a graduate of Cohasset High School, Class of 1979. He was the owner of Meallo Landscaping, a devoted coach of Hanover youth sports, and a member of the Hingham Sons of Italy and the West Corner Bocce League.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Saturday, March 10, 2012 at 10 a.m. at St. Anthony Church, 10 Summer St., Cohasset. Visiting hours omitted and interment private.

In lieu of flowers, you may make donations in Michael's name to the Bone Marrow Transplant Program, Dana Farber Cancer Institute, c/o Dr. Cutler, 450 Brookline Ave., Boston, MA 02215, or you may visit the Meallo Family website www.meallofamily.com.

Holly Hill Farm events

Holly Hill Farm is at 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset. For directions and more information, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org. To pre-register for programs call 781-383-6565.

Winter Mushroom Walk - Saturday, March 17, 1 to 3 p.m. Attendees will walk with author and expert Dr. Larry Millman. Millman will discuss the winter habitat of local mushrooms, even in the snow. Learn about the adaptations required for mushrooms to survive the winter climate and then walk the trails to find as many varieties as possible. This is an identification workshop recommended for adults, not a foraging trip. Millman's new book, "Fascinating Fungi of New England," will be available for sale. Space is limited so call to pre-register. Fee: $15 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $20 for non-members.

Baby Spinach - This is a special opportunity for children ages 3 through 5 to come to Holly Hill Farm in early spring. Children will have fun visiting the animals, making compost, sowing seeds and getting their hands dirty in a variety of ways. This program takes place for three sessions on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings from 10 a.m. to noon, March 20 through 22, March 27 through 29, and April 3 through 5. Cost is $72 per session for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members, $122 for non-members. Space is limited so call to pre-register.

Home Composting Workshop - Saturday March 24, 10 a.m. to noon. This workshop will cover the basics of building an outdoor compost pile using food scraps, leaves, grass clippings and other yard waste. Learn how easy it is to create "black gold" to naturally fertilize plants. Participants will leave with a complete understanding of the methods and materials needed for success and how to avoid the pitfalls. Take home some free "black gold" for one's own garden. Space is limited so call to pre-register. Cost is $15 per family for Friends of Holly Hill Farm members, $20 per family for non-members.

Jeepers Peepers - Saturday, March 31, 7 to 8:30 p.m. Everyone knows the loud chirping sound heard after dusk around wetland areas in late March is the sound of spring peepers. Come to Holly Hill Farm to experience the roar of spring peepers as attendees hike to the Ice Pond after dark, and learn about these tiny tree frogs and hear them at close range. All ages are welcome, but dogs are not invited on this walk as the group needs to be still and quiet at the pond's edge for best results. Call to pre-register. Fee: $5 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, maximum $15 per family; $8 for non-members, maximum $24 per family.

Salamanders on the Move - Come to the farm to learn about the life in a vernal pool and to observe the annual trek of salamanders into vernal pools for their mating season. Temperature and weather play an important part in the timing of the salamanders' move to vernal pools so three possible dates have been set aside for this program: Friday, March 16, 23 or 30, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. All ages are welcome, but dogs are not invited on this walk as people need to be very still and quiet to not disturb the salamanders. Fee: $5 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, maximum $15 per family; $8 for non-members, maximum $24 per family. Call to pre-register.

Woodcock Watch - Friday March 30, 7 to 8:15 p.m. Join others for a spring woodcock walk with farm owner and resident Jean White. This little migratory bird with large eyes and a long bill frequents moist woodlands and looks for open fields to perform his dance which starts with a "preent" sound on the ground for about a minute. This is followed by a spiral dance 50 to several hundred feet above ground while creating a twittering sound with his wings. He then descends and lands on the point of departure. The sequence is then repeated, often for up to 45 minutes. This program is best suited for adults. Fee: $10 for members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, $15 for non-members.

Cohasset hasn't seen last of Coughlin

Terminated town manager sticks around

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"As a concerned citizen of Cohasset, nothing is stopping me from speaking out, and they can't ban me as a citizen from attending selectmen meetings."
Mike Coughlin

Michael Coughlin might have been fired as Cohasset's town manager, but he's made it clear that he isn't going anywhere.

Although the Board of Selectmen voted Monday night to adopt a final resolution to remove Coughlin without cause, Coughlin said that he plans to continue to "fight for the citizens of Cohasset" in some capacity, both as a citizen of the town (Coughlin moved to Cohasset when he got the town manager job last summer) and as a practicing attorney.

Legally speaking, he also intends to fight against the Town of Cohasset, as he plans to file a whistle-blower lawsuit against the Board of Selectmen and Water Commission.

The removed town manager made waves earlier this week when he issued a press release stating his intent to run for the open seat on the Water Commission against incumbent Leonora Jenkins. Coughlin has since backpedaled on this statement. He said Tuesday that there are "legal and moral issues" that would keep him from serving on the water commission if he ends up engaging the board in a lawsuit.

Still, Coughlin said, "My fight on behalf of the citizens of Cohasset might take many forms... As a concerned citizen of Cohasset, nothing is stopping me from speaking out, and they can't ban me as a citizen from attending selectmen meetings."

The removed town manager confirmed that he plans to take the selectmen and water commissioners to court, since he believes his firing has to do with his opposition of the water department's request for proposals (RFP) for a new water contract. Coughlin filed a complaint with the Inspector General's office and

UPDATE

Field of Honor returns for sixth year

What
Once again The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 118 of Cohasset, will post hundreds of United States Flags in a poignant display honoring local veterans. The Field of Honor recognizes the veterans who have so valiantly served our country to protect and preserve our freedom.

When
For the sixth straight year, the flags will fly from the lawn facing the Veterans Memorial which itself will be encircled by the flags of the 50 states. Residents of Cohasset and the surrounding area will experience this inspiring display of flags from May 19 to June 6 as the Stars and Stripes flutter proudly atop eight-foot poles set in ordered lines. This touching memorial is free to the public.

Speaker
This year's keynote speaker at the Healing Field dedication on May 19 will be WWII veteran and former POW Robert G. Noble.

SELECTMAN'S SEAT

Race likely

Gjesteby plans to run against incumbent Carr

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

At 83-years-old, Martha Gjesteby is an avid runner. The board member of the Cohasset Community Garden Club said that she runs a mile and a half every morning at 5:30. She's no stranger to running for political office, either. Gjesteby pulled nomination papers on Tuesday, two days before the deadline to do so. She plans to run against the current selectmen chair, Edwin "Ted" Carr, who pulled papers last month.

The town election is set for Saturday, May 19. Earlier this month, Gjesteby submitted a "to do" list for the selectmen as a letter to the editor.

Having served nine years previously on the Board of Selectmen and on several other boards, including the School Committee, Capital Budget and Planning Board, Gjesteby is ready to run for an elected position again.

There's a reason Gjesteby is throwing her hat in the ring: "I think seats should be contested," she said on the phone Wednesday, her birthday. "I hoped that many people would run, but there doesn't seem to be anyone else running."

Gjesteby believes it's time for a shakeup among the selectmen.

"I've been very concerned with what's going on," she said. "I feel that things are just a little too upsetting for the community right now... I feel [elected officials] should do positive things for the town; it's part of service."

Gjesteby said that she hopes to see better cooperation between town board members.

Peter Hinman

Peter Hinman is named the winner of Mr. Skipper Night, held Friday (March 16) at the Cohasset High School Auditorium. For more photos, see page 25. PHOTO/K.A. MACDONALD

Name: Peter Hinman.

Occupation: Senior at CHS and 2012 Mr. Skipper.

Best day of your life: After I won Mr. Skipper last Friday, I found out the next day that I had gotten into the University of New Hampshire, which is the college that I have wanted to go to since I was four years old. That was pretty cool.

Best vacation: Going out to Nantucket in the summer...nothing beats that!

Favorite season: Fall because that is when hockey and football starts. I also like the cooler temperatures.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving when my whole family gathers around.

Favorite junk food (or meal): Cheese pizza. Lynwood Cafe in Randolph has the best pizza I ever tasted! (My grandparents live in Randolph and I lived there until I was 10).

Best magazine: Sports Illustrated and ESPN magazine.

Best movie (or actor): Matt Damon in the "Bourne Identity" series.

Best TV show: "King of Queens."

Best music, group, or artist: Country Music. Brad Paisley is my favorite artist.

Pet peeve: People who chew with their mouths open.

Fun fact: I am the youngest of six; I have five older sisters.

Goal: To get through college and do the best I can afterwards.

Person you'd most like to meet: Tom Brady.

Biggest worry: I don't worry; I live day by day.

Best part of Cohasset: The access to the water is amazing. A lot of my family does not live by water; they love it every time they come down.

Water RFP Public Forum is March 26

On Monday, March 26 at the Middle/High School Auditorium, the Water Commission will be hosting an information session regarding the upcoming contract renewal.

The commission will be discussing all options for the water company, including the proposed concession contract, and the process leading up to a likely change in operators on June 30. The forum will begin at 7 p.m. and will include a short presentation followed by an extensive Q&A period. All are encouraged to attend.

Veterans agent hours, number

Interim Veterans Agent Garrett Hunt has an office above Sovereign Bank at Cohasset Plaza (380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Suite F). Hunt's regular office hours are Monday and Friday from 10 a.m. to noon and Wednesday from 4 to 6 p.m.

The best way to reach Hunt outside of office hours or to make an appointment is by calling 781-635-4407. The number is also listed on the outside of the building, front door at the street level

Mariner drop box at Tedeschi's

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

Cohasset fire crews break down the hoses after quickly containing a garage fire on King Street on Monday morning. STAFF PHOTO/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

Fire contained to garage

On Monday (March 19) at 10:13 a.m. the Cohasset Public Safety Center received a 911 call from the resident at 312 King St. reporting there was smoke in the basement and the smoke detectors were going off.

Cohasset Engine 2, Engine 1, and Ambulance 1, Car 2-0 Chief Robert Silvia, and Car 2-5 Assistant Chief John Dockray were dispatched to scene. Engine 2 arrived on scene and reported heavy smoke coming from the rear of a detached two-car garage with a barn in the rear of the building.

Members then stretched 200 feet of 1-3/4 inch hose line to the garage, made entry in the garage by opening one of the garage doors and discovered a heavy fire condition from in front of a motor vehicle in the garage. Firefighters then began an aggressive attack on the fire in the garage.

Chief Silvia then requested a second alarm once firefighters discovered the fire heavy fire condition in the garage. Additional assistance from Hingham, Scituate and Norwell fire departments responded to the scene to support Cohasset fire personnel. Units from Hull and Scituate provided station coverage during the incident. At 10:33 a.m. the fire was knocked down and units began to overhaul and check for extension.

"The all out on the incident was called at 13:12 hours," Dockray said. "The state Fire Marshal's office is currently investigating the cause of the fire. At this time, we do not have any monetary estimates of damage."

DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS

Clearing up water, Cat Dam

A few items reported in last week's Cohasset Mariner warrant clarification.

• Cat Dam

In the article on the MEPA (Massachusetts Environmental Protection Act) hearing on Cat Dam, we reported that a group of citizens, dubbbed the Environmental 20 (E-20), appealed a Notice of Intent (NOI) that had been approved by the Board of Selectmen. A member of this group said that the E-20 did not file an appeal, rather that another group of citizens appealed the selectmen's and Conservation Commission's decision last year. The E-20 originally opposed an NOI that was approved by former selectmen chair Karen Quigley last year and was eventually pulled; the E-20 supports the current NOI that was approved by the ConCom last July and subsequently appealed by the other citizen group. As we reported last week, the matter is currently under review by MEPA.

• Water shut-offs

The legal case discussed in last week's story on the water department's shut-off policy was dismissed. The case involved the town and Cohasset residents who opposed a cellular antenna on top of the Bear Hill Water Tank. Water commissioner Leonora Jenkins told the selectmen last week that the lawsuit cost $50K in legal bills. If the antenna had been installed, Jenkins said, the water department would have received $40K per year in income from the phone companies to help stabilize water rates. Jenkins also discussed the water department's payable and receivable numbers from the last fiscal year; we erroneously used the term "deficit" in the article. The Mariner regrets the error.

POLICE BEAT

Motorist could not pass vision test

Being summonsed for negligent operation

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

At 12:53 p.m., on Monday (March 12), police responded to an accident at Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street. Police said a 2011 Toyota RAV4, operated by a 64-year-old Marshfield woman, had stopped at the red light at the intersection when she was "rear-ended" by a 2008 Lexus ES350 operated by a 66-year-old Brookline man, who apparently did not see the vehicle.

Both vehicles were towed and police stopped traffic for about 35 minutes. There were no apparent injuries but investigation revealed the Brookline man did not have a Massachusetts license and his California license had been revoked because he could not pass the vision test. Police said he attempted to obtain a Massachusetts license but could not pass the vision test here either.

Police are summonsing the Brookline man to court for negligent operation, unlicensed operation and following too closely on a state highway. Police also filed an "immediate threat" with the Registry of Motor Vehicles. If the motorist is caught driving again, the penalty could include jail time.

Unlicensed

A 59-year-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation following a traffic stop at 7:05 p.m. on Tuesday (March 13). An officer on patrol on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) and lower King Street observed a black 1999 Oldsmobile SUV go through the stop sign at Crocker Lane. Police said a vehicle on 3A had to swerve to avoid a collision.

The officer stopped the Olds SUV that was being operated by a 59-year-old Cohasset man. Further investigation revealed that the motorist's license had been suspended. He is being charged with unlicensed operation and failure to obey a traffic signal on a state highway. His SUV was towed.

Minors with alcohol

Two Cohasset teens are facing charges of being minors in possession of alcohol following a traffic stop on Saturday (March 17) at 11:45 p.m. on Pleasant Street. An officer on patrol in the area of Pond Street saw the 2009 Nissan Murano, the boys were in, speeding up Clayspring Road. The officer pulled the car over on Pleasant Street and in plain view saw several empty beer cans rolling around in the car. There were also four unopened cans of beer, a 50-ml bottle of Bacardi rum and a 50-ml bottle of Tequila. The boys, both 17, were arrested and charged for being in possession of the alcohol. The driver is also charged with speeding and a junior operator violation. Police said the driver had had his license for less than six months and therefore was not allowed to have a passenger under 21. He could lose his license for up to 60 days, police said.

OUI arrest

An officer on patrol on South Main Street saw a 2011 Audi A3 approaching him on South Main Street that nearly hit the cruiser head-on. The officer turned around and observed the erratic operation of the car, pulling it over on North Main Street near the town common. The officer could smell alcohol coming from the vehicle. The 37-year-old Cohasset woman who was driving subsequently failed a series of field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest for operating under the influence of alcohol. She was also charged with failure to stay in marked lanes. Her car was towed.

Vandalism

At 36-year-old Brewster Road resident reported at 7:49 a.m. on Monday (March 12) that his mailbox had been damaged overnight. Police said the metal mailbox and wooden post that had snapped looked like they had been hit with a baseball bat. The mailbox and post were valued at about $150. Police canvassed the neighborhood but have no suspects.

Towed

An officer on patrol on Route 3A at around noontime on Monday (March 12) ran the plate on a 2008 Nissan pickup truck that had an expired registration sticker. The registry reported that the vehicle's registration had indeed expired. The officer pulled over the pickup that was operated by a 34-year-old Cohasset man. The truck, which was then towed, belonged to a construction company that police cited for not registering the vehicle. The citation carries a $100 fine.

Tree limb

At 11:35 a.m. on Friday, March 16, a caller reported that a large truck had struck a large, overhanging tree limb at Jerusalem Road and North Main Street. Police said the 2003 FedEx freight truck was operated by a 56-year-old Brockton man. The truck was too tall and did substantial damage to the tree, police said. The DPW cut up the limb and planned to have an arborist examine the tree. The truck did not have to be towed and the driver was not cited, police said.

Car break-in

A 38-year-old Hingham woman reported to police last Thursday (March 15) that her 2011 GMC Yukon SUV had been broken into while she was at the tennis club off Cedar Street. The window was smashed and missing were the contents of her pocketbook including a Louis Vuitton wallet, several bracelets, credit cards, $500 in cash and a cowhide shoulder bag. Police are investigating.

Shoplifting

Kit & Kaboodle consignment shop at Tedeschi Plaza called police at around 4:07 p.m. on Saturday (March 17) after a woman fled with a pair of Coach shoes from the store. The woman ran across Route 3A into the woods behind Shaw's Plaza. She was apprehended on Ox Pasture Lane, which is off Beechwood Street. The Cohasset K-9, Erik and Officer Patrick Reardon, were able to back track and find the shoes that she had tossed aside during the pursuit. The 41-year-old Salem, Mass., woman was arrested and charged with shoplifting under $100.

Dog bite

On Saturday (March 17) at about 8:30pm, a resident from Beechwood Street called police headquarters to report that the family's German shepherd had bitten her 10-year-old daughter. The girl sustained bite marks to her leg and hip area. The parents chose not to seek medical attention and to treat the child's wounds at home.

The Cohasset Animal Control Officer followed up and was able to determine that the dog was current with all of the necessary shots and was licensed in Cohasset. The dog had no history of biting people.

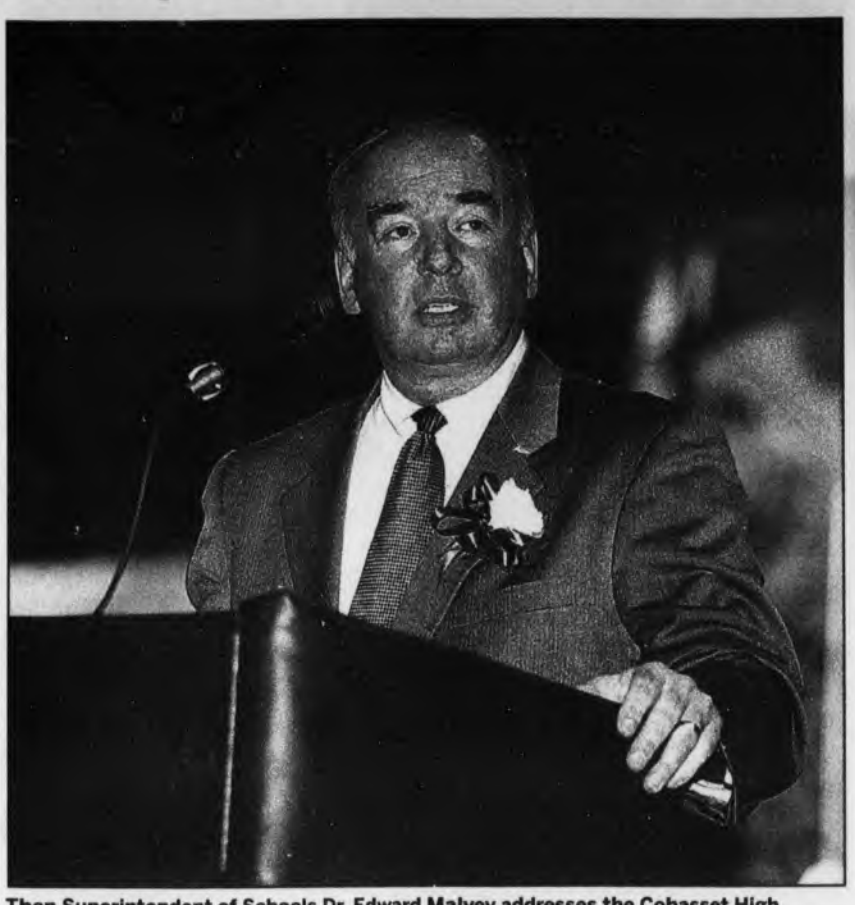
Practical joke

On Sunday (March 18) at about 6:30pm, a Cohasset resident reported suspicious activity behind the Lightkeepers House on Government Island. The caller reported that he observed a man, who was carrying a female's purse hide the purse behind a tree near the woods line at the rear of the Lightkeepers parking lot.

The concerned citizen recovered the purse and called police. Police determined that the purse belonged to a Cohasset woman and found her cell phone number in the handbag. When contacted, the woman said that she was the victim of a practical joke. Her friend had hidden her purse when she wasn't looking. When the friend went back to retrieve the purse, it was gone. Police called her several minutes later.

Annoying calls

A local veterinarian reported harassing phone calls to police last week from a Hingham woman who ordered special cat food that is on special order. Police said the customer has been calling the vet upwards of 15 times a day to check on the food.



Advice

A local woman went to the police station on Sunday to report that her almost 90-year-old father was not medically fit to drive and should not be driving. Police advised her to go through his physician and then follow up with the police.

FORMER COHASSET SUPERINTENDENT

Malvey named Weymouth interim school chief

Retired Cohasset School Superintendent Edward Malvey said he is fond of Weymouth and is looking forward to serving its schools as interim superintendent upon reaching a contract agreement with the school committee.

"I can't wait," Malvey said March 15, the day after Weymouth School Committee members unanimously agreed to appoint him to the post. "I'm sure things will work out. Weymouth is a great place and I have the energy to get going."

Weymouth School Committee Chairman Sean Guilfoyle said committee members would meet in executive session this week to decide on a contract offer to Malvey.

Malvey will replace current interim Superintendent Matthew Ferron, who has been leading the district for nearly a year since former Supt. Mary Jo Livingstone passed away. Ferron is scheduled to return to his duties as assistant superintendent after Malvey signs a contract, according to Guilfoyle.

Malvey said he has always heard great things about Weymouth.

"Being a seasoned veteran, I hope to put my skills to work for Weymouth over the next few months, while they search for a new superintendent," he said.

A 12-member search committee is reviewing resumes from approximately 30 candidates for the permanent superintendent's job.

Guilfoyle said Malvey indicated he would be able to serve the district for an additional amount of time if the committee does not hire a new superintendent.

Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents Executive Director Thomas Scott said Weymouth officials would have to receive a waiver from state Commissioner of Elementary and Secondary Education Mitchell Chester, to retain an interim superintendent for more than a year.

Malvey became Cohasset Superintendent of Schools in the fall of 1998 and retired six years later in 2004. He served as superintendent of schools in Griswold, Conn., before joining the school administration in Cohasset.

REGISTRATION IS UNDERWAY

Don't miss out on top road race

Cohasset Rotary sponsors annual event

By Linda Fechter
Special to the Mariner

For 36 years Cohasset has been home to one of the most scenic 6.2-mile road racecourses in New England. Register now at roadracebythesea.com to secure your spot at this year's race, which takes place on Sunday, April 1st at 1 p.m.

There is also a fantastic family event and fun walk...the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk by the Sea, which starts and ends at Sandy Beach at 10 a.m. that same day. Walkers are encouraged to register on line at roadracebythesea.com

This local race is possible because of support by our major sponsors Colospace, Graham Waste, Pilgrim Bank, DeScenza Diamonds, RW Rosano Corp., and Suburban Contract Cleaning. These companies and many, many others make the Road Race by the Sea a reality.

For more than 70 years the Cohasset Rotary Club has contributed thousands of hours of community service, provided more than $500,000 in scholarships to Cohasset High graduates, supported Fr. Bill's Place, the renovation of the Boy Scout Camp Squanto, and humanitarian projects around the world.

Rotary International is a worldwide organization of business and professional leaders. Rotary provides humanitarian service; encourages high ethical standards in all vocations; and helps build goodwill and peace in the world. For more information visit rotary.org

It used to be that registering on race day was the norm. This race is capped at1770—a number of historical significance —it's the year in which this town was incorporated and the event is well on its way toward reaching that field size limit. So if the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea 10K is on your list of "must do" events for 2012 please register now! Don't allow your hometown race to start with out you!!!

Visit roadracebythesea.com and don't forget to "Like" us on Facebook for the most up to date race information.

AROUND TOWN

'Chicago' is earning rave reviews

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Spring!

Hello Cohasset, what an unbelievable stretch of weather we have had! Nothing like Summer-like temperatures in the third week of March huh? Very weird but no complaints on my end and hopefully, it will keep on getting better as we go. I would love to hear some stories or photos of how everyone has spent the last few weeks getting ready to say good-bye to winter and welcoming in the Spring...

Bravo!

I need to let everyone know that I have not heard so much talk (and I mean GOOD TALK) around town for many, many years in regards to a show or event than I have after last weekend's opening shows of the Cohasset Dramatic Club's CHICAGO running March 23, 24, 25, 30, 31 and April 1 at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater! Remaining performances are Fridays and Saturdays at 7:30 and Sunday, March 25 at 2 p.m. and Sunday, April 1 at 4 pm (due to road closures surrounding the Cohasset Road Race).

This multi-talented cast will entertain you from start to finish. It's a show you don't want to miss!! Tickets are available at Paperscapes and Buttonwood Books, online at: www.brownpapertickets.com /event/222605, by reservation at 617-697-2115 or at the door one hour prior to each performance. For questions visit: www.cohassetdramaticclub.org. Get your tickets, your sitters, your spouse, your friends and GO SEE THIS SHOW!

Mr. Skipper

DVD's of the 2012 Mr. Skipper Pageant from March 16th are now available to purchase for $20 each. To order a copy please call Shaun Galvin at 781-424-2197(cell) or email your request to shaun_galvin@yahoo.com

Requests can also be mailed with a check for $20 per DVD to Shaun Galvin P.O. Box 526 Hingham, MA 02043.

Yard sale

Save your Spring cleaning treasures! Scituate Animal Shelter volunteers will be collecting donations of your new or gently used household items in preparation for the HUGE Yard Sale April 14-15. Items may be dropped off at the Knights of Columbus Hall, Route 3A, Scituate during the following times: Wednesday March 28: 6pm-8pm, Friday March 30: 10am-12pm, Saturday March 31: 10am-2pm, Sunday April 1: 11am-1pm and Saturday April 7: 10am-2pm.

Items which are not accepted are: TVs, computers or computer accessories, exercise or ski equipment, large furniture, clothing, used bedding or damaged/broken items.

Proceeds from the Yard Sale will benefit the Scituate Animal Shelter, an independent, non-profit animal shelter which serves the greater South Shore community and beyond. More details, call (781) 544-4533.

Hoop games

Come join the fun at the "Cohasset Basketball Jamboree" to celebrate a fantastic Boys and Girls Rec/Travel season! There will be dribble relays, shooting, agility, and lay-up contests for Grades 1-8, a "Coaches" shooting contest, some "Parent vs. Player" games for Grades 5-8, food, face painting and so much more. All of this will take place at the Cohasset High School Gym on Sunday, April 1st from 3-4 p.m. for grades 1-4 and 4-6 p.m. for grades 5-8. If you would like to play in the grades 5-8 "parent vs. player game" or are interested in volunteering for the event, please email cohassetballssignup@gmail.com to register. Otherwise, no need to sign up, just bring the kids and have fun!

Swim Center

With the warm weather this week, we are all starting to think about summer! The Cohasset Swim Center is gearing up for its best season yet and is seeking applications for a pool director, guards, swim instructors, and front desk staff. We are looking for personable, outgoing, fun individuals that are ready to help make this summer a great one for all our members.

Full and part time positions are available. Weekend only staff is also an option. Lifeguards need to have or be willing to get lifeguard certification this spring and the director and swim instructors should have or be willing to get WSI certification. Please log onto cohassetswimcenter.com to download an application.

That is the news Cohasset for this week. Get it all to me next week no later than 5:00 pm and you will see it appear on Friday, March 30! Have a fantastic week.

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

Treat of Beethoven, Liszt and Shostakovich

ROY HARRIS

The next Atlantic Symphony Orchestra performance – Saturday, March 31 — is the height of its concert season: a Masterworks Gala Festival. And the evening at Duxbury's beautiful Performing Arts Center will feature some high spots indeed.

From the 7:30 p.m. opening strains of Beethoven's majestic Leonora overture No. 3, the audience is in for a treat.

The centerpiece of the event is the return of Hung-Kuan Chen – who captivated the ASO audience with a virtuosic performance at Jordan Hall last year – to play the breathtaking Franz Liszt Piano Concerto No. 1. For the renowned pianist it is his South Shore debut.

"I am thrilled that we are able to share a performance with the South Shore residents featuring a world class artist," ASO Music Director Jin Kim says of Chen. "For those of you who may be unfamiliar, he is a towering figure in the world of classical music today. His artistry and technique continue to transform audiences throughout the world."

The final component of the evening, the Symphony No. 1 that introduced the brilliance of Russian Dmitri Shostakovich to the 20th Century music world at the tender age of 19, will "leave you captivated and breathless," according to Maestro Kim.

This year, the ASO is concentrating its Masterworks effort in one Duxbury concert, and has cancelled the March 30 Jordan Hall appearance that also had been on the original schedule.

In Duxbury, Kim will present a pre-concert talk at 7 p.m., in itself a highlight of ASO concert evenings.

Braintree's Thayer Academy Center for the Arts was the scene of the ASO's last event, the finals of the ASO Concerto Competition.

Four terrific young musicians – competitors had to be between 18 and 30 – faced off with a broad range of performance pieces. Winning both the judges' first prize and the Audience Choice award was 22-year-old Spanish violinist Francisco Garcia-Fullana, with his stirring rendition of the Jean Sibelius Violin Concerto. Garcia-Fullana is currently studying for his masters degree at the Julliard School in New York.

Taking second prize was Wenting Kang, a Taiwanese violist studying at the New England Conservatory. Third-place honors were shared by violinist Audrey Wright, also now at NEC, and marimba player Wei-Chen Lin, currently enrolled in Boston University's Doctor of Musical Arts program.

Musicians and program supporters lined up after the March 4 Atlantic Symphony Orchestra crowned violinist Francisco Garcia-Fullana (third from right) as winner of both the first prize and the Audience Choice award in the March 4 Concerto Competition finals. He stunned the Thayer Academy Center for the Arts with a stunning performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto. From left are ASO board president Turner Bledsoe; competition judge and program annotator Steven Ledbetter; marimba player Wei-Chen Lin and violinist Audrey Wright, who tied for third prize; violist Wei-Chen Lin, second prize winner; Garcia-Fullana; ASO Fanfare volunteer leader Vicki Quinn, and music director and competition judge Jin Kim. COURTESY PHOTO

As winner of the $1,200 first prize, Garcia-Fullana also will solo with the ASO at a concert next season. It has become a tradition for the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra over many years, giving a number of fine young performers a chance to show their skills in the spotlight – while giving ASO audiences a glimpse of the future.

We hope you can join us in Duxbury March 31 for our combination of 19th Century and 20th Century "hits." For tickets, visit the Atlantic Symphony website at www.atlanticsymphony.org, or call the office at 781-331-3600.

Roy Harris, a Hingham journalist and author, is a member of the Atlantic Symphony board of directors.

CEF Hosts Vegas Night— Come Play with the 'Pack'!

Get your jeans and your bling on; Friday night, March 30th the Cohasset Education Foundation will be celebrating all things Vegas at the Barn at the Red Lion Inn from 7 – 11:30pm.

This is the sixth annual Spring event hosted by the CEF, and the first ever Vegas Night. Music, light fare, and of course gambling will all be part of the offerings during what is sure to be a fun filled evening.

The first floor of the Barn will have Blackjack, Roulette, Craps gaming tables and a Money Wheel that will give guests a chance to win fabulous prizes while "raising the stakes" for the Cohasset public Schools.

For those looking for a bit more action, a high stakes Texas Hold'em poker tournament will take place on the second floor, beginning promptly at 8 pm. You do not need to be an expert to play; cheat sheets will be available at each poker table, and an introduction to the game will be provided before the real action begins.

In just over five years, through the incredible generosity of the community, the CEF has raised over $1.2 million in donations and made significant contributions to the educational experience for all children in the Cohasset Public Schools. Most recently, children at the Deer Hill School were fortunate to take part in an Author in Residence Writing Workshop Series, and students at the Middle School will soon experience robotics first hand with a new Robotics Module acquired for use in the Engineering Lab funded by the CEF in 2007.

Big Dreams and Bright Futures - join us for a fun, casual evening to celebrate and support our Cohasset Public Schools. Ticket prices start at $75 per person, increasing to $85 on March 26th. For more information and to purchase tickets, please visit www.cohasseteducation.org.

CSCR UPDATE

Research on tidal flushing of Harbor

CSCR, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, will host Cohasset's second State of the Harbor Forum at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, April 10, at Bancroft Hall/Lightkeepers Residence. The event is sponsored by Cohasset Rotary and is free to the public.

The second State of The Harbor public forum will feature research conducted by CSCR students and staff that speaks directly to the clear consensus voiced by the 75 residents who attended SOTH I-that Cohasset Harbor is suffering form serious ecosystem deterioration as the Cove inadequately flushes the increasing volume of fresh water in the Cove.

At the meeting, new research from the "Drifters Project" will be presented by some of CSCR's finest members on how the tidal currents and circulation patterns may be affecting the quality of the water in the Harbor. Discussion of the research will focus on how such patterns might be used to create a cleaner, healthier Harbor. CSCR cares deeply about the quality of health of the Harbor and hopes people will show their support by coming to the State of the Harbor public forum.

The discussion will take place among town leaders, residents, scientists and elected officials as strategies are debated and next steps designed to protect and nurture Cohasset Harbor are addressed.

Hometown writer references Cohasset in latest work

Author, George Laugelli, grew up in Cohasset.

Growing up in a seafaring town like Cohasset, it's no wonder author George Laugelli has had a lifelong fascination with "Moby Dick." The writer was so taken with the Herman Melville classic that he decided to craft his own sequel.

Laugelli's short novel, "Requiem for Ahab," follows the late Captain Ahab's son, Thomas, as he searches the Commonwealth for the sailor Ishmael in order to learn about his father's mysterious death and the madness that overtook him.

Laugelli set the beginning of his novella in 1850s Cohasset, where Ahab's widow, Hannah, moves with their son following Ahab's death. Like the character Thomas, Laugelli spent his childhood in Cohasset. After graduating from Cohasset High, the author attended Georgetown University and then spent two years in the army as a radio operator, one of which was spent in Vietnam in the First Infantry Division. Laugelli then moved to Washington, D.C. in 1970 to work for the federal government until his retirement in 2003.

Now, Laugelli lives in a suburb of D.C., where he concentrates on his writing and working in elections. He said that he still finds himself in Cohasset visiting family and friends "all the time."

While Laugelli has written other works of fiction with his own original characters, he said he was inspired to continue the story of "Moby Dick" because the book had such a profound effect on him.

"I guess 'Moby Dick' has always been one of my favorite books," said Laugelli in a phone interview from his home in Maryland. "I reread it from time to time."

Melville's mention of Ahab's son piqued Laugelli's interest.

"I began doing research and found out that someone else had written a whole series on the mother. I'm not the first person to notice that there are leftover pieces not fully developed" in "Moby Dick," Laugelli explained.

And so the Maryland-based writer thought he would pick up where Melville left off, taking the story of Ahab's surviving family to Cohasset.

"I thought it would be kind of fun," he said. "'Moby Dick' is just one of those great stories."

The author chose his hometown because of its proximity to Boston; it seemed like the type of place where Ahab's family would settle.

"There were a lot of Portuguese families living there who were descendents of mackerel fishermen," said Laugelli. "It was a good fit for me to have that part of the story there."

The author even used his childhood home on Stockbridge Street as inspiration.

"The house in the story is the house I grew up in. It's right on the water, overlooking the harbor... We'd walk out the front door and look right over the harbor with a marsh right behind us. It was a great place to grow up."

While Laugelli was familiar with Cohasset in the 1950s and has been working on a memoir about that, he had to research Cohasset in the 1850s and '60s for "Requiem." Both works "combine themes of growing up in New England," he explained. "The 1950s to my kids are as remote" as the 1850s were to him, Laugelli said with a laugh.

"Cohasset has a rich documented history. It's a fascinating period in time... like going back to 'the shire,'" the author said, comparing pre-Civil War Cohasset to the pastoral village in J.R.R. Tolkien's "Lord of the Rings" novels. The Civil War breaks out in the beginning of Laugelli's story, and Cohasset was firmly set against slavery, the author said.

"When I started 'Requiem,' I always had it in my mind that the son would grow up in time to be in the Civil War," said Laugelli of Ahab's son Thomas. "Cohasset was very, very strong for the war— the minute war was declared, they started sending volunteers."

The author's own experiences serving in Vietnam have informed his writing, Laugelli said.

"I arrived in Washington a month and a half before Kennedy was assassinated," said the writer. "It was a historical time. I was 18 and we were going to change the world. All of a sudden, everything changed on us. Along came the war, and everything went crazy."

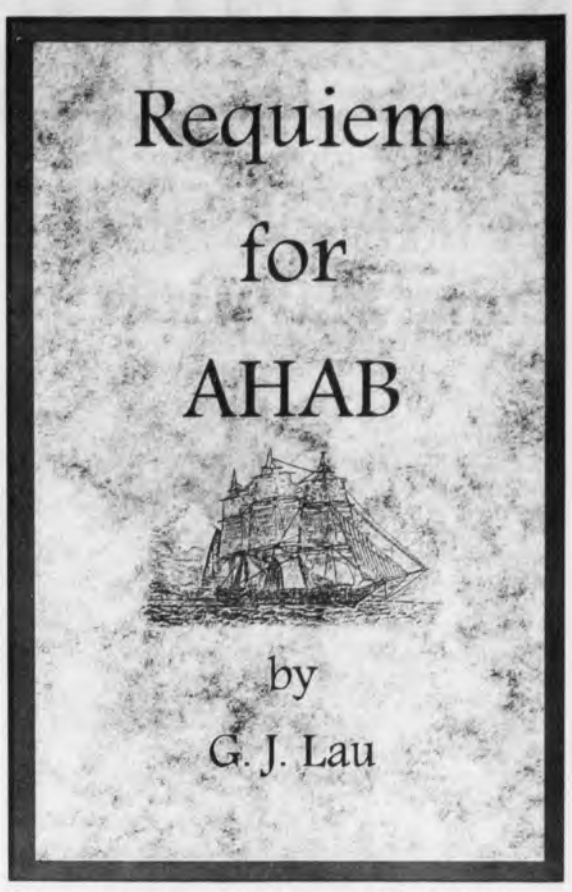
When writing, "a lot of those things resurface," Laugelli said.

Laugelli self-published his novella, and it's available for purchase online at Amazon.com. The author publishes under his pen name, G.J. Lau.

The decision to self-publish was an easy one, Laugelli said.

"It was a very comfortable option," the author explained, adding that his technical background in web design helped him utilize e-publishing. "There's a bit of technology you have to master."

Laugelli said that this is the way to go for writers who want to start selling their work in the online literary marketplace as quickly as possible.



"As an unknown writer, I felt I had a less-than-zero chance of being picked up by publisher or agent — I didn't want to spend another year chasing down an agent or publisher," Laugelli said. "I decided I would self-publish right off the bat."

At first, the author said he only sold his stories in e-book format, meaning the purchaser would pay for a PDF copy of the book. Now, he is offering paperbacks as well.

"There are a lot of people who don't want to read a book on a Kindle, Nook or laptop, so I have the paperback option as well."

Laugelli added that he tries to keep his prices reasonable. The "Requiem for Ahab" e-book sells for 99 cents, while the paperback version is $6.99.

"I'm not really in it for the money," Laugelli said of novel writing. "If someone wants to buy the paperback, I don't want price to be an obstacle."

George Laugelli's new book begins in 1850s Cohasset.

For the author, the joy of writing simply comes from the process. Laugelli said that while he spent many years working for the government, he has been writing "forever."

"I started working for the government in '67 and for 20 years was an editor of procedure manuals," said Laugelli. "Then I switched to computer in the '90s as a web designer and developer and started blogging."

While the writer said he was prolific when it came to blogging and essay writing, he didn't think he could write an entire novel until he sat down and did it. His first novel, "The Magpie's Secret," is 99,000 words. Laugelli said he approaches each work of writing by doing just a little at a time.

"It's just habit – an hour here, an hour there. Then you look back and have 99,000 words. Once you get into it, it's not work at all. Then you can't wait to see what comes next.

"It was a lot of fun," he said of working on "Requiem." "I really enjoyed the research aspect of it. Once I got into the story, it took on a life of its own. A lot of these stories kind of write themselves... you just have to trust in your writing instinct. For me, 'Requiem' was a significant step forward in the craft."

Ideally, Laugelli said that he would like to target his story of Ahab's son for the young adult market. With kids, said the author, "I think reading is alive and well."

OUR VIEW

Turning the page

Although it could fill several volumes — in terms of his service as Cohasset Town Manager — the Michael Coughlin chapter in the chronicles of Cohasset has come to a close. The Board of Selectmen unanimously voted to fire Coughlin on Monday night officially ending his six months of service.

A reader called us this week on an unrelated subject and during our conversation she mentioned Cohasset's incredible beauty as a major factor in what drew her to this town. However, due to controversy over a thorny issue involving her neighborhood she said her Cohasset "honeymoon" was definitely over.

We are not sure Coughlin ever had a honeymoon other than when he took charge when Tropical Storm Irene blew into town. In light of all that has been publicly aired since selectmen suspended Coughlin on Feb. 15, the relationship between Coughlin and his bosses was fractured and deeply troubled almost from the start.

The end of the Coughlin era as town manager sadly signals a lack of communication on many levels. There is no doubt plenty of blame all around.

Civility

This week both the Mariner editor and publisher of the TinyTown Gazette were invited before the Board of Selectmen to discuss its newly enacted Code of Civil Discourse and the role of the local media.

At the Cohasset Mariner, we have often preached in our editorials about the need for more civility – so much so, that one online commenter simply wrote "amen" after a recent editorial.

As we said during Tuesday's meeting, no one is against civility. However, we live in very fast-moving times where social media and the Internet are a big part of our lives. The World Wide Web is still a bit like the Wild West – a place that has not been fully "civilized."

Selectmen were hoping we could rein in those at the OK Corral by requiring online commenters to fully identify themselves, as we require with letters to the editor. We agree that when one puts his or her name and address on a letter, it has accountability. We believe that letters and online comments should be taken in that light. Letters, by their very nature, are more thoughtful and therefore, carry more weight.

We urge those who use online commenting to share their views to monitor themselves as well as the conversation to make sure comments stay on topic, offer insight, and stay away from personal attacks.

Civility, after all, is a shared responsibility.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.
Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.
If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LLETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Passing buck on civil discourse

At Tuesday night's BOS meeting both the Mariner and Tinytown Gazette were asked to implement policies aimed at controlling the tone of comments posted on their respective blogs.

It seems to me that the BOS is passing the buck when it comes to trying to improve civil discourse. While the Mariner and TinyTown Gazette have the responsibility to monitor any comments made on their respective blogs, the BOS equally have a responsibility to ensure that the discourse at their meetings be civil as well. Some of the comments made at various BOS meetings, as well as mannerisms displayed by people appearing at their meetings have been less than civil. Many people have displayed behavior that to be generous has been boorish at best. I'm not aware of anyone being admonished for their behavior, or at least not at the time it occurred. To address poor behavior after the fact is locking the barn door after the horse has escaped. Whether you liked Mike Coughlin or not, to have people making faces, yawning, and turning their backs while he spoke is not acceptable, and should have been addressed at the time they occurred. I think the BOS should ask anybody serving on either elected, or appointed boards to sign an agreement to maintain a sense of decorum at their meetings, and when they appear before other boards as well.

It's not just town board members that need to behave more appropriately. People can have disagreements without becoming vitriolic as well. To describe someone who doesn't share your opinion on an issue as "ill-informed" or "thick headed" in letters to the editor, or on blog postings does nothing to elevate the level of civility.

I'm not suggesting we all get together on the Common, hold hands and sing Kumbaya, but everyone, whether they are a private citizen, or a member of a town board needs to take a deep breath, and try to maintain a higher level of discourse. We have some serious issues to deal with in town, and no one benefits from the kind of nonsense that has been going on in the last few months.

Free speech is paramount

I want to thank to thank all that supported us through this ordeal. We won in the court of public opinion and I am confident that we will also win in a court of law. This is my future.

During my ordeal and throughout my public life there has always been a healthy exchange about ideas in the media, editorials, cartoons and blogs. This past week Selectmen took the usual and arrogant approach to ask the media to restrain the free exchange of ideas by requiring individuals to identify themselves and suggesting that the media exercise some control over what the BOS believes to be negative. They also sought to bring their view to the local owners of the newspapers who just happen to be Cohasset residents. This is a scary proposition in a free society.

I am not saying I like the comments from people who hide behind pen names. In fact in the last couple of weeks, I have challenged them to come out behind the camouflage and use their true names. Nevertheless, such comments are a fact of life in a democracy. I took an oath as an officer in the military to defend such a right, also as a public prosecutor for the commonwealth and as a local municipal official for the great community we call Cohasset.

In all of my prior communities, blogging is a standard practice in both large newspapers and small. Free speech is the cornerstone of my democracy. Harry Truman once said about politics: if you can't handle the heat, get out of the kitchen. In my political life both long ago and just recently, I have had to life with comments and cartoons that have both supported and vilified me. It is the price we pay for the great honor of public service.

For Selectmen to complain or object about the rigors of public scrutiny and criticism they receive from the press, blogs or cartoons is an indictment and challenge the very freedoms that make this country, this commonwealth and this community of Cohasset great.

Response to water board statements

Two statements by Water Commissioners appearing in last week's Mariner are revealing about how the Commissioners have failed to accurately portray their activities to us.

The first was by Commissioner Jenkins from her remarks at the Coughlin hearing. "We couldn't cover our expenses because our delinquent accounts were much larger than what our expenses were." She had just previously stated, "For two years we've had to go to town meeting to ask for money because we've had a huge amount of delinquent accounts..."

One would hope that an enterprise which extends credit in the normal course of business would have a little more sophisticated approach to receivables than simply facing the same problem year after year and solving it by going to town meeting with their hand out.

They should be telling us what steps they took after the first year to avoid repeating the same problem in the second. If it is a chronic situation, why isn't it being budgeted as a recurring expense? Most important, if the Water Department is a totally independent entity, why are they looking to the town to bail them out at all?

The second comes from Commissioner DeCaprio's commentary "Concession contract best meets water needs" where he states, "This water commission is an extension of the Water Planning Group..." This is a stunning revelation given that this group hasn't even met once this year and that DeCaprio has just spent thousand and thousands of the town's dollars hiring separate counsel to prove that the commission is totally independent of the town and free to issue its own RFPs and otherwise conduct its business as it chooses.

One can only guess that Commissioner DeCaprio now feels safer in dealing with a more receptive town administration and that he finds it advantageous to signal to the RFP bidders that the good faith and credit of the town back the RFP; an issue which might have been troubling to some of the bidders.

By making these statements our Water Commissioners continue to reveal how they play both sides of the street depending on what stance they wish to take and why there is so much public confusion, if not distrust, as to exactly what they are scheming.

POLITICAL NOTES

Democratic campaign kick-off party

Cohasset and South Shore Democrats and Independents are invited to a friendly, casual potluck party from 7 to 9 p.m., on Saturday, March 31, at the home of Helene Lieb, 18 Deep Run, Cohasset.

Come hang out with like-minded locals, meet new people, and see how to get involved in the Warren and Obama campaigns.

Optional donations of $20 and up will be collected for the Elizabeth Warren campaign. The goal of this "friend-raiser" is to put everyone's heads together, organize locally for the state and national elections in November and have some fun.

Bring an appetizer or beverage, and feel free to bring a friend. Contact Ronnie McMorris at rmcm0121@aol.com or Joe Stanganelli at jstanganelli@hblaw.com for more information and to register.

HEALTH NOTES

Checking out travel tips

STEVE BOBO

Careful planning for a getaway, short or long will make any vacation better, particularly if your plan covers the unforeseen occurrences that may get in the way of an otherwise enjoyable interlude. If you're thinking about a getaway this spring, it's also a good time to think about some things that may help you stay healthy.

The Center for Disease Control web site http://www.cdc.gov/travel.htm has a comprehensive summary of travel health tips. It provides information for the specific destination, giving applicable travel alerts together with necessary vaccinations, a listing of prevalent diseases, tells about mosquito and tick protection, warnings about safe food and water. There's even a green sheet ranking the health and safety of individual cruise ships; altogether necessary, nowadays.

It's suggested that you put together a Travel Health Kit. You should pack your prescribed medications, including an antibiotic to self-treat moderate to severe diarrhea. In addition, bring an over-the-counter medication to prevent diarrhea, sunscreen, insect repellent and alcohol-based hand gels containing at least 60 percent alcohol to wash your hands if soap and clean water are not readily available. A popular new health accessory is a lozenge taken in water a few days before getting on an airplane, called Airborne Formula available from pharmacies. Allegedly, it provides protection against airborne illnesses transmitted in aircraft. Remember to take sunscreen if you're going to a warmer climate. Remember, a health kit is useful only if it is available. It should be carried with the traveler at all times, e.g., in carry-on baggage and on excursions. All medications, especially prescription medications, should be stored in carry-on baggage, in their original containers with clear labels. With heightened airline security, sharp objects will have to remain in checked luggage. Oh, and bring your regular medications if you have any. Be sure to take a list of your prescriptions. Also, they have these pill organizer boxes with columns of compartments for days in the week and rows for times in the day.

Check insurance for travel restrictions. Some policies restrict coverage in travel situations. Also make sure you know where to get your health medical care at your travel destination.

Be sure you find out what you can carry on an aircraft before you pack and prepare for your trip. There's a maximum 3 ounce restriction about liquids and gels in carry-ons including toothpaste that one may carry on. At least there was, last time we checked.

Do you have both the required and appropriate pill organizer boxes s for the country you are going to?

For your destination, be sure to have the relevant Travel Warnings and Public Announcements concerning civil unrest and other conditions as well as Consular Information Sheets with information about travel requirements such as new or unusual entry or currency requirements.

And when you pack, don't forget handkerchiefs, warm and cool clothing, hats, the right shoes, sun glasses, bathing suit, etc.

And for cooking while traveling: Sometimes you may have to cook in unfamiliar places. Don't forget the basics of getting meats above 165 degrees Fahrenheit; keeping dairy products cool, and being very careful about kitchen hygiene.

Finally, don't bring back any unwanted souvenirs, and if you feel the least bit unusual, see a doctor right away to be sure that you're not carrying something contagious. Have a good trip!

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

COMMENTARY

Now they want a code a civility?

KAREN QUIGLEY

Who are the selectmen to summon the press before them like children before the principal? Was the purpose to humiliate and intimidate?

After months of incivility where the selectmen remained silent as town officials interrupted meetings, spoke in an abusive and derogatory manner, ranted, and disparaged others verbally, in the press, and anonymously on blogs, the Board of Selectmen, finding itself the target of the public's criticism and outrage, seeks to lower the tenor of discourse. Really?

There was only one instance when the now aggrieved selectman objected to this intolerable behavior: immediately after which the chair apologized in a letter to the editor in the Mariner. Perhaps they weren't offended when the vitriol was achieving their goal without their having to get their hands dirty. Oh, was that uncivil?

The latest example of their arrogance occurred Tuesday night as the selectmen summoned the Tinytown Gazette and Cohasset Mariner and attempted to place responsibility for incivility on the press.

However, the hostile environment that exists in town hall and in the public is directly attributable to the selectmen's blind acceptance of rancorous behavior by a few very vocal officials, spouses and cronies. It was almost exclusively these individuals who wrote anonymously and whose postings and quotes to the press were the most malicious. (Yes, we know who was behind all those cute little email addresses.)

Do the selectmen plan to chastise them? No, they've issued a Code of Civility but are not requiring that anyone, except the press and the "small t" town employees, agree to uphold it: especially not in writing.

Who are the selectmen to summon the press before them like children before the principal? Was the purpose to humiliate and intimidate? It certainly seemed so especially when the chair alluded to the fact the Mariner's editor's boss lives in town. This appeared to be a not-so-thinly-veiled threat.

When leaving [the meeting to fire Coughlin on Monday night], the Mariner's cartoonist was verbally assaulted by a selectperson's spouse who then had to be dragged away by a bystander.

The press did attempt to control the situation. TinyTown Unleashed initiated a policy requiring individuals to use their real names; the Mariner challenged anonymous bloggers to "own their words." Some did; others did not and fell silent. The selectmen continued to do nothing.

This is, yet again, an example of what this board does best: feign ignorance and place the blame on others.

FOR THE RECORD

Spend some of your summer with us

GREGORY MATHIS

When the six or eight weeks with us are done, the intern will have newspaper clips with their bylines on stories and website links to add to their resume and portfolio.

(Editor's note: This column was originally printed the week of Dec. 8, 2010, but is as relevant today as it was then).

Interns and internships in general sometimes get a bad rap.

Depending on what field of work you may want to go into or where you do your internship, your experience can be quite different.

For the unluckiest of interns, it could be a nightmare where job duties involve getting coffee for the boss (and the rest of the staff), standing at a copy machine for hours and stapling documents all day long. Some internships might be based on shadowing various employees and watching them as they work, but you don't get an opportunity to work yourself. For those looking to do a little more with their time, there are internships that give you actual work-related experience.

As much as I like coffee, our internships involve real, practical work.

We have internships available year-round, although most of the candidates prefer the summer. It makes a lot of sense because many students go away to school and are home for the summer. Summer internships tend to last a little longer than winter or spring semesters, which is good because the longer an intern is with us the more work they get to do. Interns cover meetings, write features, cover sporting events and even shoot pictures. There may also be some website work involved, and multimedia opportunities including shooting and editing video.

When the six or eight weeks with us are done, the intern will have newspaper clips with their bylines on stories and website links to add to their resume and portfolio.

There are very few restrictions for an internship. First, the student — whether in college or high school — needs to be getting credit or it needs to be a graduation requirement. We need proof of that from an adviser or guidance counselor at the school. As mentioned above, the intern will be out and about, reporting and writing stories and taking pictures. So the candidate should have reliable transportation.

While most of our interns are college students, we have worked with high school students as well. We ask the same thing of all our interns — that they commit to the program, contribute while learning new skill sets and stick with it to the end.

The internship program has also given us a chance to get to know some hard-working individuals who have an interest in writing and the journalism business. We've had a couple of cases where we've been able to hire former interns for entry-level reporting positions or they've ended up doing some substantial freelance work for us.

If you're a student looking for an internship or know a student who might be interested in one, please let me know. You can reach me by e-mail at gmathis@wickedlocal.com. Due to limited space in some of our offices, we generally have to cap the number of interns we accept for any given period. While we'd like to accommodate most applicants, the reality is we sometimes have to go through an interview process and accept the interns we believe can meet the expectations we've set and succeed in our work environment.

Smoke-free units in elderly housing

State Rep. Garrett J. Bradley, D-Hingham, announced that the House of Representatives on Feb. 29 gave initial approval to a bill allowing local housing authorities to designate smoke-free buildings or non-smoking units in elderly housing complexes.

The bill, (H.2110), filed by Bradley, also aims to phase in non-smoking buildings or floors in elderly housing. Regulations governing local authorities are administered by the State Department of Housing and Community Development.

"What we are trying to do is establish a uniform policy for DHCD to try to get to," Bradley said. "Over time, as residents move out and new ones move in, local officials would have the option of designating certain units on a floor or building as non-smoking. Given the often low turnover rate, this process will take years to achieve," he said.

Bradley said he filed his ill several years ago after e was contacted by a senor citizen with a lung impairment. He said the bill would gradually establish smoke-free areas in a manner that respects the rights of existing tenants.

A similar bill sponsored by Rep. Theodore Speliotis, D-Danvers, would have the Massachusetts Department of Housing and Community Development establish a policy, working with local housing authorities, designate at least one residential building within a housing complex as smoke-free. Any housing authority property with more than 100 units would be required to designate 20 percent of the units as smoke-free. Housing complexes with fewer than 100 units would be exempt from the regulations.

Some local housing authorities have reportedly established informal regulations, however having a law in place would standardize procedures and encourage the use of smoke-free buildings or floors statewide.

The legislation would still require final approval by the House, Senate and Governor.

Refinancing of town bonds

During Tuesday night's Board of Selectmen meeting, Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski recommended that the town refinance its existing bonds.

Milanoski, along with Finance Director Mary Gallagher and Capital Budget Chairman Steve Gaumer, recently met with the town's bond counsel.

"Based on conservative estimates, we believe we will be able to save the taxpayers three-quarters of a million dollars," Milanoski said. "Over $750,000 in savings will go to the homeowner. Over the life of the bond, the individual homeowner will see a reduction in their excluded debt payments."

Refinancing will affect the town's bond rating, Milanoski said. "This will lower our debt ratio to what is paid by the homeowners, and a lower debt ratio is something the bond agencies look favorable to; it's just one of the elements in their review."

But the most important thing is that taxpayers getting money back through bond refinancing, Milanoski explained. The refinancing process will take approximately six weeks.

Acting town manager extended

Milanoski to serve for 15 months

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

On March 20, the selectmen voted unanimously to keep Milanoski on as interim for 15 months, pending negotiations. Milanoski will receive a performance review in six months.

Cohasseters need not wonder who is going to be their next town manager. The selectmen appointed an acting town manager last month, and decided on Tuesday night to keep him on for the next 15 months.

Last month, the selectmen appointed resident Michael Milanoski as acting town manager while Coughlin was suspended.

Milanoski, an economic development consultant, chairs the Governance Committee/town manager search committee that recommended Coughlin for the town manager job last year and also serves as an associate member of the Conservation Commission. The selectmen voted to pay him a $2,000 weekly stipend from March 7 to March 20.

On March 20, the selectmen voted unanimously to keep Milanoski on as interim for 15 months, pending negotiations. Milanoski will receive a performance review in six months.

The board met in an executive session after their public meeting to discuss Milanoski's salary.

The officials said that they hoped to "bring stability back to town government" by retaining Milanoski for over a year before beginning a town manager search.

Despite meeting the approval of other board members, including members of the Advisory and Capital Budget Committees who applauded Milanoski's budget presentation and communications with the boards, Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said last month that anyone who serves as interim is exempt from being hired as a permanent town manager.

Keeping Milanoski onboard for the interim will help the town "get through this annual budget and this Town Meeting, next year's annual budget and the next Town Meeting" and "allow enough time to get back on track to search for a new town manager one year from now," said selectmen chair Ted Carr.

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she thought a shorter-term contract, perhaps for nine months, would be more appropriate.

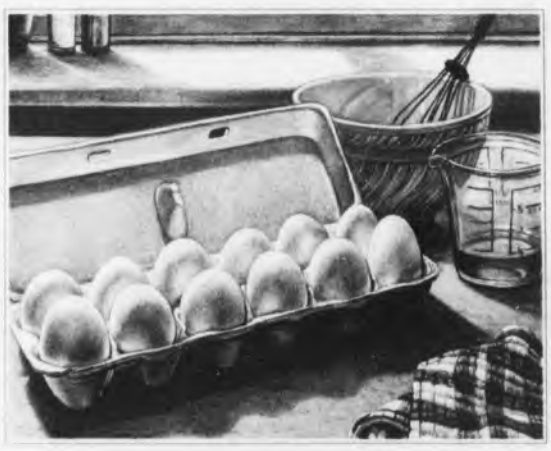
"I'm trying to look through a political lens," Kennedy said, addressing rumors that Milanoski is the board's "heir apparent and we've had you waiting in the wings."

Carr said, "That is absolutely not the case."

Kennedy said that the selectmen "did look at other options" for an acting town manager. Before appointing Milanoski during their Feb. 17 meeting, the selectmen discussed having Police Chief Mark DeLuca, Fire Chief Robert Silvia, or Jennifer Oram, assistant to the town manager, act as interim to sign off on warrants, payroll and purchase orders. The board concluded that these employees had enough work to do, and asked Milanoski, who was in the audience, if he was willing to volunteer.

Kennedy said she was pleased with the board's selection.

"We have accomplished more in the last three weeks since May," she said. "I'm so thrilled you're here and I would love you to be here forever."



Milanoski agreed to continue serving as acting town manager.

"Not knowing what the future is of the town, stability is needed on all different levels," Milanoski said. He suggested a six-month review "to determine whether this is working or not working. At least there will be some stability in management, which we need to pick up the pieces."

Advisory Committee chair Peter Pescatore gave his thoughts on the matter of retaining Milanoski.

"In a short period of time, Michael Milanoski has displayed tremendous acumen and good management style, said Pescatore. "I am personally very much in favor of having him around... too bad you can't be town manager permanently."

Once upon a time, there were a dozen eggs.

What's a dozen? a little boy asked his father. A dozen is twelve, his dad said, count them. The boy counted: one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, a lemon, twelve! That's right! said the dad. And do you know where eggs come from? he asked. Yes! shouted the boy. Where? said Dad. The store! Dad laughed and laughed. He couldn't argue with that one.

Town Manager Michael Coughlin fired

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"Coughlin, a good and talented man, is a bad fit for Cohasset."
Selectman Paul Carlson

After a month of speculation around town, the Board of Selectmen followed through with their resolution to remove Town Manager Michael Coughlin without cause.

On Monday, March 19, the selectmen voted unanimously to terminate Coughlin seven months after he was hired.

Coughlin's removal is effective Tuesday, March 20; he was suspended with pay on February 15. Coughlin's annual salary was $115,000. Per his contract, Coughlin was entitled to four months' severance pay, along with payment for any unused accrued vacation time. The Board of Selectmen reportedly offered him eight months' severance, but Coughlin will not receive a severance package because he did not sign a waiver agreeing not to sue the town, according to officials. His attorney Douglas Louison said during a public hearing on the town manager last week that if fired without cause, Coughlin would have grounds to file a whistleblower's lawsuit against the town.

During Monday's meeting, the selectmen reiterated their reasons to remove Coughlin: failure to communicate with the selectmen, inability to work cooperatively with town board members, and disagreement with the selectmen as to how town matters should be handled.

Selectmen chair Ted Carr said that he was "very troubled" by many decisions Coughlin made as town manager, and that he wished Coughlin had kept the selectmen better informed. Among the issues are 10 employee contracts the selectmen voted last week to reject; prior to his removal, Coughlin approved contractual changes and raises for certain town employees that were inconsistent and should have been fully vetted, according to the selectmen. During last week's public hearing, Coughlin said these changes were under his purview but apologized for not informing the board. He added that he approved these changes as an attempt to provide job security and stability to the town employees.

The board shared during Tuesday's meeting that due to changes in the contract, the board is now facing trouble with an unfair labor charge from one of the unions. However, the contract issue was not one of the original reasons stated in the selectmen's original resolution to remove Coughlin; the matter was brought to their attention during Coughlin's suspension.

The selectmen also said that they felt Coughlin created a divisive atmosphere between town board members and town employees.

"I'm trying to understand how we got here," said Carr, adding that when he suggested Coughlin undergo a professional review months ago, Coughlin said that under the Cohasset Town Manager Act, he was not subject to a review until the selectmen set goals and objectives for him.

Carr said he was also dismayed that Coughlin shared many of his initiatives with the local media before disclosing his decisions to the selectmen. The chairman shared examples of letters to the editor Coughlin wrote and blogging he did on the TinyTown Gazette's website.

Carr said that one commentary of Coughlin's in particular, written back in December, effectively told the selectmen "in a not-so-friendly-way" to "stay out of his way."

Despite the issues, Carr said that he still considers Coughlin to be a close friend. Carr said that in Coughlin's defense, the removed town manager was treated "inappropriately" and "crappily" by several town board members.

Selectman Paul Carlson said that he was disappointed with how Coughlin handled last week's public hearing.

"Last week, Michael Coughlin wasted an opportunity to convince me that he could or would work more collaboratively if we retained him," said Carlson. "Coughlin, a good and talented man, is a bad fit for Cohasset."

Selectman Diane Kennedy read a prepared statement using a sports analogy, which Coughlin has been known to favor in his own rhetoric.

Kennedy said that if "Team Cohasset" was the Patriots and Coughlin was Coach Bill Belichick, the selectmen were the Kraft family, the Patriot's owners.

"We have an obligation to the taxpayers in this town... as the Kraft family has a responsibility to the parking lot attendants and the Coke vendors and to season ticket holders. You can use us to make or broker relationships with the people in town. [Coughlin] did not want to do that," Kennedy said.

"I feel that trust has been broken in an unhealthy, unproductive, undermining and divisive relationship," she concluded. "It is not in the best interest of anyone in Cohasset."

Selectman Fred Koed concurred that he felt a loss of confidence and trust in Coughlin, citing again the contracts the removed town manager approved.

By not advising the selectmen on the contracts, "Michael Coughlin had chosen a path without transparency," said Koed. "In my 25 years in active in town government, including chairman of the Advisory Committee, Cohasset Housing Authority, Water Commissioner and Selectman, I have never seen so much turmoil created across so many boards as in the last six months since the town manager came onboard. It is great that the town manager worked so well with all the employees of Town Hall, but he also needed to effectively with the various other critical parts of our town government under the rules of our Town Manager Act and state law."

Selectman Leland Jenkins said he wanted to keep his comments short and sweet, and that he agreed with the other four selectmen and said that Coughlin had demonstrated an "inability to exchange information with the board of selectmen."

"Over the past six months, I saw a failure to respond to a selectman's role of setting goals, guidelines, policies and objectives," said Jenkins.

Coughlin responded to the selectmen's comments during a phone conversation on Tuesday.

Regarding Kennedy's Patriots analogy, Coughlin said, "The Board of Selectmen aren't the Kraft family because the Kraft family never rescinded the contracts for its starting team and fired the coach midseason when the team is winning, particularly how 'Team Cohasset' is winning with DOR [the Department of Revenue]."

On Carr's apology for not shielding Coughlin from other town officials' poor treatment, Coughlin said that he appreciated the chairman taking responsibility "for not protecting me" and further said that he feels this is the entire cause of "the communication issue."

Coughlin also said he believes the chairman and the rest of the board "suffer from political Alzheimer's" and fail to remember how much he communicated with them. He said that in particular, he met with Carlson and Carr and told them he would "recede some of my power to the board if they could put it in writing; they chose not to."

Coughlin also took issue with Carlson's comment on how last week's public hearing went.

"The board of selectmen shaped last week's hearing into a cross-examination rather than a conversation," said Coughlin.

Despite his firing, Coughlin, who moved to Cohasset when he took the job last summer, apparently plans to stick around town. He said in a press release emailed on Sunday that if fired, he intends to run for the open seat on the Water Commission (see related story). He would be running against Leonora Jenkins, who has served for the past year and is running again this year. Coughlin butted heads with the three water commissioners over their request for proposals for a new water contract.

Coughlin said he was buoyed by support from citizens during last week's hearing that encouraged him to run for either the Water Commission or Board of Selectmen. He has since rescinded his plan to pull nomination papers, but said that he hopes to continue to serve the town in some capacity.

"It is my intent to continue to service the community for which I hold the greatest affection," said Coughlin. "I will continue to fight for the people of Cohasset, albeit in a different role."

The removed town manager said that he still plans to file a whistleblower's lawsuit against the town.

"I won in the court of public opinion," said Coughlin. "I think I'll prevail in the court of law."

the State Ethics Board; the IG said last week that they saw no problems with the water commission's RFP for a 10-year concession contract. The RFP Coughlin sent them, however, was for a 20-year concession contract.

Water commission chair Peter DeCaprio said in an email Tuesday that the contract the IG reviewed was the same as the original contract Coughlin opposed; the only change was the length of the contract.

"The only differences in the two proposals were the term (10 vs. 20-year) and that we set a range around the annual fixed fee to the contractor," DeCaprio said.

Coughlin still plans to fight the process, saying that "as Cohasset's newest practicing attorney," he might also file a 10 taxpayer lawsuit in order to "put a speed bump" on the water contract.

DeCaprio said that 10 taxpayer lawsuits "are usually fought over unnecessary expense. Since [Coughlin] was the cause of all our unnecessary expense, I'm wondering what his basis is." The water commissioner said that these expenses included legal counsel costs that Coughlin billed to the water department and legal work surrounding the RFP that the commission had to do in order to hire an engineer.

These types of lawsuits, DeCaprio added, "try to stop 'unnecessary or illegal expenditures.' We haven't expended anything. The concession is a net inflow of cash. I hope he does challenge it."

Although Coughlin has now said that he will not pull papers for the water commission seat, DeCaprio said that he would be welcome to do so.

"Mike is free to stay in Cohasset and run for election to any office. Were he to win a water commission slot he would be welcomed, as would anyone. Then, he could compete in the marketplace for ideas and defend his views on their merits. Admittedly something he has steadfastly avoided, but anyone can learn," DeCaprio said.

Town, schools seek Chief Technology Officer

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The town and schools are planning to create and advertise a new Chief Technology Officer (CTO) position.

This position will be jointly funded by the town and the schools. Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that this is one way to build a bridge between the schools and the town.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski raised the issue during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, while Cataldo presented the topic to the School Committee the following night.

Both Milanoski and Cataldo stressed the importance of securing the town and schools' data and building an overall infrastructure and architecture for a town-wide IT plan.

The CTO will help "move us forward into the 21st century," said Cataldo. "Much of our technology in the schools is a decade old."

The Capital Budget Committee's chairman, Steve Gaumer, said during the selectmen's meeting that while he understands that "data security is a critical need," he was hesitant to see the superintendent and acting town manager "rush to created a position without first understanding what we want them to do."

Selectman Diane Kennedy said that she was hesitant to vote on creating the new position because it seemed like "putting the cart before the horse." She added that she understood that the position might need to put "on a fast track," but wanted to wait to hear what the School Committee had to say.

Milanoski said that while he understood Kennedy's concern, "There's such a need right now with security."

Both Gaumer and some of the selectmen were concerned that there would not be a large enough workload for a full-time IT person in town. Milanoski said the position would be housed in the school, and the school and town would split the workload 60-40.

The schools already have a Director of Technology. School Committee vice chair Jeanne Astino said that she looks at this new IT position as redefining the current one's job description.

"This is a different skill set that is needed to move forward to the next level," Astino said during the School Committee meeting. "We need to retrain, regroup and retool the skill set; that's how I view this."

This position is already being funded in the school budget; Cataldo said that changing from a Director of Technology to a CTO would be cost-neutral.

The salary would be between $110,000 and $120,000, the superintendent said, which is around what the school is currently paying.

According to the school's draft fiscal year 2013 budget detail, the school appropriated $104, 436 for the technology coordinator position. The school is requesting $119,652 for the next fiscal year.

Milanoski told the board that he and Cataldo could advertise the position, "get it on the street," without having to make a final decision right away. This would allow a few weeks for Milanoski to work with Capital Budget on creating a work plan and goals and objectives for the IT position.

The Chief Technology Officer will need security clearance to work on public safety equipment such as the cruisers, as well as the new SoftRight software implementation in Town Hall.

The selectmen did not take a vote on the matter, but plan to discuss the position's scope of work at their next meeting. In the meantime, Milanoski plans to advertise the position.

The Capital Budget Committee will present their technology plan during the April 3 selectmen meeting, and will incorporate the IT position's goals and objectives.

Cataldo told the school committee that the matter did not require a vote from them, either, but that she wanted to be transparent about the plan to create and advertise the CTO position.

ELECTION

"We have marvelous talent in this town... I hope things will turn around. I don't like any of this combative stuff. There's too much of a divide, and I think we should be able to work together."

Carr could not be reached for comment before press time.

The board of selectmen is not the only board with a race.

The Planning Board has two available seats, with three people in the running.

David Drinan is running for the five-year term. He is currently filling a vacant associate seat and was specially appointed by the selectmen earlier this month to do so; this is his first official run for the board.

Roger Lowe and Michael Dickey are vying for the one-year associate member seat.

Debra Krupczak and Thomas Powers are both running for the single three-year seat on the Board of Assessors.

The following available offices will have uncontested races:

Leonora Jenkins, who was elected to the Water Commission last year on a write-in vote, is the only running for the available three-year term.

Both the Board of Health and Cohasset Housing Authority have one open seat each; Margaret "Peggy" Chapman, the Board of Health's current chair, is seeking reelection, while A. Patrick McCarthy is running for the Housing Authority.

There are two seats available on the Sewer Commission; John Beck and Brian Baldwin are running for those. Beck is running for reelection; Baldwin has been filling an unfulfilled term and was appointed to do so in August. This will be his first official election.

There are also two three-year seats open on the School Committee. Dr. Helene Lieb, the current chair, and Dr. Paul Schubert are both running for reelection.

Three five-year seats are open on the Recreation Commission, and exactly three folks are running: Dan Martin, Douglas Ellinger, and Elizabeth (Deveney) Frazier. Both Martin and Ellinger are seeking reelection, while Frazier will be the newcomer to the board.

Finally, the Library Trustees have three open three-year seats, with only two in the running as of press time: Agnes McCann and Patience Towle, both seeking reelection.

BOS approve Sept. bike ride

A charity bike ride will make its way through town this coming September.

The Board of Selectmen voted Tuesday to approve the McCourt Foundation Annual Bike Ride, which will raise money for Alzheimer and MS research. The race starts and ends in Wompatuck State Park and goes through the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell.

Between 200 and 300 riders will bike in the race, which will take them along Cohasset's waterfront starting on Jerusalem Rd.

The first loop of the race begins at 8 a.m. on Saturday, Sept. 22; the second group of riders take off at 9 a.m. While selectmen expressed concern that a steady stream of bikers would effect people getting to and out of their driveways, McCourt Foundation director Denise Arrondo assured the board that it will not be a steady stream. Arrondo said that the race typically wraps up around 11 a.m., so most riders will be through Cohasset by 10:30 a.m.

Arrondo also said that she has been working with Deputy Police Chief William Quigley on details for the route.

The selectmen voted unanimously to approve the race. However, they will have an agenda item in the near future to discuss the number of races and walks in town and the possibility of limiting the number of events or spreading them farther apart.

New auditor being sought

After using the same auditor for several years, Cohasset is in the market for a new one.

Acting Town Manager Michael Milanoski told the Board of Selectmen what the process would be to select a new town auditor.

Under the town's current Town Manager Act, the hiring of a new auditor falls under the purview of the town manager; however, Milanoski said that he would like the selectmen to be involved.

Milanoski suggested that he appoint a committee to help him interview three to four candidates, then bring the top choice before the selectmen for their approval. The board approved this idea.

Selectman Paul Carlson agreed to serve on the committee. A member each from the Advisory, Capital Budget and School Committee, along with Finance Director Mary Gallagher, will also serve on the search committee.

The selectmen approved Milanoksi's request unanimously.

School budget hearing March 28

The School Committee will present the schools' Fiscal 2013 budget next Wednesday, March 28, at 6:30 p.m.

The public hearing will be held in the Community Meeting Room at Cohasset High School.

The purpose of the meeting is to invite public comment, as is required by law, on the School Committee's deliberation and certification of the proposed FY '13 budget.

The draft proposal of the budget, updated on March 21 is available for download on the school website, on the School Committee's page.

HOOPS FOR BAND AND CHORUS

Taking on the teachers

Friday night, March 23, at 6:30, there will be a basketball game between teachers and the high school team to raise money for the chorus/band trip to New York City this Spring.

It will be a fun evening with face painting, a free-throw contest and concessions.

Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for students.

Teachers scheduled to play are Bill Fish, Jason McCabe, Al Gallotta, Jim Willis, Brian Pattison, Marty Geoghegan, Ron Ford, Mike Hogan, Shannon Gerrish and Lisa Sugrue.

BASEBALL

As the baseball season approaches, the Cohasset/Scituate American Legion Post 118 will be entering a Junior Legion Baseball Legion team for athletes age 16 and 17 from Cohasset and Scituate.

There will be an Open House Night, Thursday, March 22 from 6-8 p.m. at American Legion Post 118 at 98 Summer Street in Cohasset.

For more information, email Scott Arnold at sarnold@comcast.net

Sixth grade travel girls enjoy March Madness

The 6th grade Cohasset girls travel team, which finished the season with an 11-3 record and reached the semifinals of the Old Colony League playoffs this weekend, are: front row from left are - Elle Hansen, Kate Quigley, Emma Ioft, Margaret Norton, and Mary Catherine Crumley. "The thrill of victory and the agony of defeat," is a timeworn sports axiom understood by athletes at all levels of competition. The Cohasset 6th grade girls travel basketball team learned first-hand its bittersweet truth amidst the rollercoaster ride of tournament play this past weekend in the A bracket playoffs of the Old Colony Basketball League.

The Super Sixers entered March Madness as one of the elite teams in the OCL. They compiled a sterling 11-3 regular season record (a big improvement from their 7-7 mark last year as Fledgling Fifths), including victories over defending champion Kingston and Braintree, both of which had swept two games from Cohasset last year.

The Blue & White took on Braintree in a quarterfinal matchup Friday evening and pulled out a 22-20 triumph in a hard-fought affair.

Zoe Doherty, Lauren Cunning, and Elle Hansen keyed the Cohasset offense through most of the game. But when Braintree moved out into the lead with less than 10 minutes to play, it was Kate Fitzpatrick who single-handedly took charge and pumped in three straight baskets to push the Sixers into a 20-15 advantage with five minutes to go.

Braintree hit some free throws down the stretch, but the Blue & White held on for the win, inbounding the ball nicely under their own basket in the waning seconds and then running out the clock.

The emotional victory propelled Cohasset into the OCL semifinal round Saturday against 13-1 Whitman, the OCL's first place team (whose lone loss during the regular season had come at the hands of Braintree). Cohasset and Whitman had engaged in a fierce overtime battle in their only meeting of the regular season and thus both the teams and their fans were

POPPIN' OFF

There's a spring in my step

This is writer's favorite time of year and don't forget to send your stuff

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

If you can set a tone on a first day of practice, Monday may have been the perfect introduction to the spring sports season.

How could it get any better.

It was sunny, in the high 70's and after months indoors, a perfect respite for athletes and coaches who felt like getting outside for a bit.

Who knows how long it will last, but I'll be happy to take it.

To tell the truth, this has actually been a pleasant winter sports season on my end.

Lots of good games, great individual performances and of course, it wasn't so blindingly cold that I wanted to curl up under my electric blanket, turn it up to 11 and put it right next to my portable radiator.

No, this year it was mostly nice enough to hop in the car and take a ride to a game.

As always, the locals always made it fun to come out and watch.

There was much to enjoy during the winter.

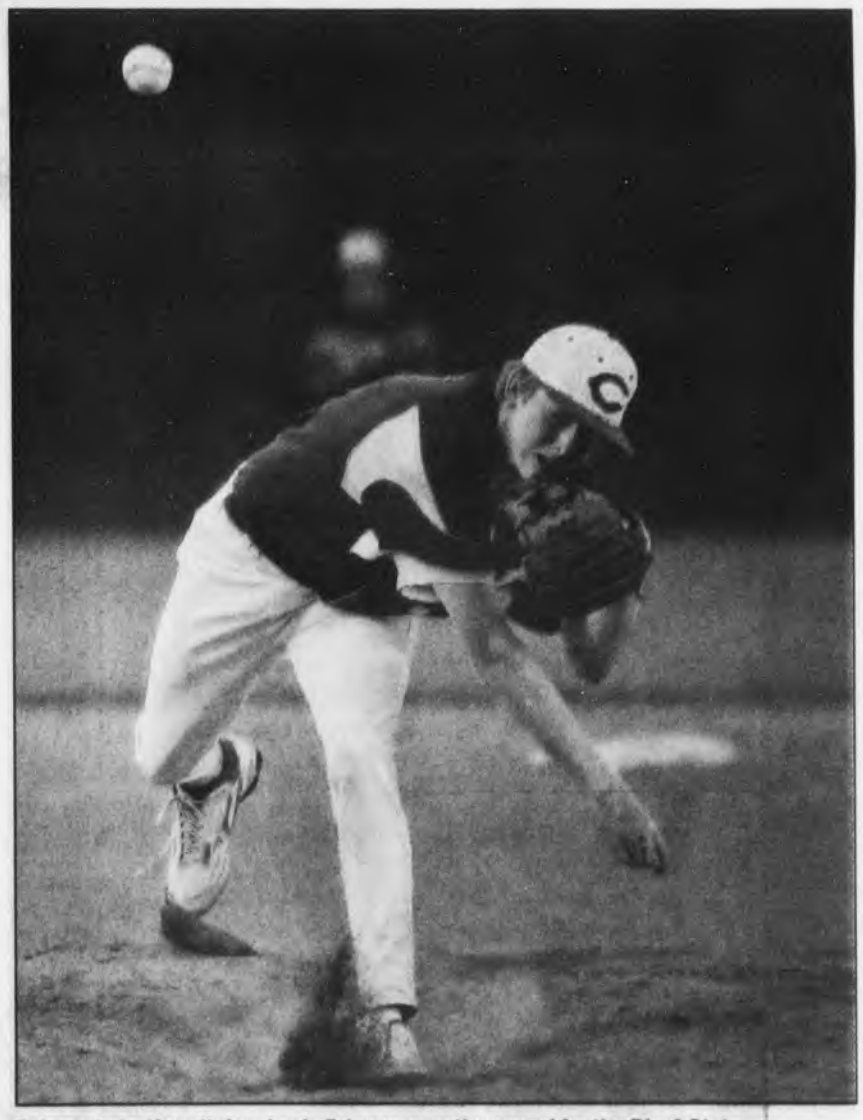
Let's start with the boys basketball team, who left everything on the court, and played so fast that it almost felt like watching tennis - except when it came to things like rebounding and playing as a team.

Under the boards, Robbie Mahoney was just fun to watch as he fought off bigger players to bring down those boards.

Kyrel Jaundoo brought similar thoughts with his athleticism and all-out intensity.

To coach Bo Ruggiero, it's good to hear you're on the mend and we're looking forward to seeing you next season.

On the ice, the hockey team was a joy. I wasn't able to get to as many games as I would have liked, but what I did see was lots of speed, skill and scoring – everything I enjoy about the sport at the high school level.



Yes, the Skippers played defense too, which is why they finished with one of the best records in the program's history.

A special thanks to Bob Walsh for always keeping us in the loop.

As for the girls basketball team, the numbers didn't always come up in your favor, but as a fan, I could see the hard work and effort, and that is always a good thing.

Getting back to the spring

Cohasset players win State Championship with Breakers

The Breakers U10 Green team became the first Breakers team in the history of the organization to win a Tier I State Championship. This U10 team concluded their season winning all six Championships they could win. They finished as NEGHL U10 National Division Champs, EHF U10 Regular Season Champs, Cape Cod Storm U12 Tournament Champs, Polar Bear U10 AA Tournament Champs, EHF U10 Tournament Champs and Massachusetts U10 State Tier I Champs. SPRING though, the thing I love most about spring sports is heading to the baseball diamond to watch a good baseball game.

Cohasset is definitely the place to do it.

The Skippers are the two-time defending Div. 4 State Champion (not that anyone had to remind you) and they look to be strong again this season.

Just look at the impact players who should be returning.

Jamie Faber won the championship game last season on the mound. He'll have help with Shane Haggerty, Chris Murphy, Christian Davis, Connor Goetz, Jamie Timothy and Sean McKenna.

That is a lot of talent coach Pete Afanasiw has at his disposal.

They will be fun to watch.

If you want to see Afanasiw in action sooner, check out the All-Star basketball team between the faculty and the Cohasset varsity basketball teams. The game is tonight at 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset High School gym.

The game is a fundraiser for the Chorus and Band trip to New York City in the spring.

There will be face painting, concessions and a free throw contest.

Admission is $5 for adults and $3 for students.

The last time I took my kids and one of their friends and they had a blast. Put this on your calendar. It's a great cause and a lot of fun.

Back to the point I was on, baseball is my first love as a sport.

It's the one sport I can say I was pretty good at, and the sport I remember watching and playing when I was little.

Now make no mistake, I truly enjoy other spring sports.

Lacrosse has won me over. The beauty of the perfect pass and quick strike and the speed of the game is something to marvel at.

But going back to baseball, there are just so many great memories.

I remember when I played Little League and had my biggest heartbreak when an outfielder climbed a link or two up the fence to stick his glove out and take away the one ball I ever hit far enough that it could have been a home run. To make it worse, the umpire told me it would have been ball four if I watched the pitch.

I remember when another of my Little League teams were going to Boston for a pro wrestling event and my parents didn't think it was a good idea (I was the youngest on the team at the time) and made it up to me by letting me pick any Red Sox game to go to that season.

I chose the Brewers when they came to town so I could see Hank Aaron play.

It was toward the end of his career, and when he hit, you could see the flash bulbs going off all over Fenway.

Mine was too. Now if I could only find the photo I took, well, that would be great.

I'll always have my short conversation with Ted Williams, the greatest hitter ever.

I met him in 1987 at Red Sox spring training in Winter Haven. Talk about a great moment for a Red Sox fan, well that was it.

Did I mention I have a baseball from that same trip sitting on my desk?

Well it's there. I also have an autographed ball with Marty Barrett, Dave Henderson and a few more of those guys on it.

Getting back to that theme, I would like to thank all the parents, friends, coaches and players who have sent us stories and photos through the winter season.

With the spring on the way, here's an invitation to keep sending your stuff.

In the summer time, between the four towns I cover, there are about 22 or 23 teams to follow between baseball, softball, lacrosse, track and tennis.

That's just the high school varsity.

Add in youth sports and JV and middle schools, well the number grows.

That's why I am asking for your help.

If you have a team that hasn't been in the paper, feel free to write up a few words and send them my way.

That's wwassersug@wickedlocal.com or 781-837-4577.

That's at every level.

If you're a player, maybe a team captain, ask your coach if you can write a few paragraphs and send it on.

School newspaper writers, if you have a hot sports scoop, I'm listening. Coaches, if you don't hear from me or miss my call, write it up or give me a call, or ask a parent or player to be media liason.

I do ask to keep things positive though.

Youth coaches and parents, let's get those kids in the news.

Snap a photo or two and send it over. Just try to make sure it's at least 1 MB so it will print.

Youth roundups are always invited.

We don't need long stories there. Give me a score and name three or four kids who played well or tried hard.

You'd be surprised how many kids get their names in the paper after just a few weeks.

When the roundups are shorter, it helps in the editing process.

Like I said, all it needs is a simple score: Moonmen 5, Outoftowners 2

Then a roundup: Anthony ravioli had a three-run homer with six RBI as the Moonmen beat the Outoftowners 5-2 at Boston's Crater Coliseum.

Ace Stevens struck out nine and Wayne Parish stole a homerun from Gary Williams that could have tied the game in the bottom of the ninth.

The Moonmen improved to 7-1 with the win, while the Outoftowners fell to 3-5.

That's all it takes.

Send it here, add that cool photo and we're in business.

Hope to see and hear from you all in the coming season.

It should be a good one.

BASKETBALL

prepared for another epic encounter.

They did not disappoint.

Coming into the contest, Cohasset knew it had some favorable matchups and the Blue & White exploited them from the outset. The frontcourt duo of Aidan Chamberlain and Leanne Hayden worked beautifully together to cause some major damage in the offensive end, while the Cohasset backcourt corps of Emma Loft, Kate Quigley, Margaret Norton, and Hansen limitd the penetration of the Whitman guards in the defensive end. Mary Catherine Crumley also played fiercely on defense and played a key role in limiting Whitman to just nine points in the first half.

The teams continued to battle evenly after the intermission, but Whitman made some tough shots to move out to a five point lead. A pair of free throws by Chamberlain and a nice 12 foot swisher by Doherty left Cohasset trailing by three, 18-15, with 30 seconds to play. Cunning them made the shot of the season when she drained a high-arcing three pointer to even the count at 18-18.

The Cohasset D held firm on the ensuing Whitman possession, giving Cohasset the ball under their own basket with 6.9 seconds on the clock. However, Cohasset lost the ball on the inbounds play (a Blue and White girl's toe was on the line when she caught the ball) and Whitman ended up with a final chance to win. A 10 foot jumper off the glass with two seconds to go proved the difference.

So, as one of the Cohasset girls said, "They don't call it March Madness for nothing!" Their fine season ended with a clutch win and a tough loss in the playoffs. But with a great year behind them, they have much to look forward to as seventh graders.

LIFE AT CHS

Senior year is flying by

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Hello Cohasset! I bet you all had a wonderful, sunny week. The 80-degree weather was certainly uncharacteristic of March, but was a fantastic way to ring in Spring. Happy Vernal Equinox after one of the mildest winters in a while! Everyday this week, Seniors crammed around the three coveted outside tables in the courtyard, soaking up the sun and enjoying one of the best senior privileges Cohasset offers.

Spring sports commenced on Monday. Members of the track team were spotted running all around town, lax players running drills, baseball boys and tennis players hitting balls, and sailors braving the waves. This season is guaranteed to be a success with a lot of talent, a few new coaches, and athletes with a passion for their sports. Games will start within the next few weeks. Make sure to come to some games and meets!

The year's second and final student council sponsored American Red Cross Blood Drive is scheduled for the morning of March 28th. If you are at least 16 years old and interested in donating blood and helping save lives, sign up during lunch or ask any class officer for more information.

The short March edition of the Spinnaker came out today. Included were reports on Mr. Skipper, an interview with the winner, and spring sports previews.

Speaking of Mr. Skipper, congrats to Peter Hinman on the win! In all seriousness, this year's show was the best I have ever seen, and not because I am biased because I was involved and am part of the class of 2013. It was genuinely so entertaining and hilarious, and all 10 seniors and the 1 junior who competed deserve to be applauded for their performances. The 11 teachers who serves as presenters added a new, special flair to the show. Thank you to all of the sponsors! The event, combined with last Thursday's amazingly successful dodge ball tournament, raised a ton of much-needed money for the senior class.

The sophomore class endured the MCAS this week. I am sure everyone did great! Freshmen, juniors, and seniors had their English classes moved to different rooms, which was a strange experience.

Easter break, fourth term, add April vacation are all rapidly approaching. I literally cannot believe how fast this year is flying by! By April, most seniors will know where they are headed for college or work (and will finally have an answer to that ever-present "where are you going next year" question). I can't believe senior year is over in a mere two months. Well, have a great, sunny weekend Cohasset! I am sure many of you will be spending some time at the movies to see the Hunger Games...it's so good!!

Olivia Franklin is a senior a Cohasset High; her column appears monthly during the school year.

Pilgrim Arena awarding scholarships

In memory of Blanche Taylor and her 39 years of dedicated service, Pilgrim is awarding $120,000 of merit-based scholarships this year.

Applications for fifteen $8,000 merit-based scholarships are available at Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham.

This is the 39th consecutive year that Pilgrim Skating Arena is awarding scholarships to high school seniors planning to further their education. With this year's award, Pilgrim will have granted $1,100,000 of merit-based scholarships.

You do not need to be a hockey player or figure skater to apply for this scholarship. This scholarship is awarded on the basis of merit not financial need.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for their application in person at Pilgrim's pro shop. Completed applications must be returned in person by the applicant no later than Friday April 20th.

Applications will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors of Pilgrim Skating Arena.

DAR EVENT

Teens earn Good Citizens Award

Col. Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met on March 11 at the Lightkeeper's Residence in Cohasset to honor local recipients of the DAR Good Citizens Award. Sponsored through the local chapter, the winners recognized were Morgan McCarthy of Cohasset High School, Molly Kane of Hull High School, Michael Cordaro of Whitman-Hanson Regional High School, and Jesse Pawlowski of Weymouth High School.

The DAR Good Citizen Award is given annually to members of the senior class of accredited high schools. Three students are selected by the faculty, based on the qualities of Dependability, Service, Leadership and Patriotism. The members of the senior class then vote for the recipient of the award. This program is also recognized by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Morgan McCarthy of Cohasset High School is the son of John and Hortense McCarthy. Morgan is President of the National Honor Society. He received the AP Scholar Award. He served on the Student Council as Vice President and Treasurer. He was a member of the Debate Team and Model UN speaking at the Harvard Model UN. Morgan is an Eagle Scout, Troop Instructor and Patrol Leader and was elected into the Boy Scout National Honor Society. He plays saxophone in the High School Band and was elected section leader of Alto Saxophones. He was a member of Greater Boston Regional Student Advisory Council, High School Council and Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research and School Newspaper. Morgan is Varsity Captain of the CHS Collaborative Sailing Team, on the Varsity Soccer Team and Varsity Swim and Dive Team. Morgan is involved with many community projects including The American Cancer Society's Relay for Life, Cohasset Public Recycling Transfer Facility, volunteered on various Cohasset building and construction projects, traveled to nursing homes with the Band Holiday Tour, volunteered for the National Honor Society and Student Council Blood Drives. He serves as the chairperson of the Teen Advisory Board for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. He has worked as a Cohasset Soccer Coach, Lifeguard and Sailing Instructor. He will attend Johns Hopkins University in the fall.

Molly Kane of Hull High School is the daughter of Ellen and Cornelius Kane. Molly is a member of the National Honor Society. She is the Student Council President, member of the Student Advisory Board and Senior Executive Board Member. Molly has participated in Mock Trial, Quiz Bowl and many choral productions in the Hull High School Theater Arts. Molly volunteered at the South Shore Collaborative working with students. She was a campaign member for S.O.S. Save Our Schools advocating for proper funding for Hull Schools. Molly is a member of the Varsity Soccer Team. She has received numerous academic achievement awards including the National Merit Scholarship Commendation, AP Scholar Award, Hingham and Hull Rotary Club Top Ten Award, AP English Subject Mastery Award, Academic Achievement Award, MBA Mock Trial Outstanding Performance Award, Honors World History II Subject Mastery Award and she was an Honor Roll student. Molly has published award winning articles for Teen Ink Magazine. Molly has been active in community service with the Hull Lifesaving Museum working as an archivist. She has volunteered at the Hull Public Library and created and coordinated the Hull High School Supply Drive for Troop #1173 stationed in Afghanistan and Kuwait creating personalized care packages for the Soldiers overseas. She has volunteered/interned at VCA Animal Hospital. She has participated in Young Neighbors in Action, a neighborhood soup kitchen/food pantry. Molly wishes to attend college to pursue a Life Sciences major with an emphasis in cognitive neuroscience and ultimate goal is to become a veterinarian.

Michael Cordaro is the Good Citizen from Whitman-Hanson Regional High School. He is the son of William and Laurie Cordaro. Michael is recognized as an AP Scholar. He participated in the National Grand Councours test taken by accelerated French Students and is a member of the French Honors Society Association. Michael is the Varsity co-captain of the soccer team and captain of the Tennis Team. He was awarded MVP by the Kiwanis Club for Tennis. Michael was the Head Coach for Whitman Youth Soccer. He was a member of the DECA Club placing in the top eight finalists of principles of business and management administration. He co-founded the charity Panther Soccer Cares. He organized fundraising efforts including a road race for representing and raising money for the Angel Fund submitting $4,500 to the ALS Research Lab at UMass-Worcester Medical Center. Michael works at Duval's Pharmacy as a store clerk. Michael wishes to study to become a physician's assistant and major in biology.

Jesse Pawlowski is the Good Citizen from Weymouth High School. He is the son of Carl and Tamara Pawlowski. Jesse has been involved in wrestling since a young age, including Youth Wrestling, Grizzly Wrestling, Wildcat Dungeon, and Youth Wrestling Coaching. He is a Varsity member of the Weymouth Wrestling Team and JV State Wrestling Champion in ninth grade. Jesse is a Wessagusset Sailing program student and trainer. Jesse is a Presidential Fitness Award recipient every year since seventh grade. He participated in Rachel's Challenge, creating a permanent positive culture change in his school. Jesse was also involved with the Junior Senior Committee as a class representative. He is involved with many community projects including a Lead Volunteer for the Fore River Water Shed Association in its efforts to rebuild a herring run in the Monatiquot River. Jesse is an active member of the Old South Union Church Youth Group volunteering for various community outreach service programs such as Father Bill's Homeless Shelter, The American Cancer Society's Relay for Life, Shriners Hospital for Children Pop Top Rally, and Adopta Una Familia. Internationally, he participated in Adopta Una Familia program traveling to Ecuador providing humanitarian aide, building houses for the impoverished community, and cultural outreach. Jesse works at Linden Ponds and founded his own landscaping company, JP Landscaping. Jesse has a commitment to serve both his community and his country. Jesse hopes to join the military after completing college and plans to become a pilot.

Each student was presented with a certificate and wallet card stating they are local Good Citizen recipients. Their families came forward to help pin on the Good Citizen pins and were congratulated for their outstanding young adults. A small gift and a flag were also given to each Good Citizen. The offices of state Sen. Robert Hedlund and state Rep. Garrett Bradley presented citations from the State House congratulating each of the students for their outstanding achievements. Congratulations Michael, Molly, Morgan and Jesse!

MOTHERS CAN'T SAY ENOUGH about the personal care and "sense of home" they experience at Jordan Hospital's BirthPlace. As one recent mom put it: "Being certain I knew who'd be delivering my baby—and seeing everyone's concern for my preferences—made it an easy choice. Being right near all the grandparents and relatives was awesome for all of us." And now with the full resources of Tufts Medical Center at-the-ready, there simply isn't a better option for you, your baby, and your whole family.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 2, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Be careful about doing someone a favor when you don't know the full story behind the request. Don't rely on someone's unsubstantiated assurances. Insist on all the facts before you act.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That workplace problem still needs your attention before you finally can close the book on it. Meanwhile, a long-anticipated reunion gets closer to becoming a happy reality.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be demanding more from others than they can give. Best advice: Have a long and frank talk to determine what the facts are. Tensions should abate as the week winds down.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Aspects are favorable throughout this week for making contacts that could be important to your career plans. Meanwhile, an old friend offers the advice you're seeking.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) It's time to stop licking your wounds from past mistakes. Get up and get going toward your future. Loyal friends will be there to help the Lion get back into rip-roaring shape.

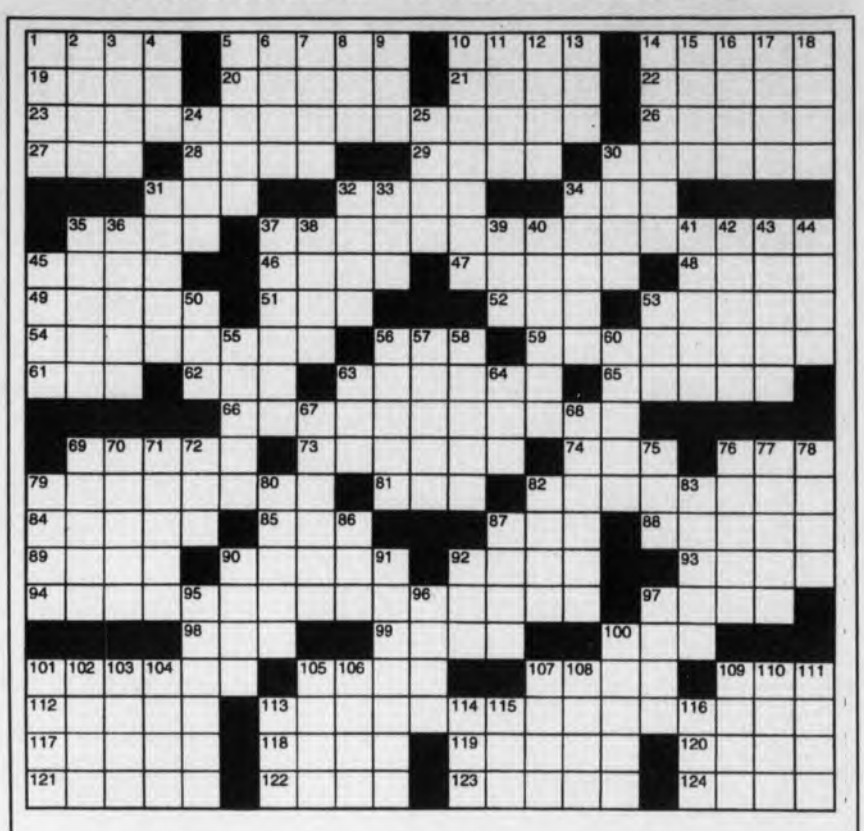
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Take time out to go over what's expected of you before you begin your new project. Otherwise, you run the risk of pushing yourself harder than you need to.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An unusual request could put you in an awkward position. Best advice: Deal with it immediately. The longer you delay, the more difficult it will be to get out of it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You should feel recharged and ready for whatever your workaday world holds for you. The same positive energy spills over into your personal relationships.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A prospect might be less than it appears to be. Like the Archer in your sign, you always aim for the truth. And this is no time to settle for less than full disclosure.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Start doing some serious thinking about a career move that could entail more than just changing job sites. Some lifestyle changes also might be involved.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With tensions easing at the workplace, a more positive environment once again encourages the free flow of ideas so typical of the always-innovative Aquarian.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Show some of that usually hidden steel-strong Piscean backbone, and stand up for yourself if you hope to make a case for that promotion you know you deserve.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy doing new things and staying ahead of the crowd. You would make a fine sports coach or military leader.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

PLANNING BOARD

Battle lines drawn over contract

No confidence vote in Board of Selectmen

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Unprecedented.

That word sums up Wednesday's Planning Board vote of "no confidence" in the Cohasset Board of Selectmen.

The motion for the vote, offered by Planning Board member Al Moore, came at the end of an hour-long, at times contentious discussion over the Planning Coordinator JoAnn Pilczak's recently "reneged" contract.

The seeds were sown a few weeks ago for what turned out to be a showdown Wednesday — between the five-member Planning Board and interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski — when selectmen voted to void 10 non-union contracts recently inked by employees and then Town Manager Michael Coughlin over procedural and cost issues. The voided contracts put those employees back to their old pay rates.

Pilczak's contract – the funding for which was approved at the fall special Town Meeting, the board said – included a promotion from planning board administrator to planning board coordinator. Although these numbers were not confirmed Wednesday, it appears that the coordinator position included a raise of roughly $10,000 for an annual salary of $65,000.

"The town ought to live up to its obligations it makes to people."
Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

The planning board faced a conundrum that provided impetus for Wednesday's heated discussion over whether to approve Pilczak's current paycheck at her old pay rate and former title. Board members worried that by signing off

WATER UPDATE

RFP aired

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset Water Commission held a forum on Monday, March 26 to inform the public on options to manage the town's water company moving forward. The discussion, held in the High School auditorium, focused primarily on the request for proposals (RFP) the water department recently issued for a 10-year concession contract.

The meeting delved into what concession contracts are (see sidebar), and also explored two other options for managing the water company: continuing with a management contract like the town's current five-year contract with American Water (which expires this June) or taking operations in-house.

The topic of managing Cohasset Water has been a hot button issue at many board meetings over the past several months, from the Board of Selectmen to the Governance Committee. As the town prepares to transition into a new water contract, the concept of a concession contract has been the one most favored by the water commission.

Monday night's forum consisted of a 20-minute Power Point presentation, followed by a question and answer session between the audi-

Cable studio ready to roll

Cohasset TV officially launched

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's own cable TV studio has officially launched.

With balloons, cupcakes and a ribbon-cutting ceremony, 143tv was ushered into the Cohasset community.

"It's been a long time getting this up and running," said Paul Carlson, who serves on the town's Cable Advisory Committee as treasurer and is also on the Board of Selectmen. "It's really starting to come together now."

Cohasset TV held an open house on Saturday, March 24, to introduce the community to the new studio, which is housed within the Middle-High School library. The launch party featured treats from Cohasset's Wicked Good Cupcakes and a chance for attendees to sign up for the studio's email newsletter. The community was also encouraged to submit their ideas for TV shows; the members of the cable advisory committee and studio hope that townspeople will help the station create content. The studio's green screen room was also open to the public, so folks could sit and see themselves on TV.

Those who attended the open house also got to meet 143tv's newly hired Program Director, Don Roine.

"Don's a tremendous addition," said Carlson.

Roine, who lives in Hull, called Cohasset home for 13 years; his three sons attended Cohasset schools and played football. Roine, who has a long work history in broadcasting, used to coach his sons' football teams and announce the games.

"I have roots in Cohasset," said Roine during a tour of the new studio. "It's good to be home again."

Roine brings his expertise to 143tv, having worked as a program director for American Cable, Continental, Media One, AT&T and Com-

WHAT IS GOING ON HERE?

Speed board cropping up again

EXTRA IN YOUR MARINER

What
Along with spring flowers, the Cohasset police speed board is poking its head up around town. The device, which was purchased 5-1/2 years ago with grant money, records the speed a motorist is traveling and also displays the speed limit for the particular stretch of roadway.

History
Back in 2006, the $8,500 radar trailer was purchased through grant money from two sources, the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau, which rewarded the town for participating in various traffic safety initiatives such as the "Click it or Ticket" campaigns, and through a Community Policing grant from the Executive Office of Public Safety.

What does it do
The display on the trailer tells drivers how fast they are going, but if they are speeding a blue light also flashes.

Quote
"The radar board is a great tool to remind drivers of just how fast they are traveling," Chief Mark DeLuca said. "Life is so fast paced that I truly believe people don't realize just how fast they're going and the board prompts people to drive more responsibly."

More
If residents or businesses want the speed board posted in their location, they should contact the police department by calling 781-383-1212.

The police radar trailer shows a car is traveling on Route 3A by Shaw's Plaza at 45 m.p.h. in a 35 m.p.h. zone. Police purchased the device about 4-1/2 years ago with grant money. STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

Don Roine

Name: Don Roine.

Occupation: Program Director, 143 TV.

Best day of your life: Each birth of my three sons/my Route 66 wedding trip to Vegas with my wife, Kathy.

Best (or worst) vacation: Best- Venezuela. We rented a car and the gas tank read empty. We finally found a station and filled the tank for $1.10.

Favorite season: Late Spring.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Favorite junk food: Love all junk foods, but shouldn't.

Best book: "Hawaii" by James Mitchner and any Dave Barry book.

Best movie: "Airplane."

Best TV show: "MI-5 (Spooks)."

Pet peeve: Difficult computers.

Fun Fact: I write about beer as The New England Beer Examiner.

Goal: Too many to mention, but right now get this studio operational.

Person you'd most like to meet: Mark Twain.

Biggest worry: Any failure.

Best part of Cohasset: So scenic and the people I've know and met along the way.

Perroncello steps down as VFW Commander

Commander Ralph Perroncello has been the leader of the Cohasset VFW for 26 years and due to health reasons has announced that he is stepping down in the next two months.

Ralph wants to thank all those special Cohasset friends who provided him support in so many ways. To quote him "You all know who I am referring to and without your assistance over so many years I simply could not have achieved the success of the many VFW programs that were so important to our post."

POLICE BEAT

Branch-cutters sent on their way

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Three people who were cutting tree bows to make wreaths were sent on their way last Wednesday (March 21) after someone called police about suspicious activity in the woods near JJ's.

Police said the people, who had arrived in two pickup trucks, explained that they take the branches to make wreaths. Police explained they were trespassing on conservation land.

Suspended license

An officer working a detail on Sohier Street near Fairoaks Lane pulled over a 1997 Jeep Grand Cherokee with an expired inspection sticker and loud muffler at 12:39 p.m. on Monday (March 19). Further investigation revealed the operator, a 26-year-old Abington man, had a suspended license. He is being summonsed to court on the charge of operating after license suspension. His Jeep was towed.

Annoying calls

Feng Shui notified police at around 12:45 p.m. on Monday (March 19) that they had received annoying phone calls. Police said a customer with a young voice called to place an order then called back to cancel. The customer then called a third time and swore at the staffer before hanging up.

Minor accident

Police went to the scene about 20 minutes after a minor fender-bender at the request of one of the involved parties' husband at 2:49 p.m. on Monday (March 19) that involved a paper exchange on Pleasant Street. Police said the husband wanted to be sure that all the information had been exchanged. When police arrived one of those involved had already left. Police said the accident involved a 2011 Nissan Maxima, operated by a 48-year-old Cohasset resident, and a 2012 Toyota Corolla, and a 67-year-old Tewksbury resident. No report was needed because the accident was very minor, police said.

Rear-end accident

Police responded to a rear-end accident at Chief Justice Cushing Highway and Pond Street on Saturday (March 24) at 2:54 p.m. Police said a 1990 Ford Mustang, operated by a 64-year-old Cohasset resident had stopped at the light when the Mustang was hit from behind by a 2010 Nissan Rogue, operated by a 49-year-old Cohasset resident. The woman operating of the Rogue was cited for following too closely on a state highway. Both vehicles were towed; there were no reported injuries.

Antifreeze

A resident reported to police last week that there was antifreeze in her driveway that did not come from her car. Police said the woman has a very long driveway and has been concerned about recent suspicious activity.

Handicap placard

A 71-year-old Pond Street resident reported to police last week that her handicap placard was missing, possibly stolen. Police provided her with an incident report number so she could get a placard reissued by the Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Hit & run

Police are summonsing a 53-year-old Cohasset man and his 59-year-old brother to court following investigation of an apparent hit and run accident at around 4:42 a.m. on Wednesday (March 21) on Border Street. Police responded to the scene after a caller reported low-hanging wires. Police found a 2002 Dodge Caravan at the scene that had hit three granite posts before striking the utility pole. The operator was not around; police went to the house where the older brother of the driver allegedly misled police about the investigation. The operator is being summonsed to court for leaving the scene after property damage; negligent operation and marked lanes violation. The older brother is being summonsed to court for obstruction of justice.

ID theft

A 51-year-old Cohasset resident with a compromised social security number went to police last week to drop off an identity theft packet and speak to an officer about the ID fraud. Detectives are investigating.

No-trespass

A young mother whose own mother was allegedly harassing her and her boyfriend went to police last week to find out about obtaining a no-trespass order. The girl's mother went to police two days later to ask for an escort so she court retrieve her car from the parking area at her daughter's apartment. Police said the girl explained that her mother had been badgering her and her boyfriend and they wanted her to leave them alone.

Sneakers

A 15-year-old's brand-new pair of $100 sneakers was stolen from an unattended study room at the high school last week. Police said the thief left an old pair of sneakers in place of the new pair that had been left there overnight. The theft was reported at 10:36 a.m. on Wednesday (March 21).

Stealing

A village eatery notified police that a 35-year-old employee had been stealing. Police talked to the employee who admitted to the theft. The employee was terminated but the shop did not want to press criminal charges.

Protective custody

The 69-year-old mother of a 33-year-old Cohasset man gave her son a ride home following an investigation after a call from the Avalon complex about suspicious activity on Saturday (March 24) at 1:10 a.m. Police found the man, who was intoxicated, in a blue pickup truck with the keys out of the ignition. He was taken into protective custody and released to his mother. The truck was towed.

Shoplifting

A 57-year-old Humarock man was arrested and charged with shoplifting and illegal possession of a Class E substance following an investigation at Stop & Shop on Saturday. Police said store security observed the man pay for some items at the self-checkout and not others including cheese, ham, beef, strip steak, cucumbers and a tomato totaling about $91.56 in stolen items. The man paid for $83 in other items. During the booking procedure at the police station, police found a bottle for Oxycodone pills for which the man could not produced a prescription.

WATER RFP

ence and water commissioners, who were joined by their special counsel, attorney Lisa Mead of the firm Blatman, Bobrowski & Mead.

The water commissioners outlined three options for the future ownership and operation of Cohasset Water and explained why they believe the concession contract option is the best one for the town so far. However, the commissioners explained that they won't know what the best final option will be until they have reviewed any bids that they may receive between now and Town Meeting (the deadline for bidders is April 30; Town Meeting is May 12). The commission hopes to present the best option at Town Meeting.

"We will make our recommendations to the board of selectmen and town manager," said water commission chair Peter DeCaprio. Ultimately, he said, the future of Cohasset Water will be up to Town Meeting to decide.

"If you vote yes [for a concession contract], it gets put into play," said DeCaprio. "If you vote no, it doesn't get considered."

Water commissioner Chris Seebeck said that the concession contract is worth being considered in order to save the town money, transfer risk to the operator, and allow the water department to set water rates. While the concessionaire would make the most money during the final few years of the contract, Cohasset would receive a cash flow upfront.

"This creates a predictable cost structure for a few years," said Seebeck.

Audience members asked questions about whether the concessionaire agreement would really save the town much money in the long run; how low rates could be; whether it would be better to take operations in-house; and what, exactly, a concession contract is.

Some said that they believed taking water operations in-house would lead to a more efficient workforce with "skin in the game" that would take pride in their work. One resident expressed concern that a concessionaire would only do minimal maintenance on equipment.

DeCaprio said that the biggest detriment of having employees on the town payroll is pensions and health care costs; with a concession contract, these expenses would be budgeted in the concessionaire's costs. He also explained that the contract stipulates an operator establish a schedule for preventive maintenance.

The water commission chair also delved into the unique position Cohasset is in with the possibility for joint management of water and sewer. This was the recommendation made by a 2010 audit by the firm Melanson and Heath. DeCaprio said it could be beneficial to have one operator oversee both water and sewer.

"I'm 100 percent in support of joint water-sewer," said DeCaprio. "There's a possibility of the same vendor doing both... I think that approach gives us maximum flexibility."

At the moment, the water department is waiting for bids for the 10-year concession contract. DeCaprio said that seven companies have expressed interest. In the meantime, they also issued an RFP for a one-year management contract, which went out on Monday.

The water department also received a contract renewal proposal from American Water that DeCaprio said is still pretty costly, but is better than the current contract. Since the one-year management contract is similar to the current contract and does not stipulate any staffing levels, it does not require a Town Meeting vote; neither would a contract renewal with American Water.

The bottom line, said DeCaprio, is that no matter which contract gets inked, "We are already on the path to lower-cost operations. No matter what happens, we're going to be better off than we were this year."

Look for more on this issue in an upcoming edition of the Mariner.

Concession contract: What is it?

"Concession contract" is a term that comes up in both the private and public sectors, describing how the way many businesses and public utilities are owned and operated. The water commission painted a picture for audience members: shopping malls and sporting arenas use concession contracts. Think of stores within malls; makeup counters within department stores; or literal concession stands at baseball parks. Both the ballpark and concession stands share in revenues.

For a public utility like Cohasset Water, this is what a concession contract would mean: the town asks for an upfront fee from the owner of the concession – "concessionaire" – and in turn pays a flat fee over the life of the contract (for Cohasset, it would be over the course of 10 years). The concessionaire covers the operating expenses, from staff (provided by the concessionaire) to equipment maintenance; the budgeted expenses are built into the contractor's fee.

The water commission said that they believe the concession contract to be the best option in order to reduce costs and reduce risk from income variability.

COHASSET TV

cast. He previously worked as manager of Plymouth Community Studio, teaching middle and high school students the broadcasting ropes.

"I've been involved with TV, media and editing pretty much all my life," said Roine.

The program director only started his position a few weeks ago, but it's clear that he's already hit the ground running. Roine pointed out parts of the studio that are still being worked on; he plans to add a computer workstation and additional shelving for equipment. Some of the equipment is still being ordered, he explained.

"We're in the process of putting that whole order together," said Roine. "We'll have two high-definition field cameras and a portable switcher to cover sporting events, theater, and lectures. We will purchase high-quality field cameras for people who are little afraid of equipment; they're mostly automatic."

Those who venture into filming on the go "will be proud when they play back [their videos] on air and see the credits rolling," said Roine. "It won't be NBC quality, but it will be nice."

Between the studio space and main control room, those operating the cameras and computer equipment will be able to talk to "the talent" through headphones, Roine explained.

"We'll be able to communicate with the camera people and floor controllers without guests hearing us." The guests, in turn, "can monitor how we're switching the program, see the output, the monitor live feed and compare it to what we're recording."

If all of this sounds confusing and technical, the studio will be holding workshops for those who want to learn the ropes of filming, producing and/or starring in TV shows.

"We're calling out for people interested in hosting our show, creating content and volunteering," said Roine. "They'll learn how to man a camera; we can accommodate anybody. Anybody who's interested, who wants to spend their time on something they like to do, is welcome."

Cohasset TV held an open house on Saturday, March 24, to introduce the community to the new studio, which is housed within the Middle-High School library.

The program director said that it's vital for anyone who wants to produce a show to come in and learn what everyone else in the studio does behind the scenes.

"They can come into the studio and get a hands-on aspect... We do want them to get a full appreciation of how our system works," said Roine. "We really like the hosts to know what's going on with the camera and audio; we like to work the talent and tech crew together. We get a better show out of it, and they have an appreciation for everyone's job."

So far, 143tv has a few shows in the works. "Our Town" is back on the air; the first episode filmed in recent history features interviews with former Town Manager Michael Coughlin and selectmen chair Edwin "Ted" Carr. Roine said that he hopes to film a new episode of "Our Town" in the next few weeks and keep airing the show on a regular basis.

The studio recently filmed members of the Historical Society discussing Cohasset in the 1920's and '30s. The program director said that he'd like to do more shows with them. He would also like to film the library's author/speaker series, as well as school plays and sporting events. The studio recently filmed the High School's "Mr. Skipper" competition, which Roine called "a fun project."

Also in the works: a new "remote studio" at Town Hall. The Board of Selectmen have been meeting in the school's Superintendent's office, where the School Committee meetings are held and filmed, for the past month rather than in their usual meeting place— the selectmen's office in Town Hall.

Roine said that any glitches experienced in filming the selectmen's meetings at Town Hall should soon be resolved. Viewers can expect an improved picture quality and better audio, said Roine. Town Hall will also be equipped with a recording device that will produce a hard copy of the meeting recording immediately after filming has wrapped.

"They won't have to wait for us to process it," said Roine.

The program director appears to be off to a good start, and said that he has volunteers to thank for their input and assistance. Roine said he had a lot of help from Andrew Fewsmith, a freshman at Boston University who worked as an intern at 143tv (see sidebar).

"What a great job he's done," the program director said of Fewsmith. "He helped me get started with how things operate technically. He's a smart guy; it's been so in depth."

Roine also had help from his wife, Kathy Kraysler, who also has production experience. "I needed a volunteer; she's got experience and is great at assisting me."

Cohasset TV costs

While Cohasset's TV studio is a town resource, it is its own corporation, Carlson explained.

"The town budget doesn't pay for anything. We cover Don's salary and buy our own equipment. The money comes to our cable company, Cohasset Community Television, only for communication operations," said Carlson.

The studio costs are paid for by a surcharge on viewers' cable bills.

"Currently, subscribers to Comcast and Fios are paying a 3.5 percent portion of their cable bills," Carlson said, noting that it's only the television portion, even for customer's who have a "triple pay" plan that also provides internet and phone service.

The charge will remain at 3.5 percent until April of 2014; then it will be 3.2 percent until April 2019.

The revenue from these fees goes into the "CCTV" corporation, which was set up by the selectmen and is basically under their purview. The money, Carlson explained, can only be used on public access related expenditures, including capital and operating costs.

Where to watch

Cohasset TV can be viewed on Comcast channels 10 and 22, and Verizon channels 36 and 37. You can also follow 143tv on Facebook: http://www.facebook.com/Cohasset143tv

Working for Cohasset TV: One student's story

Andrew Fewsmith describes his internship at 143tv

Working at 143tv Studios has been a very unique experience in my life. When Pat Martin [Cohasset Community TV director/Cable Advisory Committee chair] first talked to me saying I could be an intern at the new TV studio in the high school, I was intrigued, not knowing what to expect. I thought I would be taught new things and would maybe operate a camera every once and a while; what actually came was something wonderfully better.

As it turned out, being an intern for the studio meant I had to figure out how the whole system, which was brand new to everyone, worked. The installation company gave us a crash course through 12 hours of lessons over two days, but after that, it was all up to me.

While applying (and getting accepted) to Boston University, I had every intention to major in computer science. After just one summer at 143tv Studios, my mind was changed — I am currently changing into a Film and TV major at the College of Communications at Boston University, and have never been more confident.

At BU, I became Technical Director on the Executive Board at WTBU radio the second semester in school. I credit that to the credentials and knowledge I gained through figuring out the systems, and working for hours on end in the studio back in Cohasset. Furthermore, I became involved in BUTV10 on the show "Bay State," the longest running soap opera on college TV, something that I would have never done had I not spent time finding my passion inside the 143 TV studios. As well as Bay State, with BUTV10, I am on the productions team. We are sent out to events around Boston in order to film them for TV, web, or whoever put on the event. Because of the experience I gained in Cohasset, I had a leg up compared to some of the other freshmen on the crew, and was recently offered a position as head of live productions on the BUTV10 senior board.

Overall, 143tv was an experience that allowed me to find a path in life that I have never regretted for a minute, and look forward to, not just as a major in college, but as a career in the future.

SUNDAY AUTHORTALKS

Sunday's Ellis Island discussion, not to be missed

By Marylou Lawrence
Special to the Mariner

Vincent Cannato teaches courses on New York City history, Boston history, immigration history, and 20th century American history. COURTESY PHOTO

Vincent Cannato, history professor at the University of Massachusetts Boston and author of "American Passage, History of Ellis Island," will speak at Sunday AuthorTalks at the Cohasset Library at 4 p.m., on April 1.

Hailed as the first full account of America's landmark port of entry, Cannato's book chronicles the island's history from its early days two centuries ago when it was the site of pirate hangings to its rebirth as a national park in 1986.

But it is Ellis Island's heyday, from 1892-1924, that is the primary focus of Cannato's book. During these years, the greatest mass migration in the history of the world – more than 12 million immigrants – passed through its gates after submitting to medical and intelligence inspections by officials. Only those in steerage class had to go through Ellis Island; those who could afford staterooms were deemed "desirables" and could walk off the ship onto Manhattan soil.

Cannato calls his book "a biography of a place that crystallized the nation's complex and contradictory ideas about how to welcome people to the New World. It is a story about the growing pains of a modern nation struggling with seemingly disturbing changes."

A lively storyteller and meticulous historian and researcher, professor Cannato shows the human side of immigration laws in his stories of politicians, WASP elites, social reformers, Island officials, and the immigrants themselves. He captures a time and a place with inspiring tales of courage and perseverance and also those of broken dreams and suffering.

In 1900, America's immigration law was formed by the idea that a self-governing people could decide who may or may not enter their country. But this notion collided with other ideals, such as the Declaration of Independence's basic tenet that all men are created equal. Cannato said, "That conflict between American ideals is central to an understanding of why Ellis Island was created in the first place." To illuminate the conflict, he traces the politics, prejudices, and ideologues that surround the immigration debate – then as now.

Cannato teaches courses on New York City history, Boston history, immigration history, and 20th century American history. He is the author of "The Ungovernable City: John Lindsay and his Struggle to Save New York" and co-editor of "Living in the Eighties." Professor Cannato also writes for several publications including The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and The New Republic. "American Passage" was recently announced the winner of the 2011 Massachusetts Book Award for nonfiction.

Following Cannato's talk, everyone is invited to a wine and cheese reception which will provide opportunity for further discussion and book signing.

Admission is free, but seating is on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are available at the Cohasset Library, Buttonwood Books, and the Cohasset Historical Society, or phone the library to reserve a seat (383-1348, ext. 1). Everyone is welcome. Visit cohassetlibrary.org for more information about Sunday AuthorTalks.

Sunday AuthorTalks is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club. A Taste of Wine and Spirits, located in the Stop & Shop Plaza, has generously donated wines for the reception.

SCHOOL BRIEF

Dr. Michael Gill to retire

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo announced during last week's School Committee meeting that Dr. Michael Gill, who is currently serving as principal of the Middle-High School, will retire from Cohasset Schools after 32 years.

Gill previously worked as Assistant Principal from 2004 to 2011. He was made interim principal last summer when former principal Joel Antolini left.

Prior to that, Gill served for many years as the health education coordinator for Cohasset schools.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Kids helping kids through performance

DONALD ZOOK

I am very excited about this year's Performathon at Barnes & Noble at Derby Street Shoppes in Hingham. Not only am I emceeing and playing duets with some of my students, but another one of my students, Lauren Healy, won the Artwork Contest and her winning design is featured in all Performathon 2012 materials. Congratulations Lauren!

Performathon is a two-day event where students and faculty members come together to share their talents and raise money to make music and the arts at South Shore Conservatory accessible to kids in need. If you visit Barnes & Noble on Friday and Saturday, March 30 and 31, you can expect to hear students from 4 years old to adult performing anything from "Old MacDonald," to Beethoven to the Beatles. It is a great opportunity to hear all genres of music – from classical and pop, to jazz and blues, from chamber music to rock n' roll. In fact, this year we are dedicating an hour on Friday to our Jazz/Pop/Rock department.

The atmosphere Performathon creates is truly electric! I try to mix it up programmatically so the audience hears a selection of different types of music in each one-hour slot. Some people come in for coffee and to browse, and stay to listen to the wide array of talent. Many have let me know how much they enjoyed listening to the nice variety of performances presented by students from each department at the Conservatory – woodwinds, brass, percussion, piano, strings, guitar, voice and drama. Even our preschool and kindergarten students have the opportunity to perform on Saturday morning in a sing along with their beloved music specialist, Miss Su.

This marathon weekend involves lots of coordination, but it's worth it at the end as we see kids helping kids through performance. Students have fun performing in a new community setting and raise scholarship dollars through sponsorship from their parents, friends and family. As a thank you, these same students have the chance to win an iPod or Nook eReader.

We are grateful to Barnes & Noble for additionally supporting our efforts by donating a percentage of purchases made by our supporters. One hundred percent of all proceeds go directly to our scholarship fund, which allows families in need to take part in our programs.

Please join me at Barnes & Noble during Performathon weekend, Friday, March 30, from 5 to 8 p.m., and Saturday, March 31, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. You can help just by shopping anytime during those two days and mentioning South Shore Conservatory at checkout. A portion of your purchases will be donated back to the Conservatory. You can also participate online by visiting www.bn.com/bookfairs from March 30 through April 3 and entering Bookfair Voucher #10674869 at checkout.

For more information, contact Amy Schomp at SSC by email a.schomp@sscmusic.org or phone 781-749-7565, ext. 19.

Flutist Donald Zook is the artistic director of Performathon. He is also chairman of the Woodwind and Brass Department and director of South Shore Conservatory's Flute Symphony, the largest flute symphony in the country.

AROUND TOWN

Good news keeps coming in

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Loomis Chaffee

Edward Culhane, a junior from Cohasset, was named to the High Honor Roll for the 2011-2012 winter term at The Loomis Chaffee School. Great work, Edward!

Merrimack

Patrick Cantillon of Cohasset was named to the 2011 fall semester dean's list at Merrimack College.

To be named to the dean's list, a student must achieve a 3.25 grade point average or higher, based on a 4.0 grading system. Terrific news, Patrick!

Rochester

David Patrick Toomey, a junior majoring in molecular genetics at the University of Rochester, has been named to the dean's list for academic achievement for the 2011 fall semester.

David, a resident of Cohasset, is the son of Mark D. and Sheila Toomey, and a graduate of Cohasset Middle High School.

Keep up the great work, David!

Honors

Derick Buffum, a senior and son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Buffum, IV.

Riley Calhoun, a senior and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Calhoun.

Mark McKenna, a sophomore and son of Mr. and Mrs. James McKenna.

Congratulations, all!

McNabb published

John McNabb, an elected Water Commissioner in Cohasset 1997 through 2010, recently published an article "Vulnerabilities of Wireless Water Meter Networks" in the March 2012 Journal of the New England Water Works Association.

The article was based on the talk by the same name that McNabb presented at DEFCON, the worlds largest IT security conference, and at the Black Hat USA IT security conference. Both conferences took place in July 2011 in Las Vegas.

"My purpose was to identify potential vulnerabilities in wireless water meter networks, which are increasingly being used by drinking water utilities, so they can be better protected," John said. "While wireless water meters provide many significant advantages to water utilities and their customers, more needs to be done to secure them."

John is principal of Infastructure Security Labs, which researches security issues of critical infrastructures, and South Shore PC Services.

That is the news for now Cohasset. Send in your event information, celebratory news, birthday and new baby wishes and any photos that the community would love to see no later than 5 pm on Tuesdays.

EMAIL:aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com

Write-ups and photos can also be dropped off at the Mariner drop-box in Tedeschi's in the village. Pick-ups are Tuesdays at 8 a.m.

GOING GREEN

On The Green Beat

ERIN DALE

The Green Beat returns this week with more tips from area experts. The following is a submission from home improvement professionals that work in and around Cohasset. Read on to find out their latest "green" tips and tricks!

#1: Recycle leftover paint

James Wolfe, owner, Wolfe Painting Company (Cohasset)
www.wolfepaintingco.com

James Wolfe (Owner):

"We always try to work with our clients to be conservative with their budgets and are always efficient when ordering paint for their projects. With that said, here is an answer to a dilemma homeowners face after a personal painting project: what to do with all the left over paint? Did you know that right in North Scituate, we have the only recycled paint manufacturer in Massachusetts? The Paint Exchange is a great place to recycle your leftover paints, or purchase recycled paint as well. Be sure to visit their website www.recyclereuserepaint.com as there are restrictions in regards to what can be recycled."

#2: Get an energy audit

www.jackconway.com

"This year might be a good one to get that "energy audit" done for your home or business. Some energy audit services are free, so checking the internet for what's available in our region is key for current energy audit programs. With fossil fuel prices continuing to climb for our foreseeable future, an energy audit will only help you plan how to save serious dollars, while making a choice to choose cleaner alternatives and placing 'valued' energy efficient systems into your property. The objective of the energy audit is to help with ideas to decrease the cost of heating and cooling, provide options for energy efficient systems, and offer ideas related to tightening the building envelope with insulation and balanced fresh air ventilation. Funds invested in a 'green energy upgrade' will continue to save dollars year after year and give your home or business the value people are looking for."

#3: Save energy by preventing air filtration

Jeremiah Eck FAIA (Partner), Eck/MacNeely Architects inc. (Boston)
www.eckmacneely.com

"The most underrated and overlooked energy saver is the prevention of air infiltration. If you are building a new home or renovating, I strongly recommend taped rigid insulation on the exterior of your home in addition to your wall insulation. This step will minimize any air infiltration, save energy and, most importantly, make you more comfortable."

#4: Shop vintage dinnerware

dmorgandesign@hotmail.com

"As the landscape turns green, it is a perfect time to think green! With spring in the air, it is time to have lunches, brunches and Easter dinners. If you need to add dinnerware to your collection, it is a great idea to shop for china, stemware and dishes that are vintage or secondhand to add to your inventory. Mixing and matching of different dishes can add a personality to your table. However, as with any good design, keep in mind a theme, whether it be the color, pattern, type of dish or the era of the plates and glassware. They will give your table an instant sense of independence and show off your unique style for spring while repurposing items that you otherwise might not have thought of using."

#5: Create bouquets with found materials

Kelly Dolloff, Owner/Designer, Artistic Blossoms Floral Design Studio (Marshfield)
www.artisticblossoms.com

"Elements for a beautiful arrangement for your living space do not have to be purchased. They can be composed of natural items you find in your surroundings, depending on the season. Evergreens, branches, rocks, moss, twigs that are just blooming green, seashells; sand, feathers, herbs, flowers from your garden, grasses and pinecones all can become a collection to display. Take a walk and see what you find."

COMMUNITY GARDEN CLUB

Awards at Boston Flower Show

Three Cohasset women, Carol Graham, Patty Johnson and club president, Janice Todd, were awarded two blue ribbons for their club entry, "Bolero," in Division II of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society competition that was part of "Blooms" at the Boston Garden and Flower Show on March 13 at the Seaport World Trade Center. The first blue ribbon was the top award in the Bolero class and the second was the "Best of Day" award, which is the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's highest award, given to only one entry of the many dozen entries in Division II during the first three days of the six-day show. The Best of Day award cited the CGCC table design and floral display as exceptional for their "color harmonies and rhythm carried throughout."

How does one win two blue ribbons? If your title is "Bolero" you begin by trying to learn more about that dance than anyone needs to know! You follow that up by listening to a lot of Ravel and other composers of Bolero music. Then you try to absorb and communicate those aspects of Spanish culture, which just might have an effect upon a table setting. A floor length round black tablecloth, a topper tablecloth of orange, gray, gold and black translated that in this case. The napkins were standing, folded as fans, with a Protea, an exotic orange flower, on top of the plates, holding a message of sweet Spanish words. The floral piece was built around a Manzanitas shrub over 3 feet high. White Dendrobium orchids, moss, and more orange Protea were woven throughout the Manzanitas's branches.

"Exuberant!" was the word used to describe the entry.

A CALL FOR PHOTOS:
Send us your "Sign of Spring" shots

Granted, we didn't have much of a winter in 2011-12, but let's not let that dampen the excitement for spring's arrival. We're looking for your "Sign of Spring" photos, whether it's flowers blooming, birds returning to backyards, youth sports practices, golfing, or just doing spring cleaning around the yard. We'll post your signs of spring shots in photo galleries on your Wicked Local website and publish them in your weekly newspaper. We'll take your spring photo submissions through May 31.

Cruise to health forum on Cohasset Harbor

Preparations are underway for Cohasset's second State of the Harbor Forum scheduled for 7 p.m., on Tuesday, April 10, in Bancroft Hall at The Lightkeeper's Residence. The event is sponsored by Cohasset Rotary and is free to public.

A dozen or so Center for Student Coastal Research volunteers have been gathering weekly to help prepare for three brief research presentations that will precede the evening's panel discussion. Each of these research projects was conducted in response to questions and concerns raised by local citizens at the first State of the Harbor Forum in 2010.

One of the planned presentations will highlight the findings of the Cohasset Harbor Foam Study. This research project, conducted by CHS students Emily Castro, Maggie O'Grady and Ellie Tedeschi, under the guidance of Dr. Ann Thomae, studied the source and composition of the foam that collects at the base of the Gulf River in Cohasset Harbor. The students' research was funded by a grant from the Marjot Foundation, and won a second place award at the 2011 Massachusetts State Science Fair.

Highlights from CSCR's Cohasset Harbor Foam Study will be presented at a public forum on the Health of Cohasset Harbor at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, April 10, at The Lightkeeper's Residence. COURTESY PHOTO

A panel discussion including town leaders, ecologists, lobstermen and citizens will follow the CSCR research presentations, and all are welcome to participate in the discussion of strategies to protect and nurture Cohasset Harbor.

Cohasset Community Garden Club recycle bin

Cohasset Community Garden Club's recycle bin is back at the Transfer Station. Because of the heavy traffic at the boutique, the container has been moved over to the Boy Scout Hut and next to the can Dumpster. The container now has signs on it telling people what can be left.

Accepted will be: Laser and inkjet cartridges, cell phones, video games and consoles, digital cameras, DVDs, iPads, iPods, laptops and GPS units.

Cohasset Community Garden Club is working with a recycle company that pays us for the recyclable items. Whatever is usable, they will reuse, and dispose of unusable items in an appropriate manner. The money made will go toward community projects such as Lightkeepers Garden, Junior Gardeners at Deer Hill School, Flower Therapy with Seniors, scholarships and more.

SC column coming soon

The School Committee plans to pen a special column for the Mariner: "Inside the School Committee."

The column will provide an in-depth perspective on matters discussed at school committee meetings, including an inside look at the budget.

The school committee members will base the column topic on what is discussed at meetings; they will review and approve each column during their meetings before it is issued to the Mariner. The committee hopes to submit an article bi-monthly.

Be on the lookout for the first school committee column, coming soon!

OUR VIEW

Welcome, 143tv

It has been a long time coming, but well worth the wait. Cohasset has its own cable-TV studio! Hurray!

By way of background, the former, regional studio housed in Norwell closed in 2009. Turning the clock back even more to the 1980s when cable was relatively new, initially most towns had their own local-access studios.

Local access and community TV in its heyday were tons of fun. Annual "Emmy" awards where held at the former Hugo's (now Atlantica) where local talk-show host Wigmore Pierson of "Pierson to Person" and Cohasset vied for top honors with another local host, Bob Detwiler of Norwell and the "Detwiler Journal."

More recently, Cohasset has been fortunate to have "Our Town" – hosted by Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo — which has been a forum for discussion about local politics, local personalities and local events.

With the transition from regional studio to local studio – "Our Town" did not have a home — but the popular program is staged to make a comeback with several local shows either taped or in the works. Stay tuned to the Mariner for program listings.

We are hopeful that more volunteers of all ages will come forward - students, parents, seniors – to ensure that 143tv has a range of programming.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we have always supported community TV and local coverage of governmental meetings. Over the years it has not been unusual for a citizen watching the selectmen on TV to hightail it down to Town Hall when a subject comes up that they want to weigh in on.

We hope at some point all board meetings (in addition to the selectmen and school committee) can be covered by cable-TV. It is another way to ensure transparency and keep citizens informed.

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

Exciting endeavor for new scoreboard

The Cohasset High Varsity Baseball Team is coming off its second consecutive Division IV State Championship Season and we're looking to commemorate this historic achievement with an exciting project that we hope will celebrate the success of our favorite local pastime for many years to come!

The Cohasset Diamond Club is proudly launching an effort to install a state-of-the-art scoreboard at the home of the State Champions...Milliken Field Complex, we currently do not have a scoreboard there. In an effort to enhance the baseball experience for both players and spectators alike, The Diamond Club solicited proposals from local scoreboard vendors and was very fortunate to secure a generous donation from the Clark Chatterton Memorial Fund to jumpstart the project. However, to make this project a reality, we need your help!

The Cohasset Diamond Club is proudly launching an effort to install a state-of-the-art scoreboard at the home of the State Champions' Milliken Field Complex.

We are reaching out to all family, friends, and fans of Cohasset Baseball to get us to home plate with sufficient funds to complete the project for the 2012 season. In order to do so, we are asking that you consider making a contribution to the Cohasset Diamond Club so that we can fund this exciting endeavor.

We greatly appreciate any amount that you can contribute and ask that you consider making a donation to help the high school teams.

Thank you very much.

Caution urged on concession contract

While the Water Commission offered some information on Monday, it must be weighed against the recent presentation by Corporate Accountability International at St. Stephen's Church.

This public interest group has a long an impressive record of uncovering corporate abuses and its newest campaign "Protecting Public Water" documents the dangers of privatizing public water resources.

While the argument for privatization is based on the premise that the private corporations can do it cheaper and better than the public sector, ever since the crash of 2008, it seems just about every week we here about banks, mortgage giants, investment concerns and other private concerns who have broken the public's trust. Despite this, some like Water Commissioner DeCaprio feel that a concession agreement is the best thing since sliced bread.

As a former prosecutor, I have always been taken such claims with a grain of salt. So have others. Just recently the FBI launched a new effort to uncover corporate wrong doing featuring Michael Douglas star of the "Wall Street" movies warning that "If it sounds too good it usually is."

So to guard against this, where is the oversight? Certainly not from the Water Commission who has recently proclaimed themselves as an entity answering to no one other than themselves. A commission who abandoned "joint management" despite the fact that this had been recommended by the Water Planning Group and was enacted by Town Meeting.

Still, the paramount question is whether privatization and concession is a good model for any town to follow. Research conducted by Corporate Accountability International cite numerous examples from across the country and around Massachusetts where privatization has failed. At the same time, the group has raised about the corporate practices of some of the potential bidders on the Cohasset RFP.

For example, lets take United Water. In Gloucester, the citizens rose up against the proposed deal and passed a home rule petition to prevent the sale of their water company. Recently signed into law by Governor Patrick, its sponsors hail the act as a model for communities looking to protect their public resources.

Take Veolia – in addition to failure in large cities like Indianapolis and New Orleans, Cohasset officials would do well to look at that company's experiences in Lee, Massachusetts – "The Gateway to the Berkshires," and nearby Rockland where federal district court judge Patti Saris found that their subsidiary acted "unfairly and deceptively" to win a contract.

Finally lets take Aquarion – whose President Charles Firolotte acknowledged in an email to Water Commissioner DeCaprio a "willingness to meet with you on a few occasions, offer our views, a template contract and have my Macquarie colleagues spend a considerable time with you." These meetings and Aquarion's treatment of ratepayers in Hingham, Hull and North Cohasset as well as the tactics used by United Water and Veolia in other communities in our state undercut the confidence in any private company being trusted with an important natural resources such as water. The contacts with Aquarion only reinforces a perception that a cloud has been cast over the entire process whether or not Aquarion ever bids on the RFP.

Consequently, the people of Cohasset should reject the concession approach at town meeting. As Gandhi observed "There is enough water for human need but not enough for human greed."

Guided by theses words, Cohasset needs to take steps to ensure that the town's most important resource – water – remains protected.

Cohasset resident to sign latest book

Author P. Gifford Longley book signing event will take place from 1 to 3 p.m., on Saturday, April 7, at Brewed Awakenings, 19 Main St., Hingham. Longley, a resident of Cohasset, will be available to sign copies of his book, "Compelled: Based on a True Story."

"Compelled" is a psychological character study filled with hope and redemption, set in the violent times of early colonial New England. Young John Longley, orphaned in the wake of the Groton massacre, was taken in as a slave by the Abenaki chief, Madockawando. Now on the brink of manhood and suddenly freed from obligation to his captors, 16-year-old John has no intent of returning to the land of his birth. It has been four years since Jack's nephew and nieces were captured by Abenaki Indians. His first plan of ransom failed. Subsequent years of silence have smothered all remaining hope of seeing the children again. But now, as loved ones drop from his life and purpose becomes harder to find, a figure from Jack's past appears. The unexpected visitor's information compels Jack to once more search for the captive and return home with him – no matter what the cost.

HEALTH NOTES

When the world starts spinning

STEVE BOBO

Next week is National Public Health Week Stop by the Board of Health or the office of the Health Nurse at Town Hall for information on some of the events we'll be having in Town to celebrate.

Balance, Dizziness and Vertigo Benign proximal positional vertigo (BPPV) is characterized by brief episodes of mild to intense dizziness. Symptoms of vertigo are triggered by specific changes in the position of your head, such as tipping it up or down, or by lying down, turning over or sitting up in bed. You may also feel out of balance when standing or walking. All of these symptoms are disorders caused by problems in the inner ear. Its symptoms are repeated episodes of a spinning sensation from changes in the position of the head. The inner ear contains collections of calcium. In people with BPPV, the calcium is dislodged from its usual position and migrates over time into one of the canals in the ear. When the head is reoriented relative to gravity, the gravity-dependent movement of the heavier "ear rocks" within the affected semicircular canal, cause balance problems and vertigo. Triggered by actions like tilting the head, rolling over in bed, looking up, sudden head motion or post-head injury, BPPV may be made worse by changes in barometric pressure or sometimes, by changes in the weather, lack of sleep or stress.

BPPV is one of the most common acoustic disorders in people with dizziness and migraine and is implicated in cases linking balance and vertigo, caused by genetic factors and vascular damage to the labyrinth within the ear. Diagnosis may be accomplished by a thorough review of a patient history and by an experienced audiologist by performing a simple head movement called a roll test. Patients with BPPV will report a history of vertigo as a result of fast head movements. Many patients are also capable of describing the exact head movements that provoke their vertigo.

The Roll Test can determine whether the horizontal semicircular ear canal is inolved.http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Benign_paroxysmal_positional_vertigo - cite_note-Schubert-5 The test requires a patient to be in a supine position with the head elevated approximately 20 degrees. The examiner then quickly rotates the head 90 degrees alternately to the left and right side, and checks for vertigo and erratic eye movement, followed by gently bringing the head back to the starting position. Assessment of BPPV is best done by a professional skilled in management of dizziness disorders.

Two Treatment Methods have been found effective for relieving symptoms of posterior canal BPPV: the Canalith repositioning procedure (CRP) or Epley maneuver, and the liberatory or Semont maneuver. Particle repositioning can be performed during a clinic visit by health professionals or taught to patients to practice at home. Frequently, patients are able solve the vertigo problem themselves. Both treatments, when performed by a health professional, appear to be equally effective. When practiced at home, the CRP is more effective than the Semont maneuver. The most effective repositioning treatment for posterior canal BPPV is the therapist-performed CRP combined with home practiced CRP. Frequently, home treatment can substantially reduce the nuisance of vertigo. Brandt-Daroff exercises may be prescribed by the clinician as a home treatment alternative, usually in conjunction with or in lieu of particle repositioning maneuvers. The exercise is a form of habituation exercise, designed to allow the patient to become accustomed to the position, which causes the vertigo symptoms. The Brandt-Daroff exercises are performed in a similar fashion to the Semont maneuver; however, as the patient rolls onto the unaffected side, the head is rotated toward the affected side. The exercise is typically performed three times a day with five to 10 repetitions each time, until symptoms of vertigo have resolved for at least two days. Medical treatment with anti-vertigo medications may be considered but in most cases is not indicated.

It's usually better to figure a way to live with your bodily idiosyncrasies than to go to the trouble of trying to fix its minor drawbacks.

For more information call Tara Tradd 781-383-4116.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Farming is all around us

There is something for each teacher at every grade level, a piece of curriculum for every MCAS weary, time on task framework.

JON BELBER

Bags of already read newspapers are diverted from the recycling bin. Local wood chips from a local uncle, who happens to be an arborist. Freshly tilled soil awaiting seeds, courtesy of a parent with a rototiller and a commitment to helping out at his children's school. Two additional parents braving the back-to-cool weather to help prepare the school farm garden for all the classroom teachers who wish to connect growing with curriculum and spinach with a late May salad in the cafeteria. The also chilly children come off the nearby slides to help spread those chips and gently sling the tilled soil out of the path and into the raised bed.

These are just some of the sights to be seen around the many school farm gardens – about 21 in total – that exist in front of, next to or behind elementary schools in Hingham, Scituate, Norwell, Marshfield, Quincy and Cohasset High School. There is an article worthy for each school farm garden, as each one has different levels of participation, different origins and many varying styles: raised beds, farm rows, pizza gardens, oblong shapes and beds constructed by students' hands, saws and hammering nails. Like the organic farmers at Holly Hill Farm taking walks in the fields to check for water levels, seeing what rocks have heaved their sharp heads and to test whether or not to start up the tractor amid the first-to-grow weeds, the farming communities at schools are doing much the same.

A school farm garden, so named as they are often intended to host flowers and healthy, naturally raised fruits, herbs and vegetables, can serve as a microcosm of the larger organic farm. Holly Hill is growing a diverse selection of produce in order to go to market and sell from its farmstand in the 1785 main barn. The school children, their teachers and sometimes the Holly Hill Farm teachers grow produce to help understand the life cycle of a plant, the stages of growth and to taste some salad when it is time to harvest. Sometimes, the potatoes and beans make it into the cafeteria as a supplement to lunch and the strawberries make it to the teachers' lounge, unless nibbled during recess.

There is something for each teacher at every grade level, a piece of curriculum for every MCAS weary, time on task framework. There are teachers who bring students to the farm and the school farm garden before an MCAS test to help with hands-on review. There is also just the opportunity to wander in and amidst the flowers, the garlic spiking through the straw, the burgeoning sugar snap peas and a grassy, hopefully untreated, knoll to sit and journal and sketch.

But in this early stage of spring (forgetting our faux heat last week) there is great excitement and community involvement in readying these spaces for spring seed sowing, planting, weeding and growth. Even a 12-by-13 foot newly converted, dug-up grass turned farm garden at Cushing Elementary in Scituate counts as an established farm garden. Many parents and kids separated rocks from sod and turned in compost so as to sow peas and spinach. Whatever time is invested is valuable at a local school and there are countless ways in which one can become involved. For now, it's pulling resources, calling on neighbors and engaging in the age old act of providing food so all may eat.

LIVING WELL

What's keeping you awake?

JOAN F. WRIGHT, CMC

While March is best known for basketball madness and the long-awaited first day of spring, it's also full of health awareness days for diabetes, poison prevention, colorectal cancer, vision wellness and nutrition. All are important but most intriguing to me is March features National Sleep Awareness.

Evidently, sleep isn't so easy for some folks. In fact, 70 million people suffer from some sort of sleep problem or disorder and Americans spent $23.7 billion on sleep aids in one year! (2008 Marketdata Enterprises study). Pregnancy and restless leg syndrome are more well known causes for sleep issues but did you know that ADD, GERD (acid reflux), asthma, dementia, and Parkinson's can also affect one's sleep?

Age also plays a factor in sleep issues. Many of us have experienced the affect newborn babies have on sleep. Their days and nights get reversed; interruption in sleep is commonplace, and parents are running on half a tank due to it all. Naps are vital but in most cases, there is a light at the end of the tunnel, or better yet, a nightlight for the eventual long night's sleep!

But then comes the teenage years. Adolescence brings about a shift in biological sleep patterns, pushing sleeping and waking to later times. Teenagers typically are unable to fall asleep before 11 p.m. and need at least nine hours of sleep each night to best function during the day. Unfortunately most schools start very early so teens are at a disadvantage during the school week. Weekends where they stay up later and sleep in longer affect their biological clocks and quality of sleep. Poor sleep results in mood issues and depression, can adversely affect school and activity performance, may make one more prone to acne, poor eating habits, and weight gain, and can lead to aggressive or inappropriate behavior. The key for teenagers who can't start school later in the morning, is to try to factor in rest periods and/or short naps during the week, engage in passive and relaxing activities before bed (reading, taking a warm bath) and balance weekend sleeping with the weekday schedule.

Sleep disrupted by snoring is another common issue. Getting to the source of the snoring is essential. Sinus issues, sleep position, and sleep apnea are some of the causes that can be remedied through professional help. Sleep apnea is on a diagnostic rise, with 18 million Americans having it. Sleep study tests can define the degree of the apnea and recommend corrective measures, some of which are as simple as sleeping on one's side.

Menopause brings about its own set of sleep issues, as do other age-related circumstances. Medical conditions such as chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), epilepsy, and Alzheimer's also affect sleep patterns and habits.

So when you're lying awake at night thinking you're the only one who can't sleep, you're not! Check out the National Sleep Foundation's website www.sleepfoundation.org, which has a wealth of information on specific sleep issues, what interacts and interferes with sleep, and resources to help alleviate problems. And speak to your doctor about ongoing problems with sleep.

FOR THE RECORD

Rangecast scans present and past

Not only can listeners hear what's happening as it happens, but you will also be able to rewind the scanner much like a DVR to listen to events that happened hours or even days ago.

GREGORY MATHIS

The sound of sirens caught my attention Saturday morning as I sat at the kitchen table with a cup of coffee. As the public safety vehicles passed my street and the sirens faded in the distance, I fired up my laptop and went directly to my hometown Wicked Local website.

After a couple of clicks — first on the News tab in the top navigation on the homepage, then to the tab below that reads "Police & Fire Scanner" — I was listening to a dispatcher and firefighters relay information about the incident they were responding to.

It turned out not to be a big deal, but it felt good knowing what was happening as it was happening.

Police and fire scanners are nothing new, especially for news organizations. We count on them to keep us informed about major accidents, fires or other breaking news stories from the actual sources.

There are many who have police and fire scanners at home and listen for their own purposes. It's not really entertainment because sometimes there's bad stuff happening, but it is somewhat empowering to know what's going on, especially in your own neighborhood.

The police and fire scanner on your Wicked Local site will not only keep you informed about what's happening in your neighborhood and community, but in nearby communities as well. Each scanner includes the police and fire frequencies for six neighboring towns to keep you up to date with public safety activity in your region.

You can keep the buttons green for each community to listen to all of them, or you can select certain communities to block by clicking the button to red on the towns you're not interested in.

Full instructions on how to use the scanner and take advantage of its multiple functions can be found below the scanner player on your Wicked Local website.

We know from past experience readers want to know what's going on with their local police and fire departments. From police and fire logs, to short police brief items, to larger stories about major crimes or big fires, residents seem to crave this type of news in print and online.

The online police and fire scanner, powered by Rangecast, takes our coverage to another level. Not only can listeners hear what's happening as it happens, but you will also be able to rewind the scanner much like a DVR to listen to events that happened hours or even days ago.

So the next time you hear a fire engine or police cruiser pass by your house or place of work with sirens blaring, see smoke off in the distance or drive past a bad accident scene, be sure to check Wicked Local for the latest news, but also launch the police and fire scanner to hear for yourself what is happening or rewind it to find out what had happened.

Better yet, keep your Wicked Local website open at home or work (if it's allowed) and the scanner on to hear what's happening in real time.

Balanced budget on the table

No override for fiscal 2013

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Cohasset's interim Town Manager, Michael Milanoski, has introduced a balanced budget for fiscal 2013. He is also providing a five-year forecast that shows the town's projected revenue.

"It's a sustainable budget for the next five years based on the same level of services," said Milanoski. "That means we don't anticipate any overrides in the next five years."

The town is in the midst of a spending freeze for the remainder of fiscal 2012 to cover a deficit of over $300,000, but with the next fiscal year budget, which starts July 1, Milanoski hopes the town will be able to "live within its means."

There are some potential offsets to help with the shortfalls in FY '12, including a reimbursement from the South Shore Regional Emergency Call Center (SSRECC) of $30,915, which will help offset overtime in the police department.

There is also $65,802 left in the $125,000 ice and snow budget, which Milanoski calls "knock on wood – warm days" money.

The projected net shortfall is $346,496; the town manager believes this over-expenditure will have to be covered by the town's stabilization fund, which would have to be approved by Town Meeting.

Milanoski hopes that the spending freeze will help reduce the expenditures. "We're trying to reduce costs wherever possible," he said.

Cleaning house

To tie up the loose ends of FY '12, Milanoski described his plan going forward.

First of all, the town is in need of a treasurer collector; this unfilled position has been temporarily staffed by outside financial consultants. Dan Sullivan has been working part-time in the position, assisting Finance Director Mary Gallagher.

"We're basically fixing the operation of our financial management," said the town manager, who praised Gallagher's work. "Mary is fabulous; she's my right hand and my left hand person. Together we're making a lot of important changes. All are necessary – as it will be spelled out in audit reports – to improve our bond rating."

That's another priority Milanoski is focused on: having the town refinance its bonds. Doing so should save Cohasset homeowners $750,000, he said.

"Bonding is another opportunity for us to save money," Milanoski explained. "By refinancing our existing debt at a lower percentage rate, it should net savings of $750,000."

The town's fiscal management policies, which were approved by selectmen on Feb. 28, stipulate that debt service and capital stabilization should be no more than 10 percent of the annual operating budget. Debt roll-off and funding below 10 percent will be reallocated to a capital fund project with approval of Town Meeting. The policy further calls for the town to strive to issue debt for shorter periods than the maximum allowable when the statutory limit exceeds 10 years.

Another financial housecleaning issue Milanoski suggested to the selectmen last week involves selling the town-owned house at 821 Jerusalem Road. If the sale is closed out by the end of the current fiscal year, the money could be used as free cash and to replenish the stabilization fund, which will have to be tapped into in order to pay this year's bills, Milanoski said.

The town manager suggested hiring an auctioneer to oversee the home's sale; the auctioneer would receive a percentage of the sale, but would also do all of the processing for the town.

Capital Budget Committee chair Steve Gaumer said that he supported the idea, and that his committee would recommend putting the money from the sale back into stabilization.

The selectmen voted last week to approve Milanoski setting up an auction to sell the property.

The town manager is also trying to wrap up another tricky financial matter before the close of FY '12: issues with 13 non-union employment contracts that were issued by former town manager Michael Coughlin this fiscal year. Of these 13 contracts, one given notice to the selectmen under the Town Manager Act; two were approved but require Town Meeting votes; and 10 are currently under review by Town Counsel.

The total cost of these 10 contracts was $164,708; $78,000 appears to be new costs, or raises, to FY '12. Some salaries were increased by 21 percent.

These changes, approved by Coughlin, have led to "multiple grievances" being filed, said Milanoski. Two of these grievances are unfair labor practice suits.

Operations Department

One of these contracts was for the director of the Operations Department that Coughlin created last fall. A previous audit by the firm Melanson and Heath suggested a joint management of water and sewer, which the Operations Department was overseeing. While Milanoski acknowledged the need for this department, he said that it simply isn't in the budget.

The Operations Dept. would have cost an additional $250,000 of the town's operating budget, Milanoski said. "The only way to [fund the Operations Dept.] would be an override or to cut other departments significantly."

"The status quo is that there is still a public works department and building facilities department. The water and sewer departments work under the water and sewer commissions... they're independently and privately run, although I jointly manage them. To put a base of a quarter million on top of managing those two departments, the town cannot afford," Milanoski said.

Coughlin created the Operations Department in order to provide full-time positions for the two special assistants to the town manager known as "The Greenbush Guys," Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan. The two worked as engineering consultants on the Greenbush rail project, and have been retained as part-time consultants to work on special town projects and grant programs.

Milanoski said that there is still a need to have consultants work on these special tasks. "I'm looking to develop a project manager position or contract on a part-time basis to assist me on smaller infrastructure projects, grant programs, and other smaller projects."

There is also a need to add a position to the public works department, which normally has five employees but currently has four. The fifth position was cut out, but Milanoski said he hopes to restore funding there. He said that this is the only new hire that will be funded as a full-time position.

Fiscal '13 Forecast

The town manager said he is trying to make the next year's fiscal budget as transparent as possible.

Some confusion should be cleared up by centralizing the purchasing process. Any supplies needed by various departments will all be built into the central purchasing office, Milanoski explained.

While the town is enjoying a revenue stream in the current fiscal year of $693,178 from the Avalon apartments and Cook Estates, this number is expected to taper off over the next five years, down to $450,000 in fiscal year 2014.

"These revenue projections are what our sustainable budget is built upon," said Milanoski.

Rather than factoring the revenue numbers into the town's operational budget, the town manager is in favor of feeding it into stabilization. "We're putting in, for the next three years, $1 million into the stabilization account."

This money comes directly "from the spike in new growth and permit fees we'll have for the next two years," said Milanoski. "We don't want to put a one-time spike into the operating budget; it will create a structural deficit.

"The good news is that year over year, once we pay our fixed costs, the net money will be available to spread between the schools and town," Milanoski continued. The net change is projected to be $759,974 in FY '13; this number goes up by about 3 percent each fiscal year.

The total town budget for FY '13, not including the school side, is $9,574,275, with 39 percent new revenue. For more on the school department's budget, see related story.

Schools approve FY13 proposed budget

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The School Committee held its public budget hearing Wednesday night, going over the proposed fiscal 2013 budget.

School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro gave a PowerPoint Presentation to update the school committee on the budget and ask for their vote. After receiving the school committee's approval, the budget will be sent to the Town Manager's office to be approved and added to the warrant for Town Meeting (which is scheduled for May 19).

The proposed FY '13 budget is $15,866,062, which is an increase of 3.01 percent, or $463,584 over fiscal year 2012.

DeGennaro told the committee that these numbers are in agreement with the town manager's numbers.

The proposed budget is not a level-funded one; there are increases included for contractual obligations, fixed costs and new positions. As contract negotiations are pending, the proposed budget does not yet include any contractual salary raises for faculty or staff; it also does not include any obligations for department chairs or program supervisor positions.

Assumptions that impacted the proposed budget include step increases and column changes for staff, which is estimated to cost $167,391; 1.5 new positions at the Middle School (due to the class sizes increasing next year), which will cost approximately $79,994; reorganization of K-6 staff to accommodate the increased population shift at the Middle School; a new part-time foreign language position at the High School, to cost approximately $24,945; and a Circuit Breaker offset of $366,447, assuming a 60 percent reimbursement, which will help defray costs of Special Education out of district tuition costs.

A change was made to add in a water and sewer budget of $100,351 district wide.

The district wide summary shows an increase of 7.4 percent in expenses for a total of $3,174,790.

School budget, by the numbers:

Total proposed for FY '13: $15,866,062
Dollar increase over FY '12: $463,584
Percent increase over FY '12: 3.01 percent
Percentage of total spending, town contribution: 79.9 percent
Percentage of total spending from fees, gifts, boosters, grants and tuitions: 10.5 percent
Total cost to run district: $17,728,423

DeGennaro gave an overview of each school's budget.

Joseph Osgood School's budget decreased by 1.3 percent due to a retiring teaching position. This position will not be replaced, but rather moved to the Middle School to accommodate the growing class size there. The school's total proposed budget is $2,591,087.

The Deer Hill School budget is seeing a 5.1 percent increase. The Education Support Professionals line item has gone up due to the loss of a grant. Deer Hill's budget total is $3,153,447.

The Middle School budget is also increasing by 5.1 percent, since 1.5 new positions are being added. One of these positions is being added from the Joseph Osgodd school, while the other half-position is for foregin language. The total sum for these two positions is $80,000. The Middle School's total budget is $2,437,206.

The High School budget is going up by 0.2 percent, with a total of $4,509,533. While the Education Support Professionals cost went up, as did guidance and health services, specialist teachers, instructional materials and supplies, as well as utilities, the cost of classroom teachers went down with a retirement in the music department. This position will be filled for the fall, but at a lower rate.

School committee chair Dr. Helene Lieb said that she would like to see the cost of utilities go down by implementing alternative energy — and soon. The school committee has been working with the Town's Alternative Energy Committee to look into installing solar panel's on the Middle-High school roof. While the committees have been working on drafting a request for proposals (RFP) for a solar power vendor to install the panels, the school committee members agreed with Lieb that the project should be put on a fast track.

Lieb said that she would like to meet with DeGennaro twice a month to work on the solar panel project.

"Think of how much we could save on utilities," said Lieb. "We should be able to decrease by 10 to 15 percent." She added that the schools should be able to obtain a grant to fund the project.

School committee vice chair Jeanne Astino said that she was disappointed that the budget did not contain a section for technology costs.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that she has been meeting with interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski to find a way to fund the schools' growing technology needs, but it just wasn't in the budget for the next fiscal year.

"We preferred to do it through the operational budget, but we couldn't at this point," said Cataldo.

School committee member Dr. Paul Schubert said that the town will have to find a way to pay for technology, since the state has mandated it. "The town will have to pay for it, support it and do it. It's not unfunded money; it's a requirement."

Schubert added that when the town gets free cash certified by the Department of Revenue in the fall, a portion should be given to the schools to cover technology costs.

UPDATE

Chief Tech Officer position advertised

By ErinDale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Superintendent of Schools Barbara Cataldo said that the Chief Technology Officer (CTO) position, which was discussed during last week's Board of Selectmen meeting and at the School Committee meeting, has been posted on SchoolSpring.com and will appear in the Sunday edition of the Boston Globe.

The schools currently have a technology director, but the CTO position would be shared by the schools and the town and become a year-round position.

Cataldo said this position is needed in order to help the district meet its growing technology needs; the schools must also keep up with the state mandate for improved technology in schools.

"We're behind at this point," said Cataldo. "It's a disadvantage for students."

Cataldo's technology vision for the district involves moving away from a PC-based platform and working with Apple to implement a paperless tablet system.

Cataldo's technology vision for the district involves moving away from a PC-based platform and working with Apple to implement a paperless tablet system. Students have already begun utilizing 50 available iPads, which have been split up between the schools. Eventually, Cataldo would like to see every student with an iPad.

The Superintendent recently presented a four-year technology plan to the Capital Budget Committee that itemized the district-wide tech needs.

Cataldo, along with School Committee vice chair Jeanne Astino and Capital Budget chair and vice chair, Steve Gaumer and Jack Keniley, visited Burlington public schools, where the group "got to see what I'm envisioning." Burlington High School provided 1,000 iPads to teachers and students this school year in an initiative to eliminate textbooks.

The Superintendent said that Cohasset schools would likely need grants to fund her vision.

"I'm working together with Capital Budget Committee and [interim Town Manager] Michael Milanoski to realize this dream."

Cataldo said that she has been working with a student on a film about the iPad that will be presented at an April school committee meeting.

BATTLE LINES

they would be giving tacit approval to the fact their coordinator had been demoted and had a cut in pay – an action they vehemently opposed.

Ultimately, the board did give its approval so Pilczak would be paid but did so "under protest." (Pilczak was on the job Wednesday night in her position assisting the board; the debate over her position preceded a scheduled public hearing on warrant articles and other business matters).

Planning Board Chairman Stuart Ivimey noted that in recent months he implored his fellow board members not to comment or get involved in the controversy surrounding the ultimate, recent dismissal of former Town Manager Coughlin. But Wednesday night, with Ivimey's blessing, the gloves came off.

"The town ought to live up to its obligations it makes to people," Ivimey said. He noted that the need for the position of planning coordinator had been thoroughly discussed and aired over the past two years and that the additional funds were appropriated at the fall Town Meeting.

Ivimey said the former town manager had the authority, by virtue of his position to issue the contract. "If he broke some procedural rule that does not void the contract," he said. "The town is running us into a stream of litigation that will cost us far more than what it should be paying JoAnn."

In selectmen discussions of the non-union contracts, Milanoski has explained that the contracts were not properly handled in that there is no renewal provision in the Cohasset Town Manager Act (which governs the Town Manager's authority) but there is a reappointment process that allows selectmen a 15-day window to reject the appointment. That did not occur with the 10 non-union contracts that have been voided. He said seven of the 10 contracts were done three weeks prior to Coughlin's suspension.

Moore said the entire matter makes him ill. He said treating people this way — who work hard and give everything they have to the job — is "enough to make me sick. I have no respect for people who would do that to JoAnn," he said.

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson said the matter should be resolved immediately. "I would like to implore the Board of Selectmen to fix this tonight so we do not have to go on any longer with the situation that is before us."

Samuelson was highly critical of Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr who had been invited to the meeting but did not attend. (Milanoski said Carr was in Greenfield and could not make it). He said the board wanted Carr there because he would have the authority to fix the contract issue.

"It shows a lack of respect for the planning board, a lack of communications and an unwillingness to materially participate," Samuelson said. Then, in a thinly veiled reference to Coughlin's termination as town manager over communication issues, Samuelson said, "I have heard rumors that this type of behavior is an offense that could lead to termination." His remarks drew some chuckles from the audience.

"I would also like to suggest that the Board of Selectmen consider the value – the cost of loss of political capital on this. Is this a battle that they want to fight?"

Samuelson added that he was not familiar with the other non-union contracts at issue. "The Board of Selectmen may or may not be acting responsibly on the others – but I just know they are not on this one."

He said the Planning Board was not going to let the matter drop and was going to ask Town Counsel to pull all the emails, minutes and any other documents showing when the planning coordinator position was discussed.

"It is not a defense to say 'well, we did not know about this' – this was widely known and discussed. This was not slipped under the table in JoAnn's case," Samuelson said.

Planning Board member William Hannon put the matter bluntly noting trying to save money by reducing Pilczak's salary was ludicrous. "This is like trying to put out a five-alarm fire with a garden hose," Hannon said. He went on to say that without Pilczak the board could not function. "What you are doing is punishing a perfectly acceptable employee," he said.

Milanoski tried to douse the fire ignited by the Planning Board by acknowledging that everyone recognizes that Pilczak is a solid employee. But he went on to say that there are many employees at Town Hall that also work hard. "We must treat each in an equally fair, transparent, and open fashion," he said.

Milanoski said the selectmen did vote to reject all 10 contracts and revert all salaries and positions to fiscal 2012 appropriations authorized by Town Meeting because the contracts were in conflict. He said he was authorized to work with each employee to develop a resolution. He said Pilczak's promotion took her out of the clerical union at Town Hall and therefore eliminated a union position, something that should have been negotiated. "If the town is going to eliminate a union position, it has the right to do that but it has to go into collective bargaining."

Milanoski said in the fiscal 2013 proposed budget, there is money to establish a stipend for the building department office manager position in addition to the regular salary. He also told the Planning Board that a new personnel policy was in the works and stressed that all positions that fall under the Town Manager and Board of Selectmen are being evaluated with new job descriptions. He said the goal is to ensure that both non-union and union employees are treated in a fair and unbiased way.

The Planning Board was not against the town moving forward with new personnel policies but was not happy with retroactive decisions that affected Pilczak, who, in their view, had a valid contract.

"Applying principles going ahead may be in every conceivable way be correct, but you are applying rules retroactively," Hannon said.

"The only people that are going to happy about this are the damn lawyers and I am tired of that as a taxpayer," he said.

Motion

In that the Cohasset Board of Selectmen acted and continue to act in a manner that is extremely disruptive to the proper functioning of the Cohasset Planning Board, specifically:

- Its unfair treatment of the Planning Coordinator;
- Its failure and/or refusal to pay her salary in accordance with the terms of a written contract between her and the Town;
- Its attempt to demote her;
- Its unilateral attempt to void/ignore/renege on the Town's obligations set forth in said contract; and
- Its failure and/or refusal to follow through on assurances made by the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen that the Planning Coordinator be "held harmless" of any adverse consequence(s) arising out of this attempt to void/ignore/renege on said contract:

We therefore are compelled to record a vote of no confidence in the current Board of Selectmen and most strongly recommend it reverse its course of conduct and decision relative to the Planning Coordinator.

Dated March 28, 2012 and passed unanimously.

MBTA TO HIKE FARES

Bus, ferry service to remain

No weekend rail service

Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, has announced that the MBTA's final recommendation maintains bus and ferryboat service to Hingham and Hull, but eliminates weekend commuter rail service.

"I am happy to hear that the ferry boat service and bus service to Hingham and Hull will be maintained as part of the MBTA's final plan," said Rep. Bradley. "While the level of fare increases is higher than I would have liked, especially during tough economic times, I am pleased that we will not see any major disruptions to boat or bus service for commuters and others who depend upon public transportation."

Bradley said he would continue to advocate for having weekend ferry boat service to Hull during the busy summer months.

Secretary of Transportation Richard Davey announced at the State House briefing that the MBTA is recommending a 35 percent fare increase for the ferryboats. Bus fares would increase 20 percent, and weekend commuter rail service on the Greenbush and Kingston/Plymouth lines would be eliminated. Commuter rail riders would also see a fare increase of approximately 20 percent, with amounts varying based upon zone.

The cost of a trip for most disabled persons who depend on The MBTA's RIDE service would go to $4 from $2, with those living outside the MBTA's designated service zones paying up to $5 for a ride.

The proposal must still be ratified by the MBTA Board of Directors, which could act on the recommendations as early as next week. Details are available on www.mbta.com.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

Decisions, Decisions...

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

The first decision to make is where to attend camp. Parents and guardians do that on behalf of children and in partnership with them. Some teens even spearhead the entire process of choosing camp. But, selecting a camp—difficult as it can be—is just the beginning. Camp experiences teach children about decision-making individually and as group members. These are life lessons that set young people up for success in college and life, and camp provides them differently than families and schools do. Learning to become a better decision-maker can be a major benefit of attending summer camp.

Child development experts stress the importance of allowing children to make decisions and to live with the consequences. But, that's not easy in today's world—or safe. At camp, children are empowered to make small and large decisions throughout the experience, as developmentally appropriate. For preschool age day campers decision-making might look like determining which towel and sun hat to pack in a backpack each evening in preparation for the next day. Young overnight campers often get to experience a variety of planned activities to learn more about what's available; but it's common for them to be able to choose between electives during some portion of the day. And as campers return summer after summer, they are provided with more and more opportunities to make their own choices programmatically.

In addition to deciding what to do at camp, there are many other individual decisions campers get to make. How to dress. How to participate in a difficult group conversation. These decisions are overseen by either counselors or parents/guardians, but the point is to allow children to do as much as possible. Counselors may remind campers that swimming comes before lunch and encourage campers to wear or pack their swimsuits. Counselors help a quiet camper provide feedback in a difficult discussion about working together as a group.

Camps specialize in facilitating group decision-making opportunities. And the emphasis is on the facilitation. Trained adults work in partnership with campers to experience and process life as a group. Children get to plan adventures with adult guidance at overnight and day camps. Planning requires the ability to make a series of simple and complex decisions as part of a learning progression. Campers don't just go on a ten day trek in the White Mountains or white water rafting down a river. A musical production with costumes and choreography doesn't just happen. For these larger experiences to be successful, counselors work up to them through a decision-making process. Campers get to decide whether or not to go out for the play. The group doing technical theatre decides how to gather the props and how to pull creative costumes together. Staff members guide a hiking group to select which mountain to climb. After following a progression of increasingly difficult hikes, counselors guide the group to plan and pack their food and gear for the big trip.

Children feel empowered by decision-making opportunities. Summer camp offers these and many other lessons that come from learning by doing. Knowing how to decide is a critical life skill... practicing decision-making is the way to build it. Colleges and employers value young people who are confident decision-makers. Summer camp experiences are helping build this critical competency!

Twin titles

Cohasset Boys 6A Travel team wins league and tourney titles

GateHouse News Service

The Cohasset Boys 6A Basketball Team finished its season in grand style on Sunday by winning the Patriot League Championship and the Bourne Busnengo Tournament on the same day.

These accomplishments mark the second straight year that the team has captured both its league title and the Bourne tournament title.

For the season, the boys finished with a record of 35-2 and reeled off an amazing 25 straight wins to end the season.

Just how well did these young Skippers play over the course of the 2011-12 campaign?

In Patriot League play, they won by an average margin of 32 points per game.

Over the course of a 37 game season, including the two losses, the team had only four games where the final score was within five points. In summary - from the first game to the last - the 6A team played a consistently outstanding brand of basketball.

SOUTH COASTAL HOCKEY LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Three goals make magic for most

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The magic number in the Legends Div. of the South Coastal Hockey League is three.

The team that scores three goal has a strong chance to win their game as the Whalers, Sharks and Stingers proved this past Sunday night.

The Whalers improved to 8-1 when they have scored three or more goals in a game as Skip Tufts of Scituate, Rockland's Erik Jacobson and Chuck Morrison of Marshfield had a goal each in their 3-2 win over the Crusaders to take over first place in the Legends Div.

Scott Mondeau and Duxbury's Brian Murphy scored the goals for the Crusaders.

The Sharks got two goals from Art Riccio and one from Mike Valenti of Marshfield and two assists from Hanover's Drew Cammarotta as they rallied from a 2-0 deficit for a 3-2 win over Saints to take over second-place in the Legends Div. The Sharks improve to 8-0 when they score three or more goals in a game.

James McNeill and Jim Callahan both scored a goal to give the Saints a 2-0 lead in the first period.

Pembroke's Scott Kelly and Paul Smyth had a goal and an assist each as the Stingers improved to 6-0 when they score three or more goals in a game in their 3-0 Legends Div. win over the Toros.

Norwell's Joe Murray also scored for the Stingers and Mark Frano of Pembroke recorded the shutout.

Duxbury's Drew Fitzgerald, Bruce Humfreys and Scituate's Dave Howe each scored a goal and assisted on another as the Black Hawks scored four times in the last 8:15 to pull out a 4-1 Classics Div. win over the Canadiens. Norm Racicot also scored for the Black Hawks, who tie the Red Wings for the fourth and final playoff spot in the Classic Div. with three games left for both teams.

Tom Lema of Marshfield scored the Canadiens goal in the second period.

Bob Sideropolous scored two goals, while Pembroke's Bill Sawtelle added a goal and an assist to lead the Rangers to a 5-2 Classics Div. win over the Bruins. Marshfield's Joe Craig and Jim Hutchinson also scored for the Rangers.

Hanover's Jim Martin scored a goal and assisted on another and Pembroke's Jim Mulhern scored a goal for the Bruins.

Steve Mudge of Marshfield scored a goal and assisted on three others as the Classics Div. leading Maple Leafs rallied from a 2-1 deficit for a 6-2 victory over the Red Wings.

Rockland's Marty DeCourcey scored two goals, Dave Salvaggio, Tim Ryan and Jeff Gauthier had a goal each and Marshfield's Mike Maher had two assists for the Leafs.

Kevin Barnard and Pat Burke had a goal and an assist each for the Red Wings.

SELECT

Hannah Vogt started the scoring with a bullet into the left corner after a nice centering pass late in first half. The second half was more of the same as the girls continued to control the play and tacked on additional goals by Hingham's Kira Maguire and Brockton's Gabby DelPico. The opponents had limited had scoring chances while goalkeeper Bethany Dunk posted her second shutout of the spring.

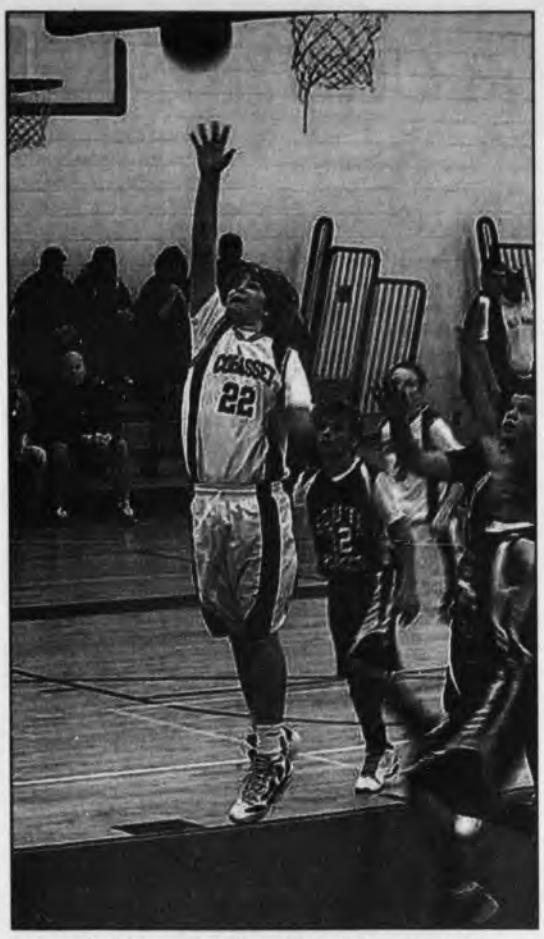
Saturday brought a contest against the New England Aztecs, and saw the Select girls earn a hard fought 4-3 victory. Hanson's Lexi Grazioso posted her first goal of the spring on a nifty move and shot into the lower right corner to give the Select girls the 1-0 lead.

While never leading in the game, the Aztecs refused to go away as they tied the game up at 1-1 and then again at 3-3 late in the second half. With just over five minutes to play in the contest, Rockland's Brook Jones, who scored the second goal of the game for Select, hit a corner kick that was knocked in by DelPico for the game winner to keep them undefeated in the tournament.

On Sunday, Select took on NEFC with a chance to punch their ticket to the championship game later in the afternoon. NEFC, took a 1-0 lead just seconds into the game but the Select girls answered right back with goals by DelPico and Jones to take a 2-1 halftime lead.

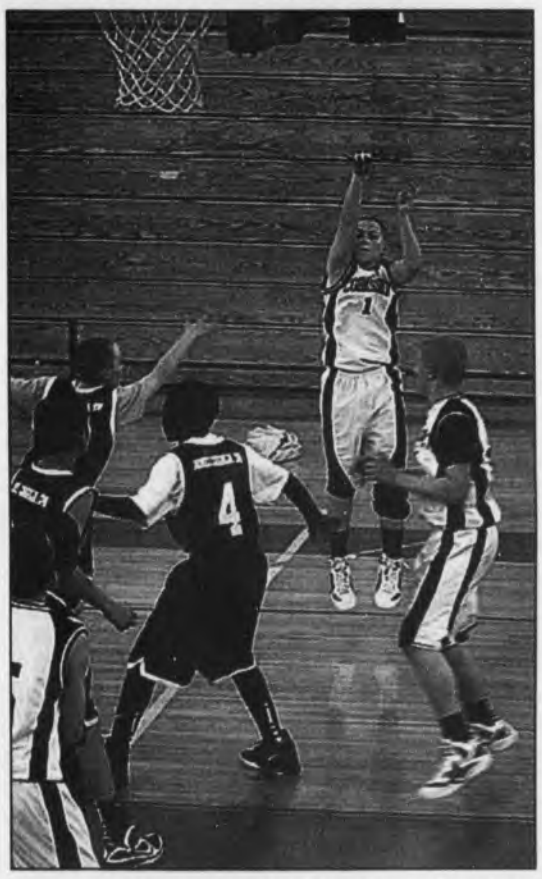
A barrage of shots in the second half produced a 4-1 advantage and the defense led by Marshfield's Kelly McNeil, Rockland's Meg McDonough and Hanson's Sam Smith shut the door on any further scoring chances for the tournament hosts.

With the weather turning cold and rain starting to fall, the championship game on Sunday afternoon was set against Scorpions West. The game was literally hard fought from the opening whistle but Select got on the board first when Hanover's Daley Tilden blasted home a rebound with just over 5 minutes to go before half time. Both sides had good opportunities in the second half until the game was tied by the Scorpions on a rebound of a free kick from just outside the box. Select turned up the heat with fantastic pressure in the final 10 minutes of the game but great goaltending and a shot off the inside of the post negated them from getting the go ahead score.



With the score tied at the end of regulation, the tournament rules called for a shootout with both sides getting five shots. After 4 rounds, Select found itself down 3-2, as Cohasset's Annie Pyne and DelPico were able to convert their penalty kicks successfully.

Bethany Dunk made an outstanding save to keep her team alive and Meg Mulholland's (Brockton) blast found it's way through the goalkeeper and into the back of the net to extend the contest. The shootout went to sudden death. Dunk made an incredible save to give Select a chance to win but their kick went high to keep the score deadlocked.



Dunk made another diving stop on the second extra penalty kick that set the stage for Cohaset's Maeve Humphrey to calmly blast one into the upper right corner to win the match and the tourney for the defending champs. The Girls will begin their regular season schedule this Sunday in Plymouth.

The players on the team were: Maeve Humphrey and Annie Pyne- Cohasset, Kira Maguire – Hingham, Daley Tilden and Emily Taylor-Hanover, Gabby DelPico and Meg Mulholland- Brockton, Bethany Dunk- Easton, Brook Jones and Meg McDonough- Rockland, Julia Varasso- Norwell, Hannah Vogt- Halifax, Sam Smith and Lexi Grazioso- Hanson, Kelly McNeil- Marshfield.

The Patriot League final was played at Bridgewater-Raynham High School against a dramatically improved Abington team that went 17-3 during the regular season.

To get the crowd in the spirit, several Abington Super Fans shaved Green Waves in their heads and wore fierce face paint.

Chase Bomeisler, Will Greer, Kyle McFetridge, Charlie Pyne, and Will Thomas came out strong, moving the Blue & White out to an early 7-4 lead.

With the towering team of Bomeisler and Pyne dominating inside play, the shifty McFetridge and the superfast Greer were able to get out on the fast break, fill lanes and finish.

Unfortunately, Bomeisler was whistled for a second early foul and the coaches tapped Will Bowen to enter the game. With crisp passing from Thomas and Greer, Bowen hit a quick 15-footer, followed by a deep three, and finished off his scoring spree with an up-and-under layup. Will B's seven points in 60 seconds vaulted Cohasset into a commanding 18-6 lead to end the first quarter.

Abington dug in and played much stronger to start the second frame. They attempted to press the young Skippers, but Tommy Carrabes, the team's do-it-all player, consistently threw over the top of the Abington press, leading to several easy buckets. In addition to strong court play, Carrabes also was tough inside, clearing several key rebounds. Despite a game Abington effort, the young Skippers would take a 15 point lead into the intermission.

The second half would see more of the same dominant action. Andrew Sullivan, the team's best three-point threat, hit a corner trey. Deven Varney, the team's best on ball defender, made several key steals that served to further frustrate the Green Wave. Jackson Roberts, a superb athlete and an outstanding defender, controlled the fourth quarter with intelligent play and several slashing finishes.

For his efforts, Will Bowen was named the Championship Game MVP.

After the awards ceremony the boys, coaches, and parents departed and caravanned the 35 miles back to Cape Cod for the tourney championship tilt where a plucky Bourne squad, which was fired up by a hometown crowd mostly decked out in purple, was awaiting them for a rematch of an earlier encounter in the tourney.

The young Skippers raced ahead early, led by the all-around great play of Greer and several put-backs by Bomeisler. The game was a back and forth affair with every team member contributing. Varney drained a trey; Sullivan hit another from three point land; and Carrabes made a rebound and quickly passed to Roberts, who whipped it cross court to Greer for the explosive layup. McFetridge controlled the pace of play and was the team's floor general.

Still, it wasn't enough. With two minutes to play the young Skippers found themselves trailing 35-32. The team had not trailed this late in a game since January!

Applying the full court press, Bowen made an unbelievable steal, spun, and laid it in for two, cutting Bourne's lead to 35-34. After a strong defensive stand, Bomeisler made a tough fade away jumper, moving Cohasset into a 36-35 edge with under a minute to go. Bomeisler would clear a rebound a get fouled. Free throw number 1- swish. Free throw number 2-swish. Young Skippers up, 38-35.

The team would outscore Bourne 9-0 over the last 1:50 to forge a 41-35 advantage with 10 seconds on the clock.

But Bourne did not give up. Its best player made an impossible three pointer and the lead was cut to three, making it a one-possession game. Bourne called a timeout. The young Skippers turned the ball over, giving Bourne a final chance to tie the game with 2.8 seconds to go. But Will Thomas stepped up and played smothering defense, forcing a Bourne miss to leave the young Skippers with a dramatic 41-38 victory.

"Our goal when we started the season was to be the best sixth grade travel team in the state of Massachusetts," said coach Paul Bowen. "While other teams can state their case, our 35-2 body of work stacks up against every team in the state. These boys showed up every single practice and improved. Speaking on behalf of Coach Joe Carrabes and Coach Ken Greer, we are privileged to coach this fine group of young men."

Spring has sprung at CHS

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

April vacation is in two weeks and a group of about forty kids and teachers from Cohasset and Scituate are traveling to the UK.

Hello, Cohasset. I hope everyone has a good week despite the 50-degree drop in temperature from last week.

The year's second and final Student Council American Red Cross Blood Drive took play on Wednesday. Brave students and teachers lined up to help save lives, and a few even volunteered to be double red cell donors. Thanks to all the donors and volunteers that made Wednesday's drive a success!

Spring sports are underway, ad a few sports have already begun scrimmages. Everyone is still hard at work getting back into the swig of things. Games will be starting this coming week.

It is difficult to believe that third quarter is coming to a close next week. With a half day next Thursday and no school next Friday, students will enjoy a brief Easter break. On another note, AP Exams are only a month away! For seniors, summer and graduation are both coming up within the next two months! So crazy.

April vacation is in two weeks and a group of about forty kids and teachers from Cohasset and Scituate are traveling to the UK. On their eleven-day tour, the group will visit Ireland, Scotland, Wales, and England. Sites will include the Ring of Kerry, the Book of Kells, the Blarney Castle, and Big Ben. They will travel by plane, train, ferry, and automobile in this exciting and informative excursion to Europe!

Seniors, scholarship applications are due in guidance by April 12th. Make sure you check to see if you need any teacher recommendations for the ones you are applying to. Scholarships will be awarded on Senior Class Night in late May.

Just a heads up for the Senior parents — the Senior Salute edition of the Spinnaker, the school newspaper, will be coming out on May 24th, the Senior's last day of school. Traditionally, parents submit parent ads to wish their kids well, complete with a picture or two and a personal message. Think about what you want to include, and ask Editors-in-Chief Julia Canney or Whitney Jaffe for more information.

By now, most Seniors have heard back from the majority of their schools and the college application process is close to an end. The final decision is choosing which college to attend. It's scary how real this is all becoming!

Enjoy your weekend, Cohasset. And have a happy April Fool's Day this Sunday — try not to get pranked!

Pilgrim Arena scholarships

In memory of Blanche Taylor and her 39 years of dedicated service, Pilgrim is awarding $120,000 of merit-based scholarships this year.

Applications for fifteen $8,000 merit-based scholarships are available at Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham.

This is the 39th consecutive year that Pilgrim Skating Arena is awarding scholarships to high school seniors planning to further their education. With this year's award, Pilgrim will have granted $1,100,000 of merit-based scholarships.

You do not need to be a hockey player or figure skater to apply for this scholarship. This scholarship is awarded on the basis of merit not financial need.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for their application in person at Pilgrim's pro shop. Completed applications must be returned in person by the applicant no later than Friday April 20th.

Applications will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors of Pilgrim Skating Arena.

Fitness program

Today's families are busier than ever between work, school and outside interests. This makes it difficult for families to engage in activities together outside the home. Cohasset Recreation department now offers a fitness program for parents and kids to do together to get everyone moving.

The Family Fitness Together Program is an eight-week fitness program, which meets two-times per week at Fitness Together, 790 CJ Cushing Highway in Cohasset. This is for residents with children ages 8 and older. A family can be one parent or grandparent, and one child up to a total of six people. Two families may share a session together with their kids.

How it works: Families reserve private scheduled sessions twice a week for a group exercise class conducted by a certified personal trainer at Fitness Together.

"We've been a part of the Cohasset community for seven years and we know how to work with people of all ages and fitness levels" said Steve Lichtman, owner. "Our new small group training room has all the latest equipment: Bands, balls, ropes, TRX, to make this a fun experience for everyone."

The cost is $60 per session for up to six people. This includes the use of cardio equipment before and after the 45-minute session. Families will also receive nutritional coaching with healthy meal plans and recipes.

The next eight-week program will take place April 16 through June. Summer sessions will be June 25 through August. Call Bill Coleman at Fitness Together at 781-383-8004 to enroll. For more information, visit www.fitnesstogether.com/cohasset.

College admissions

Cohasset Basketball Jamboree, to celebrate the boys and girls Rec/Travel season, will feature dribble relays, shooting, agility, a lay-up contests, coaches shooting contest, parent vs. player games for students in grades five through eight, food, face painting and more.

The Jamboree, for students in grades one through eight, will take place in the gym at Cohasset High School on Sunday April 1; grades one through four, 3 to 4 p.m.; and grades five through eight, 4 to 6 p.m.

Anyone who would like to play in the grade five through eight parents vs. players game or are interested in volunteering for the event can email cohassetbballsignup@gmail.com to register. Otherwise, there is no need to sign up, bring the kids and have fun.

Fitness program

Today's families are busier than ever between work, school and outside interests. This makes it difficult for families to engage in activities together outside the home. Cohasset Recreation department now offers a fitness program for parents and kids to do together to get everyone moving.

The Family Fitness Together Program is an eight-week fitness program, which meets two-times per week at Fitness Together, 790 CJ Cushing Highway in Cohasset. This is for residents with children ages 8 and older. A family can be one parent or grandparent, and one child up to a total of six people. Two families may share a session together with their kids.

How it works: Families reserve private scheduled sessions twice a week for a group exercise class conducted by a certified personal trainer at Fitness Together.

"We've been a part of the Cohasset community for seven years and we know how to work with people of all ages and fitness levels" said Steve Lichtman, owner. "Our new small group training room has all the latest equipment: Bands, balls, ropes, TRX, to make this a fun experience for everyone."

The cost is $60 per session for up to six people. This includes the use of cardio equipment before and after the 45-minute session. Families will also receive nutritional coaching with healthy meal plans and recipes.

The next eight-week program will take place April 16 through June. Summer sessions will be June 25 through August. Call Bill Coleman at Fitness Together at 781-383-8004 to enroll. For more information, visit www.fitnesstogether.com/cohasset.

College admissions

Cohasset Basketball Jamboree, to celebrate the boys and girls Rec/Travel season, will feature dribble relays, shooting, agility, a lay-up contests, coaches shooting contest, parent vs. player games for students in grades five through eight, food, face painting and more.

The Jamboree, for students in grades one through eight, will take place in the gym at Cohasset High School on Sunday April 1; grades one through four, 3 to 4 p.m.; and grades five through eight, 4 to 6 p.m.

Anyone who would like to play in the grade five through eight parents vs. players game or are interested in volunteering for the event can email cohassetbballsignup@gmail.com to register. Otherwise, there is no need to sign up, bring the kids and have fun.

'Magic' math and science

Students joined in the fun and excitement – and learned a little something, too – at Science and Math Night at the Joseph Osgood School on Thursday, March 22 from 6 to 8 p.m. The event was attended by all of the students from pre-k to second grade. Highlights included live animal exhibits, homemade science projects, and a "magic explosion."

Second grader Nora Cunningham covers her ears anticipating the explosion when Museum of Science educator Aaron Weinblatt holds a flame to a balloon.

Pre-schooler Matthew Ivimey tries to outrace a balloon.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 9, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Avoid having someone else take credit for the project you started by finishing it yourself. Then it will be you lovely Lambs who will be wearing those well-deserved laurels.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The facts about a new opportunity are still emerging. Wait until they're all out in the open, and then use your keen business sense to help make the right decision.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel confused, even hurt by a friend who suddenly puts distance between you. If she or he won't discuss it, don't push it. An explanation should come in time.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your willingness to be part of the team opens doors that had been shut to you. Keep them open by keeping your promises even when your commitment seems to be wavering.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Congratulations. You're really getting things done to purr-fection. And don't forget to take a catnap now and again to keep those energy levels up and bristling for action.

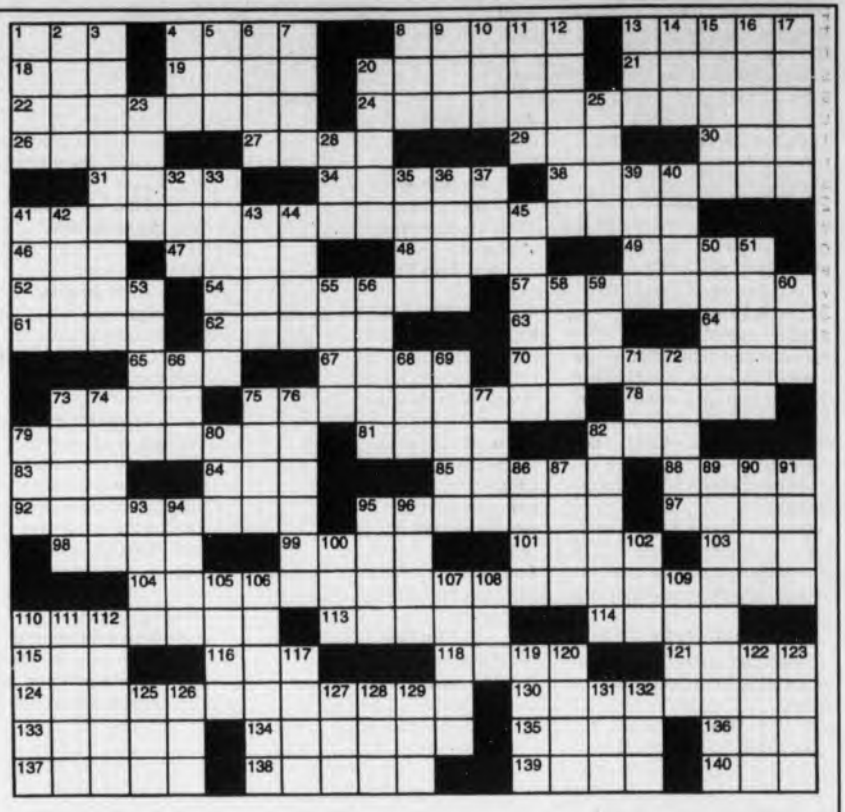
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your "plain-talking" honesty is admirable. But sometimes sharp words can leave painful scars. Be careful that what you say doesn't come back to hurt you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A stress-filled period takes a positive turn as you deal with the underlying problem. Act now to avoid a recurrence by changing some basic rules in your relationship.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your rising energy levels make it easier for you to achieve some important objectives. This could lead to a big boost in how you're perceived, both at home and on the job.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A changing picture begins to emerge as you learn more about an offer that seemed so right but could be so wrong. Look to a trusted adviser for guidance.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Spiritual aspects are strong. Take time to reflect on the path you're on and where you hope it will lead you. It's also a good time to reach out to loved ones.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You could be assuming far too many responsibilities, whether it's at work or in personal matters. Be careful that you're not weighed down by them.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You're getting closer to your goals. And since nothing succeeds like success (or the promise thereof), don't be surprised to find new supporters swimming alongside you.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are always the first to try new ventures and confront new challenges. You inspire others with your courage to follow your bold example.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

GIMME SHELTER

Oreo is a lively senior citizen

Oreo is friendly, and although she's treated well at the shelter, she'd much prefer her own home with her special person(s).

Oreo is a black and white older female cat, who would be great for a senior. HSAR has a senior program. When seniors, 60 and over adopt older felines, they receive a 50 percent discount. Oreo once had a great home, but her person can no longer care for her. Oreo is healthy and up to date on all her shots. She is friendly, and although she's treated well at the shelter, she'd much prefer her own home with her special person(s). You don't have to be a senior to adopt this sweet feline who sports a permanent white bow. She loves human attention and will make a great companion. She welcomes visitors of all ages.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

BRIEFLY

Cohasset Public Schools to conduct 'Child Find'

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.0, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: autism, developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability, or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 6 to 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school. Call the Cohasset Public Schools Student Service Office at 781-383-6104 for more information.

In addition, screenings for 3-to-5-year olds are held on Fridays at Osgood School. Call the Integrated Pre-school staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.

If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

Good Friday Walk on April 6

In 1972, when Kay Doherty, a young mother living in Abington, read about the plight of young children living in unimaginable poverty in the Deep South, she made the decision to try to help. On Good Friday 41 years ago therefore, she and 30 friends obtained sponsors and walked 20 miles to church in Hingham and back to Abington. At that time, 11 million children were living in poverty. Today, that number is 16.4 million children. This statistic thus compels Doherty to continue her fight on poverty by organizing the annual Good Friday Walk through the nonprofit corporation Sharing Inc.

Doherty, now living in Braintree, works throughout the year as the administrator of Sharing Inc. formed in 1973. She personally visits the centers and organizations that receive financial assistance and has established a scholarship fund for high school students, some of whom who will participate in this year's Good Friday Walk.

Since the first Walk, more than $3 million has been given away to organizations meeting the needs of children. Thousands of people from all denominations and backgrounds have joined Doherty to demonstrate their faith and concern for others by either walking or working not only in Hingham on Good Friday but in several other locations throughout New England. For many, the Walk has become a spiritual tradition and they have now walked 700 miles or more and helped others while doing so.

Doherty is again inviting people of all ages and faiths to join her on Good Friday, April 6. Walkers may begin anytime from 7 to 9 a.m. from the Plymouth River School, 200 High St., Hingham, off Route 228. The route winds for 20 miles from the school through the hills of Hingham and inside Wampatuk State Park. All walkers are requested to obtain a minimum of $20 in pledges on their sponsor sheets. Walkers younger than age 18 are also required to have their sponsor sheet signed by a parent or guardian.

Anyone wishing to participate in this year's walk may obtain sponsor sheets by contacting Doherty at Sharing Inc., P.O. Box 850153, Braintree, MA 02185-0153 or by calling 781-843-1676. Those interested in learning more about Sharing Inc. should visit www.WalkingOnGoodFriday.org, where an in-depth look at the Good Friday Walk from its roots to present day can be found.

Contracts cause conflict

Planning Board stands up for coordinator at selectmen's meeting

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Town employee contracts signed by the former town manager in the weeks before his removal are still causing problems around Town Hall.

Four members of the planning board attended Tuesday night's selectmen's meeting and spoke out on the planning board coordinator's contract, which was rejected by the selectmen last month. Planning board chair Stuart Ivimey said that if the selectmen refused to honor the contract issued to the planning board coordinator, that she bargained for in good faith, they would be in breach of contract.

Tempers flared, voices were raised and the door to the Superintendent of School's meeting room at the high school – where the meeting was held – was slammed as members of the planning board and capital budget committee stormed off during the heated discussion.

Last week, the planning board took a vote of no confidence in the Board of Selectmen following the selectmen's decision to rescind 10 employee contracts issued by former Town Manager Michael Coughlin. One of these contracts was for planning board coordinator, Jo-Ann Pilczak, who had been serving as the planning board administrator. The board said that they were outraged by the selectmen "punishing" Pilczak for a decision made by Coughlin.

"This is regrettable over a miniscule amount of money," Ivimey told the selectmen. "Nobody is looking out for [Pilczak]. That's what needs to be done. You guys had a problem with Mike Coughlin, not a problem with her."

The planning board believes Pilczak was deserving of a raise of $10,000 that was approved during the Dec. 5, 2011 Special Town Meeting; under the contract Coughlin issued, she would be making

Rotary sponsors annual run

For 36 years Cohasset has been home to one of the most scenic 6.2-mile road race courses in New England, the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea.

The annual event also includes the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk by the Sea.

For more than 70 years the Cohasset Rotary Club has contributed thousands of hours of community service, provided more than $500,000 in scholarships to Cohasset High graduates, supported Fr. Bill's Place, the renovation of the Boy Scout Camp Squanto, and humanitarian projects around the world.

For more on this year's race, see sports.

TOWN ELECTION

Off to the races

Carr, Gjesteby vying for selectman's seat

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Nomination papers have been pulled and signatures have been returned to the Town Clerk's office. Now, the Town Election is a little over a month away.

Several seats are being contested this year, including the Planning Board associate one-year seat and the Board of Assessor's three-year term. But perhaps the most talked about race is between current Board of Selectmen chair Edwin "Ted" Carr and former selectwoman Martha Gjesteby.

Carr has served on the board of selectmen for the past six years; if reelected, this would be his third term. Having spent over 25 years working in the public sector and for politicians like President Bill Clinton, Carr said he enjoys the campaign aspect of elections.

"I'm enjoying it very much, just as I have my first election," Carr said Wednesday during a phone call from Washington, D.C. "I'm a hands-on person, so I'm going door to door talking to voters... I enjoy getting out and about, talking to people. It's fun to get out and meet the new people in town."

Carr was relatively new to Cohasset when he was first elected to the board of selectmen in 2006; he said that he had lived in town for two and a half years.

The last time he campaigned, Carr said he knocked on the doors of 1,000 homes in town. "Now we're truncated in a time frame, but I'm knocking on as many doors as I can."

Gjesteby is currently an

CHS: NEW PRINCIPAL

Carolyn Connolly lands top job

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

According to Connolly, she learned about the Cohasset opening in early January and promptly sent in her materials for consideration.

Cohasset High School will have a new principal come fall.

The School Committee introduced Carolyn Connolly, current assistant principal at Pembroke High School, as Cohasset's new principal during their Wednesday night meeting. Connolly will replace Dr. Michael Gill, who has been serving as interim high school principal for the past year following former principal Joel Antolini's departure last summer. Gill recently announced his retirement from the Cohasset school district after 32 years of service.

Cohasset's Superintendent of Schools Barbara Cataldo announced that the search for a new principal was underway in early February; at that point, several resumes had already been collected. Connolly was selected by a search committee made up of Cohasset educators, parents, students and school administrators.

Cataldo said Thursday morning the school committee was very happy to meet Connolly on Wednesday night. "They've heard nothing but good things... She came highly recommended."

Connolly has been at Pembroke High School since 2004; prior to that, she worked in the Silver Lake School District from 2001 until 2004.

"Working in administration has been my goal for several years," she said. "I've always known I wanted to do that."

Connolly also served in the position of dean of students at Pembroke High School before moving on to assistant principal in 2009.

According to Connolly, she learned about the Cohasset opening in early January and promptly sent in her materials for consideration.

"I went through the first set of interviews a few weeks ago," she said.

Recently, she said, Connolly was notified she was a finalist for the job and just this past week the Cohasset search committee conducted a site visit at Pembroke High School, speaking to faculty, students and administration.

"Apparently the visit went well, because I was offered the job," she said.

Connolly said she's eager to start her new job, adding that 'it's the right time' to move on.

"I actually attended a high school (Boston Latin) that was set up like the Cohasset Middle-High School," she said. "I understand the environment and it's going to be a nice fit for me. It's a high performing, fairly small school."

Even so, she said, she'll miss her students in Pembroke.

"The kids are great here and the families have been good to me," she said. "I'm mostly going to miss watching the siblings of former students come through the school."

Cohasset school committee vice chair Jeanne Astino said during Wednesday's meeting that Pembroke students have taken to their Twitter feeds to express their dismay over Connolly's departure; it's clear she will be sorely missed.

Cataldo said that the school plans to hold a welcoming reception for Connolly this spring.

Pembroke Mariner-Reporter editor Dana Forsythe also contributed to this report.

POLICE BEAT

Underage house party broken up

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police arrested a 19-year-old Cohasset teen and his 16-year-old sister after responding to reports of increased traffic and noise on Fernway, which is a small cul-de-sac off Red Gate Lane on Saturday night (March 31) at around 9 p.m.

Upon arrival police found a large house party with teens consuming alcohol in plain view. Police reported finding upwards of 50 teens some of whom took off into the woods. Police said the parents of the teen party hosts were away in Florida. The siblings were charged with being minors in possession of alcohol and keeping a disorderly house.

Several parents were called to retrieve their children who ranged in age from 17-to-19 years old. All were from Cohasset and it was one of the bigger house parties police had seen.

Vandalism

A 24-year-old Scituate man notified police on Monday (March 26) at around 7:35 a.m. that the mirror on the side of his 2010 Chevrolet Camaro was hanging off his car that was parked at Shaw's Plaza. Police said the caller and his girlfriend, who had been shopping inside the supermarket for about 30 minutes, discovered the damage when they returned to the car. Police estimated the damage at $250. They said it appeared that someone might have smashed a shopping carriage into the car. The car owner reported he did not have any problems with anyone and there have been no other reports of similar incidents, police said.

Summons

An officer on patrol at about 11:30 a.m. on Wednesday (March 28) saw a 2008 Toyota Corolla with a female driver, who was known to police because she had been arrested two months ago for drunken driving, pull out of Stop & Shop. The officer followed the car, observing its operation onto Route 3A and finally onto Forest Avenue. He pulled the car over near Heather Drive.

The 59-year-old Cohasset woman driving is being summonsed to court for marked lanes violation and operating with a revoked license. Police said her license had been revoked after her arrest two months ago that was for a third OUI offense. Her car was towed.

MV accidents

• At 3:04 p.m. on Wednesday (March 28), police responded to a two-car accident on King Street (Route 3A) by the Cohasset House of Pizza. Both vehicles were headed north. Police said a 2009 Audi, operated by a 53-year-old Cohasset woman, had slowed down behind a car that was attempting to turn left into Sunrise when the Audi was "rear-ended" by a 1998 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by a 33-year-old Hull woman. The Hull woman was cited for following too closely. There were no tows and no injuries, police said.

• At 1:02 p.m., on Thursday (March 29), police responded to an accident on North Main Street by First Parish Church. Police said an unoccupied, 2010 Toyota Highlander was parked on the community center side of the street when it was sideswiped by at 2000 Ford tractor-trailer unit, operated by a 54-year-old Bridgewater man. Police said cars were parked on both sides of the road and the tractor-trailer took the mirror off the Toyota. The driver stopped and made himself known. The owner of the Toyota, a Hingham woman, was located.

• At 12:32 p.m. on Friday (March 30), police responded to an accident in the village. Police said a 2009 Ford van from South Shore Elder Services, operated by a 71-year-old Cohasset man, was pulling out of the gas station to make a right onto Parking Way when the van clipped the side of a parked, 2006 Ford Expedition. There was some damage to the front end of the Expedition. Neither vehicle had to be towed.

Larceny

A 31-year-old manager at Shaw's notified police on Thursday afternoon (March 29) about the theft of $385 worth of baby formula from the store. Police said the suspect was described as white, 5 feet 10 inches tall, with a medium build. He was wearing a black Boston Red Sox hooded sweatshirt. Police said he filled several canvas bags with baby formula and walked out without paying. Police said baby formula is expensive and can be easily sold.

Runner

A caller notified police at around 11:11 a.m., on Friday (March 30) that there was a suspicious man running. Police said the man, who was 56 and a Weymouth resident, was just doing a trial run for that Sunday's road race.

Speeding

Police spoke to the teenage operator of a Honda Pilot that was reported as speeding on Black Rock Road last week and told him to slow down.

Protective custody

Police took a 41-year-old Cohasset man into protective custody on Friday (March 30) at around 11:54 p.m. after a neighbor reported that a man was asleep in his 2010 Mercury Mountaineer. Police said the intoxicated man apparently went to the wrong house and crawled into the back of a neighbor's SUV.

Skunk

A skunk that was either rabid or suffering from distemper had to be put down on Saturday (March 31) after a resident called to report a sick skunk in his driveway on Linden Drive.

BRIEFLY

CHS graduation date changes

Starting in 2013, Cohasset High School's graduation day is changing by one week.

In order to better accommodate the Cohasset Music Circus's summer schedule, high school graduation will instead take place on the second Saturday in June, rather than the first Saturday.

The School Committee said during their Wednesday meeting that they would like to work with their student representative, Andrew Bartlett, to come up with a plan for seniors during the new gap week between the end of the school year and the actual graduation date.

Town Meeting could be extended

This year's annual Town Meeting could take place over the course of two days.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski said during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting that he believes that Town Meeting might to be continued for one day following the scheduled date for Saturday, May 19.

The reasoning is that the Water Department has gone out to bid for a new water contract; they have currently published two requests for proposals (RFP), one for a 10-year concession contract and the second for a one-year management contract. The latter option is similar to the water company's current contract with American Water, which expires June 30.

Milanoski explained that since the water department must collect and review all of the bids for these contracts, they would only have a few days to do so before Town Meeting, and therefore not enough time to get articles on the warrant.

The final agreement for "plan A" – the concession contract – is set to be completed on May 8; plan B – the management contract – is due for May 10, Milanoski said.

The town manager suggested holding the second Town Meeting date on the evening of Monday, June 4, although he said he would be open to other dates the first week of June.

The selectmen tabled the discussion for their next meeting on Tuesday, April 10.

Pizza, iPad raffle at DeMolay event

Cohasset High School senior Kyle Studley, 17, is a member DeMolay.

Families looking for an after-school activity that prepares young men for college, career, and beyond might want to consider DeMolay.

The international youth organization, whose mission is to equip young men with leadership skills, civic awareness, and personal responsibility, has a South Coastal chapter in Massachusetts. Cohasset High School senior Kyle Studley, 17, is a member of the Marshfield branch of this chapter and said that being part of DeMolay has been both fun and educational.

"It's good because you learn a lot, but you don't even notice it because you're having fun," Studley said.

The CHS senior learned of DeMolay through his father, who was also a member as a kid. Studley joined at age 14 (the group is for boys aged 12 to 21).

"I was bored and decided I would join, see what it's like," said Studley. He quickly found himself with a new group of friends and new learning experiences.

"Everyone was awesome," Studley recalled. "It's a lot of fun; you meet a lot of people. Before I was in DeMolay, a lot of my friends were pretty much solely from Cohasset." Granted, the Cohasset senior was 14 at the time and didn't drive a car, but joining DeMolay was a way for him to meet more people than he would have, he said.

Studley said that he enjoys being part of an organization that basically lets kids run their own group.

"The idea of the group is great because it's up to the kids to decide what to do," said Studley. "The advisors are there to drive us and handle things like liability insurance, but at the end of the day, if we want to do something, we vote to do it ourselves."

What kinds of things do the boys vote to do, exactly? Studley said that they vote on group activities, social events and trips.

"We have sports tournaments and do a lot of fun stuff." When all the area chapters get together, they rent out a college campus and play games, as well as hold legislative sessions "to talk about what needs to get done."

DeMolay meetings are run like town board meetings, Studley explained: "Kind of like a town meeting uses rules of order, so do we. There are officers and a line of progression. Once you're in long enough, you can become the highest officer in your chapter." The highest-ranking officer serves in this position for six months, during which he makes decisions for his chapter.

Studley has held the highest ranked position, master councilor, in the past and even went on to serve at the state level. His responsibilities included planning two dances: one that was a fundraiser for the charity Wounded Warriors Foundation, and another that was "a social, fun thing."

These dances include local chapters of the girls' freemason group, Rainbow. While the girls' group is similar to DeMolay and the two groups often run events together, "they are separate and are run differently," said Studley.

The South Coastal chapter's upcoming open houses promise to be a fun way to introduce interested families and their sons to DeMolay. The events will feature pizza, games, and even a raffle to win an iPad 2 (see sidebar for dates and locations).

As a local member, Studley said that he hopes to raise awareness for the organization, letting the community know what DeMolay is all about. When it comes to planning for the future, the CHS senior credits his time in DeMolay with helping him prepare for the next step.

"The years before I joined, I was extremely shy, but I got to be good at public speaking," said Studley. "It's always a good skill to have, whether you're presenting a project in school or pretty much anything; it always helps."

While the senior said that he might wait a year to start college and instead take an EMT course, when he does decide to apply to a school, he knows he can use DeMolay as a resource.

"There are college scholarships, lots of options," said Studley. "DeMolay is sponsored by the freemasons, so all of the freemason bodies connected to us have their own scholarships that many of the DeMolays apply for."

It's connections like these, along with the friendships he's made, that make Studley proud to be a member of DeMolay.

"I literally have over 200 kids I could easily talk to and hang out with, and they're all over the state," he said.

More about DeMolay

What it is: An organization dedicated to preparing young men to lead successful, happy, and productive lives. DeMolay was founded by a freemason, Frank Land, and is modeled after freemasonry.

Who it's for: Young men aged 12- 21

What they do: Develop the civic awareness, personal responsibility and leadership skills that are vitally needed in society today. DeMolay combines this serious mission with a fun approach that builds bonds of friendship among members in more than 1,000 chapters worldwide.

What's in a name?: The group's namesake Jacques DeMolay was born in Vitrey, Department of Haute Saone, France, in 1244. DeMolay joined the Order of Knights Templar at the age of 21 and became Grand Master. The Knights Templar was an organization sanctioned by the Roman Catholic Church in 1128 to guard the road between Jerusalem and Acre, an important port city on the Mediterranean Sea. The Knights Templar participated in the Crusades and earned a name for valor and heroism.

Ritual: DeMolay has a ritual that was written by Frank Marshall, a reporter for the Kansas City Star newspaper in the early 1920's and a friend of DeMolay founder Frank Land.

Cardinal Values: Filial love (love between a parent and child); Reverence for sacred things; Courtesy; Comradeship; Fidelity; Cleanness; Patriotism.

Famous alumni: Walt Disney, John Wayne, Walter Cronkite, football Hall-of-Famer Fran Tarkenton, legendary Nebraska football coach Tom Osborne, news anchor David Goodnow, among others.

Happy Easter

Hi there, Cohasset. I hope that this week's weather has started to pick up everyone's spirits a bit as the weather has been a bit more spring-like and the flowers are in bloom all over the place. Today is a beautiful Good Friday and for so many it is the start of a holiday weekend with family and friends. Happy Easter to all who celebrate and for any who do not enjoy the weather this weekend as well.

St Jerome's

Some news about four Cohasset students who attend Saint Jerome School to share. Congratulations to Nicholas Ryan, David Lemoine, Kyle Peterson, and Jared Nash who all made the Honor Roll for the second term of the 2011-2012 school year. Boys, each of you should be so proud of your hard work and keep it up. Nice job to you all. For any family interested in learning more about the Saint Jerome School, call 781-335-1235 or go to www.stjeromeschool-weymouth.org

Spring event

On May 5th, please join the South Shore Community Center for the 3rd Annual "Spring Around Town." This fun and enjoyable evening will begin at 6 pm with Cocktails at the Cook Estate, where you will be given your personal invite to a dinner hosted by friends of the SSCC at one of several beautiful homes in Cohasset. At 7:30 pm, you will depart the Cook Estate for your designated dinner location for your "Cinco De Mayo" Fiesta! The evening will continue at 9:30 pm at the house of Michael & Victoria Hurley for dessert & coffee.

Spring Around Town is a great way to enjoy an evening with old friends, as well as make new ones! There will be some exciting items raffled off during the evening as well. All proceeds from this event will benefit the SSCC. Space is limited, so please get your tickets early! $150 per couple, and $75 each is the cost for such a wonderful night and you may purchase tickets for up to two couples on the same reservation and your dinner assignments will be the same. CONSERVATORY NOTES

Spreading the love of a cappella

BETH MACLEOD LARGENT

When Straight No Chaser's rowdy rendition of "The Twelve Days of Christmas" went viral on YouTube some years back, our love affair with a cappella singing was reborn. For those of you who may not know, a cappella singing is singing without any instrumental accompaniment. Its rise began in the Renaissance period and has morphed to what we know today.

I imagine everyone has an image of what a cappella music means to them, whether it's barbershop quartets, doowop or the more modern college "sing offs" so popular on TV. Either way there's no doubt that a cappella is hot right now, and for good reason. It's virtuosic singing, tight harmonies and great music – and it's fun to sing and listen to!

It does take a certain level of skill to sing without accompaniment. There are issues of singing in tune and unison with others, matching vowels, and getting used to very tight or unusual harmonies. But singers who do it thrive on it and say it's the most gratifying musical experience they have. It takes practice to become accustomed to singing just a musical step or two away from your neighbor, but once the skill is acquired, you just want to do it all the time!

Over the years I've sung in several madrigal groups whose focus was primarily early a cappella, and I found it so satisfying, not only for the musical choices, but for the closeness you develop with your colleagues. This is what I feel makes the Sherwoods of Cornell so spectacular to watch. I had the honor of working with them two years ago during their performances at SSC and it was a thrill to see. This is a group of college companions from the 1960s, 1970s and 1980s who meet up to perform just once or twice a year. As you can imagine there's lots of hugging, storytelling and catching up to do in a very short time.

During their time here I had a bird's eye view of their mini rehearsals. When singers stepped aside to solo, notes would explode into the air like fanciful birds. When jokes were rehearsed, even though the men had heard them before, all music-making would stop until everyone conquered their giggles.

As tears were shed over members no longer able to perform, it was clear to me that this was so much more than a musical group – these were brothers whose lives intertwined and who told their life stories through music. Having a local member and fellow vocalist Ron Johnson living right here in Hingham was just the icing on the cake. Because the majority of the members are not local, Ron works diligently to coordinate their housing.

Please join us for this outstanding musical performance, and experience the true joy of a cappella. You won't be disappointed.

The Sherwoods of Cornell perform at South Shore Conservatory, One Conservatory Drive, Hingham on Saturday, April 21, at 7 p.m. To purchase tickets, please visit http://www.sscmusic.org/concert_series.html.

Beth MacLeod Largent is the Conservatory's Director of Performance. She is also a vital part of South Shore Conservatory's voice department, both as an educator and a musician.

GIMME SHELTER

Elphie is a purring machine

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to find shelter for Elphie, a three-year-old, female Tortoiseshell. She once had a very nice home but due to unfortunate circumstances had to be surrendered. Elphie gets along fine at the shelter, but we know she'd be happier in a home of her own.

Elphie has a very loud purr, is playful and gets along fine with both humans and other felines. If you have a chance, please stop by and visit her during open hours. She's a very special Tortie, looking for a home.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.

La Leche League to meet Tuesday

Mothers and mothers-to-be who would like to learn more about the normal course of breastfeeding and how to avoid problems are invited to attend this month's La Leche League meeting at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, April 10, at Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset, corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street, which connects to Route 3A. Babies are welcome.

LLL provides information, encouragement and support to breastfeeding and pregnant women. For more information, call Christie at 781-740-7808, Kathleen at 781-749-2404, or Heather at 781-544-9230.

"The Catholicism Project"
Episode Seven:
The Mystery of the Liturgy & the Eucharist

Tuesday April 10th at 7:00pm
Saint Anthony Parish Center
781-383-0219

Being a Catholic ... it's more than just an hour on Sunday!

The faith in being Catholic starts anew every Sunday. Come; understand how, understand why.

Considered by the Catholic Faith to be "the source and summit" of its identity and mission, the Eucharist is the central practice of the Church's culture. Fr. Barron describes all the parts of the Mass and shows how the Sacred Liturgy embodies the whole of the Faith in such diverse places as Jerusalem, Rome, Chicago, Orvieto and Mexico City.

CSC registration April 28–29

Cohasset Sailing Club will have its annual registration earlier than usual this year – Saturday, April 28, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and Sunday, April 29, from noon to 2 p.m., at the clubhouse on Government Island. Basic membership is open to all Cohasset residents, and entitles sailors who have passed the helmsman test to use the fleet during free sailing hours. Founded in 1960 in order to ensure that all the town's children would have an affordable opportunity to learn and practice sailing, the CSC offers instructional programs for children and teens/adults; it also sponsors a racing team and a family (adult/child) and an adult racing series. The Junior classes will run from Monday, June 25, through Friday, Aug. 17, and the adult classes will go from Saturday, June 30, through Saturday, Aug. 18.

The Junior program serves the 10- to 16-year-old age group. To enroll, students must have completed the fourth grade or turn 10 by Labor Day 2012. Classes meet three times a week for 2 to 3 hours at a time over a 10-week period, and combine classroom teaching with ample time on the water. The CSC does its best to coordinate the Junior sailing schedules with the town's swimming program. The Junior program has a four-step, four-year sequential structure: there are at least two to three groups for the first-year Sailor and second-year Mate levels, as these tend to be the most heavily enrolled sequences. Beginning students start with seamanship basics, and progressively acquire more advanced sailing skills. The classes revolve around peer-group instruction in the 14.2-foot Capris, usually one instructor plus three or four kids. Students are taught by high school or college students, many who are town residents who previously participated in the Junior program. By the end of their first season, many students will pass the helmsman test, which means they will be able to take out a Capri or the kid-friendly BICs, and sail alone or with a companion. Upon completing the fourth-year Captain-level training, students may join the racing team. A unique feature of the CSC's Junior program instruction is the dual peer group and solo learning opportunities. Novice teenage sailors usually join the more accelerated adult classes on Saturday mornings; this program is geared to get students to pass the helmsman test as soon as possible.

In 2011, CSC had a record number of students and families enrolled in the sailing programs, and in anticipation of continued high demand has added classes and hired more instructors for 2012. Over the fall and winter the CSC has overhauled the docks, which now have new flotation devices and hardware for better safety and stability.

The combined membership application and class registration document is available on the website, www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which also contains more detailed information about the club, classes, and the ongoing project to build a new Sailing Center. It is requested that membership applications and program registrations be returned in person during Registration Weekend. A $50 late fee will apply to mail-in applications submitted after this weekend.

Kennedy Presidential Library honors two Cohasset students

One hundred middle school students from across Massachusetts were honored with the Make a Difference Award on Thursday, March 15th at the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum in recognition of the volunteer work the students have performed in their communities.

Among the recipients were Alexander Arnold and Deven Varney, grade-six students at Cohasset Middle-High School. Alexander was honored for his work serving food at a homeless shelter and Deven was honored for his organizing a toy drive for Toys for Tots.

The Kennedy Presidential Library's Make a Difference award is given to students who are nominated by a teacher or principal for an outstanding contribution they have made to their school, neighborhood, town, or the global community.

"President Kennedy believed that every person can make a difference and each of us should try" said Library Director Tom Putnam. "These students are an inspiring example of JFK's timeless call to service."

The Make a Difference award program is sponsored by the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum. The John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum is a presidential library administered by the National Archives and Records Administration and supported, in part, by the Kennedy Library Foundation, an non-profit organization.

The Make a Difference Award is made possible with generous support from Comcast.

New Treatment for Special Needs Children Produces Exciting Results

Attention! Parents of children who struggle with ADD/ADHD, Oppositional Defiance, OCD, Anxiety, are on the Autistic Spectrum or have other special needs.

After standing room only in Wellesley, the Foundation for Wellness Professionals offers another free community workshop on "Brain Mapping and Drug Free Approaches to ADD, Autism and Other Special Needs." Thursday, April 12th, 2012 at 7:00 PM at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset MA.

The workshop is presented by Dr. Ross, a Licensed Psychologist with extensive experience in biofeedback treatment, cognitive and behavioral therapy, and behavioral medicine. She received training in EEG assessment from Dr. K.H. Wong, of Children's Hospital Medical Center Boston and has an extensive background in the treatment of individuals with neuropsychiatric and neurobehavioral challenges.

Workshop participants will gain an understanding of this simple, pain free and drug free procedure that pinpoints discordant rhythms in a child's brain. Once identified, a series of biofeedback sessions corrects the imbalance and promotes healthy brain function. The result is a substantial reduction or even elimination of a child's symptoms.

Come for this free educational workshop and see before and after brain images of children with remarkable results and hear about the dramatic improvements these children have experienced. Thursday, April 12th, 2012 at 7:00 PM at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset MA.

See www.RetrainYourBrain.com for future dates and times, including Burlington and a Head Injury Workshop in Dedham, both in April.

Water shut-off notices being sent

By Leonora Jenkins
Special to the Mariner

This policy is in conjunction with the recommendation of Roselli, Clark and Associates, the town auditors, to have a more aggressive collection policy and institute a shut-off policy.

The Cohasset Water Department sent out the first wave of Shut-Off notices last week to collect the approximate $400,000 in delinquent accounts. The first batch of notices was demands for almost $50,000 in arrears.

This policy is in conjunction with the recommendation of Roselli, Clark and Associates, the town auditors, to have a more aggressive collection policy and institute a shut-off policy.

Town Hall has been the collection agency for the Water and Sewer Departments and their course of action has been to wait for 6 months after the end of the Fiscal Year to send out Liens. In some cases, as Roselli pointed out, this would make some bills delinquent for 17 months before either department saw a payment.

As Roselli stated during his audit presentation to the Selectmen on Tuesday, the customers incur costs as soon as the water is turned on. Roselli also indicated that there was never a real deficit in the Water Department, but rather a DOR one only as DOR does not count receivables toward the bottom line. That is why high receivables compromise the enterprise fund's ability to meet expenses and state law demands that bills be paid for the particular Fiscal Year. Consequently monies are taken from the general or stabilization fund at the fall town meeting to cover the difference between the expenses and receivables. This situation is unfair to other town departments and to residents as it strips away available cash for other necessary purposes.

This is not the Draconian policy that the former Town Manager labeled it but a policy that will bring the department into compliance with standard accounting practices.

If someone has an extenuating circumstance such as any occupant of the premises is seriously ill, age 65 or older, under 12 months of age or unable to pay the total amount due on their account because of financial hardship they may be available for protection from shut-off. Between November 15 and March 15, protection is also available to any customer or occupant whose service operates the heating system at the premises.

At any time prior to an Anticipated Shut-Off Date, you may request a hearing before the Water Commissioners to claim said protection(s) or otherwise contest termination. Such request must be made, in writing, at the Office of the Town Clerk.

If you are delinquent and haven't received a Shut Off Notice yet, it will be in the mail shortly unless you bring your account up to date. Along with notices sent, the distribution crew is on the street checking the shut-off valves.

BRIEFLY

Sick leave bank floated

Town employees who have unused accrued sick days and vacation time will be able to donate that time into a "sick leave bank" for fellow town employees in need of extended leaves of absence.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski told the Board of Selectmen during Tuesday's meeting that he is setting up a bank for town employees to donate their unused paid time off for co-workers in need.

The idea is to help out employees "who are having medical issues, or their dependents are, and they need some additional time off," said Milanoski. "I want to make sure they're able to do the healing they need to do so they don't need to worry about coming back immediately if they run out of sick or vacation time."

The selectmen all agreed with this notion, although no official vote was taken.

active member of the Cohasset Community Garden Club, but in the past, she served three terms – a total of nine years – on the board of selectmen. She also spent years serving on the School Committee, Capital Budget Committee and Planning Board.

At 83 years old, Gjesteby has said that her chief reason for running for town office again is because of her belief that board seats should be contested.

"I'm not running against a person, I'm running against a board," Gjesteby said on the phone Monday. "I'm appalled at what's been going on... We need a race."

Gjesteby added that she's been buoyed by support throughout the community.

"A lot of people want to do signs," she said. "It's amazing... I think people are suddenly more interested this year in what's been going on."

Carr said that he applauds Gjesteby for throwing her hat in the ring.

"It's terrific," he said. "I know her very well. I don't see Martha as an opponent to me, just someone who is very different than me." Carr cited his public sector experience and work obtaining grants for the town of Cohasset: "I feel I'm uniquely qualified."

Carr, too, is gearing up for the race, and said that he will soon announce his new campaign manager.

"I like campaigning," the selectmen chair said. "I've had a tremendous amount of people who have offered to help... I'm putting together a dynamic team and am blessed to have their support."

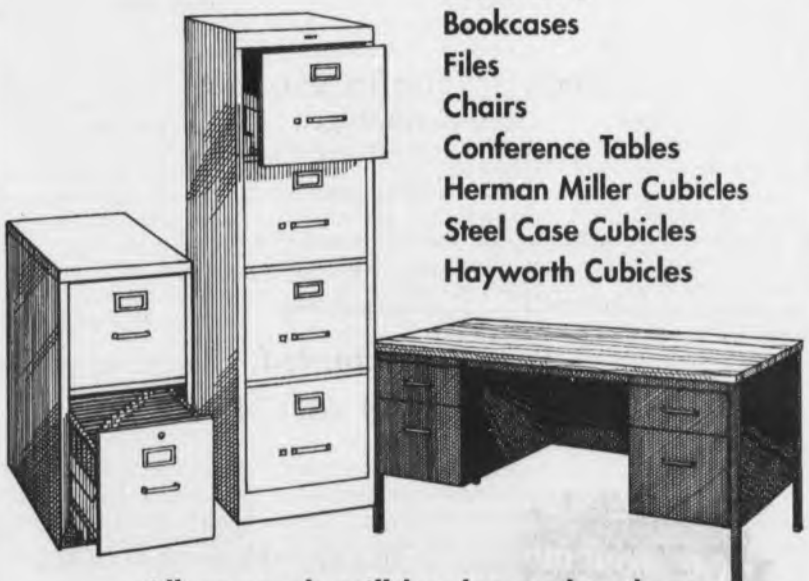
Order flags for Field of Honor

Once again The Sons of the American Legion, Squadron 118 of Cohasset, will post hundreds of United States Flags in a poignant display honoring local veterans from May 19 to June 6. The Field of Honor recognizes the veterans who have so valiantly served our country to protect and preserve our freedom.

For $25 individual flags may be sponsored in memory of family or friends honored. Checks should be made payable to the Sons of the American Legion with a note on the memo line of the check indicating Field of Honor. Sponsored flags can be retained as mementos of this year's Field of Honor which can be then be displayed from home or business. Sponsored flags will be available for pick up from the field after 1p.m., on June 6th.



To order a flag, contact the American Legion Post at telephone 781-383-9657 or stop by at the Post at 98 Summer St. anytime weekdays after 3 p.m., on Saturdays after 10 a.m. or on Sundays after 12 p.m.

OUR VIEW

Question of the Week

The selectman, planning board and board of assessors races promise to perk up what could otherwise be a sleepy Town Election!

This week we would like to launch our Question of the Week for Selectman Tedd Carr and Martha Gjesteby, a former selectman, who are in a two-way race for selectman. In the weeks ahead, we will add questions for the planning board and assessors races.

At our Hingham office this week, a Hingham selectman stopped by to talk about another matter when he asked us if the recent issues at Town Hall in Cohasset were related to having a Town Manager versus a Town Administrator. He inadvertently gave us the idea for our first Question of the Week.

For selectman candidates:

Some towns, like Hingham still have a Town Administrator form of government, others like Hanover, recently switched to a Town Manager form of government.

Cohasset adopted the Town Manager form of government in the mid-1990s.

Do you think having a strong Town Manager works in Cohasset or has the time come to revisit the Town Manager Act?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

All candidates opposed or unopposed are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words) per week, from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers or short statements on issues.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com

TAKE PART

The Cohasset Mariner is building a Readers Advisory Network of e-mail addresses so we can more frequently involve our readers in the content of the newspaper.

Readers, who join the network, may be asked for reactions to stories, ideas for stories or follow-ups, for a digital "person on the street" interview, or for a community commentary.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the network, email Mary Ford at mford@wickedlocal.com. She will answer any questions that you may have. The Mariner promises to remove you immediately from the Readers Advisory Network if you request that we do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Concession contracts and rationality

The contractual practice of exchanging goods, services and money probably is almost as old as mankind and is one of the things that give humans the advantage over other animals. The vast majority of contracts benefit both parties to their mutual satisfaction e.g. the roofer who is satisfied with his remuneration and the homeowner who is pleased with his new roof. Only a tiny fraction of contracts end up with recrimination and lawsuits.

Concession contracts are but one of many kinds of contracts that enable humans to agree on an exchange of goods, services and money, and are widely used in the United States by municipal utilities. Whether of mutual benefit, depends on the terms and parameters specific to each utility situation. Concession contracts are not inherently unfair to either party. When conditions are favorable and properly negotiated, concession contracts can be of great benefit to both parties—just like any form of contract.

The water commission does not propose to ram a concession contract down our throats, it merely proposes to explore whether such a contract would be sufficiently advantageous to Cohasset, given the parameters specific to Cohasset, and only if so, to recommend it at Town Meeting. Seems idiotic (and destructive) for those who know little of the specifics (some of which will be unknown until bids are received) to damn the concession idea, as did Mike Coughlin and others.

It would be irresponsible not to seek the data specific to Cohasset that would reveal whether or not a concession contract makes economic sense, and thus be worthy of consideration at Town Meeting.

R. Murray Campbell,217 Jerusalem Road

Selectmen are punishing the innocent

In light of the vote of the Planning Board, I would like to comment on the issue of the contracts I signed with our professional staff.

When I assumed the post of Town Manager, morale was low, teamwork was problematic and employees perceived their work environment to be to a certain extent, hostile. Some department heads had contracts and others did not. The contracts were designed to give employees a level of stability, the ability to do their jobs and to give advice to town officials without the fear of retaliation and retribution. Some contracts involved a change of duties. Other reflected the fact that many professional positions and salaries were not commensurate with their peers in neighboring communities.

The contracts were legal. The unions were notified and although they raised some objections — the advice I was given by the Town Attorney at that time — supported my view that I was well within my authority. The Chair of the Board of Selectmen was briefed and the only contract which he voiced concern was the Assistant to the Town Manager as it was reasoned that this individual worked for both the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen. These contracts were not "Christmas in January" but the basic job security that exists in most every town in the commonwealth and the private security.

The contracts were designed to protect employees from the very political pressures, which they are now forced to endure. The BOS and Interim Town Manager have violated the very cornerstone of personnel management by rescinding the contracts and taking out the issues they may have had with me on the innocent. This weekend as we gather for Easter, I ask all to ponder whether they would like to work in an environment where contracts are meaningless, where they perceive their futures are insecure and where their extra efforts are meaningless. It must not be missed in this discussion that the contracts were for the leaders of the town: Police, Fire and the Public Works Chiefs, our Finance professionals, department heads, Planning Coordinator and Senior Center Director.

I urge the Selectmen to reconsider this ill-advised action. Cohasset deserves a winning team.

CEF appreciates fundraiser support

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to everyone who helped make this year's spring fundraiser a success! The Vegas Night fundraiser held on Friday, March 30, at the Red Lion attracted close to 275 people. Thanks to all the sponsors and donors for their continued support of the CEF's mission to promote excellence in Cohasset public education.

In connection with the CEF Vegas Night, we would like to especially thank the following individuals:

The talented event committee for turning Cohasset into Vegas – even if for only one night.

Mike Lewis, fifth grade teacher, for speaking so eloquently about how the CEF grants have positively impacted his classroom and the Deer Hill School.

Pattison Photography, Lisa Gilbert Photography, Twist Creative Group and Mike Reilly for the amazing photographic images and Wishing Wall visuals.

The Red Lion Inn and Boston Charity Casinos for the elegant venue and casino gaming.

The local businesses and individuals who supported the Vegas Night fundraiser with in-kind donations to the Wishing Wall raffle and delicious dessert table.

The following sponsors: Avalon Cohasset; Carr, Lynch and Sandell Inc.; Child & Adolescent Health Specialists; James Clark Electric Inc.; Cohasset Dental; R.M. Driscoll; Coldwell Banker/Frank Neer & Shannon King; Dean & Hamilton Realtors; Edward Jones/Deborah and John Flanagan; The Law Offices of David H. Farrag P.C.; The Goodale Company Inc.; Graham Waste Services Inc.; The Greaney family; Harbor Medical Associates; Hingham Institution for Savings; JJ's Dairy Hut & Junction; Lemon Lime; NE Moves Mortgage LLC; The Oddleifson family; Dr. Roger Pompeo; RW Rosano; Sestito Landscaping; Sullivan, Garrity & Donnelly Insurance Agency Inc.; Tiryaki Architectural Design; and a Taste of Wine & Spirits.

The CEF was thrilled to see so many new and old faces in the crowd. With the support provided by all of you, the CEF raised enough funds to make a significant difference for our kids, our town and our future. Thank you!

Learn about Cohasset's watershed

Mark S. Bartlett, P.E., President of Norfolk Ram Group, LLC, will present a talk titled "Understanding Cohasset's Watershed: Why Protect It?" on Wednesday, April 11at 7:30 p.m.. The talk is being held at the Lightkeepers' Residence, 15 Lighthouse Lane.

Bartlett's presentation will highlight the issues of watersheds and sustainable storm water management within watersheds. The discussion will also focus specifically on how sustainable storm water management can improve Cohasset's watersheds and protect our coastal resources and water supplies.

Bartlett's firm has been assisting Cohasset and several other Massachusetts towns over the past 10 years with improving storm water management and watershed improvements in general. Every homeowner and landowner can help to improve local storm water management, and strategies for doing so will be discussed.

The talk is hosted by The Cohasset Garden Club and is open to the public.

There is no admission fee.

HEALTH NOTES

Our shifting demographics

STEVE BOBO

Now, with the constituents of the modern population consisting of a large fraction of elders consisting of men and women 50 and above, the character of small towns like Cohasset must at minimum accommodate these individuals.

Rumination on adaptations necessary to adapt to modern technology – fortunately, a barrier between individuals and chaos for us human beings is the ultimate controller: The human brain. Each wired differently and unique among living creatures, the human brain possesses numerous characteristics not present in other mammals, living or extinct. Now, with the constituents of the modern population consisting of a large fraction of elders consisting of men and women 50 and above, the character of small towns like Cohasset must at minimum accommodate these individuals. And even more important, learn how they plan to fit into our society.

What's the thinking? Medical access to the brain, that dynamo driving human activity, is only partially available in real time and only in limited form. We all remember macabre movies in which a skullcap with electrodes used to probe the brain for thoughts is switched on, etc. Not possible; either in the near or far term. The only real indicators as to how a person thinks are by the answers to test questions. And considering how many tests are out there, it's a wonder we know as much as we believe we do.

We've talked about the cell phone and followed with comments about the various gadgets for transmitting words, sounds, pictures and movies simultaneously over great distances. Who knows what other devices and concepts will be added to those already assaulting our respective psyches.

From the beginning, many articles ago, the general pattern of Health Notes was to describe an ailment; provide some facts about it; how virulent, how widespread, etc., and then describe the cure or at least something that provided relief. Little did we know that a large fraction of our population would consist of elder individuals with needs and desires that have changed.

Perhaps, the time has come to change Health Notes approach: To remark on the character of the waves of information rolling in on the beach of our consciousness. The press and other media are frantically trying to report every detail and barely keeping up with the most important listing of current events. Meanwhile other developments having a heavy bearing on our health are occurring, largely without comment by the media. For example reasoning; rather, the premises of an inductive logical argument indicate some degree of support (inductive probability) for the conclusion but do not entail it; that is, they suggest truth but do not ensure it. In this manner, there is the possibility of moving from generalizations to individual instances. Inductive reasoning consists of inferring general principles or rules from specific facts. A well-known laboratory example of inductive reasoning works like a guessing game. The participants are shown cards that contain figures differing in several dimensions, such as shape, number and color. On each trail, they are given two cards and asked to choose the one that represents a particular concept. After they choose a card, the researcher says "right" or "wrong."

The inclusion of additives of unknown composition for cosmetic purposes or to change the mass of a product so it'll weigh more, or at least appear to. Change in nutritive value of staple products like vegetables and fruits and their effect on elders.

Creation of empathy groups as a marketing device to champion causes that benefit a product to the determent of more healthy alternatives. For example using egg whites to supplement the fluid within a package of frozen chicken breasts or adding salt to previously frozen fish to reduce discoloration upon thawing.

The examples of generalized changes in the composition of certain food products was discussed (off the record) with several experts in food nutrition. In general, there was some concurrence with the above topics when we casually mentioned them.

Who knows how many other concepts, stratagems or just plain products need to be changed to accommodate a different demographic in the future? Health Notes issues its standard warning: Read the label; think about whether the product is good for the entire family and then make your decision.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

RECYCLING

Holey socks, not in the trash!

CLAIRE SULLIVAN

The thrift store rejects are baled and sent to rag graders to be sorted based on condition, color, quality, and material type.

Are you done with those tattered towels? That coffee-stained shirt? Your cast-offs are still too good for the trash!

The average Massachusetts resident throws away about 70 pounds of old clothes, footwear and household "soft-wear" each year. That adds up to around 260,000 TONS of used, but useful, textiles that were burned and buried, discovered during audits done at several Mass. disposal facilities in 20101. This is 6% of all our disposed trash!

There seems to be a widespread misperception that charities and textile recyclers only want "gently used" items that can be resold in thrift shops.

It's time to debunk that myth. The fact is even your shabbiest old cloth, leather or stuffed item in your house can be recycled. The only requirements are that they be clean (as in not stinky and gross) and dry.

"We want the public to know all clothing and household textiles such as tablecloths, sheets, shoes, belts, and stuffed animals can be recycled", says Larry Groipen, past President of the Secondary Materials and Recycled Textiles Association (SMART) and chief of ERC Wiping Products in Lynn. "As long as the items are clean, even if they are stained or damaged, there is a recycling use for the material."

What happens to your castoffs after you drop them in one of those ubiquitous collection boxes? Whether the box belongs to Bay State Textiles, Goodwill, Salvation Army, Red Cross, or any of the dozens of other organizations, workers sort them by hand.

The "good stuff" is often sold in local thrift stores, raising money for charities and providing bargain clothing for us and our neighbors. (You can dress yourself pretty well shopping at Salvation Army Family Stores.)

The thrift store rejects are baled and sent to rag graders to be sorted based on condition, color, quality, and material type. Some baled material is exported to developing countries, where impoverished populations depend on low-cost used items to clothe themselves, and for material to make new items. There is a thriving cottage industry in shoe and clothing repair and resale in countries that lack their own natural resources.

Absorbent rags are cut and sold to commercial operations (machine shops, car washes, marinas...) as wiping cloths, which is what Larry's business in Lynn does.

Materials that can't be used as rags are shredded and reprocessed into fibers for furniture stuffing, insulation, soundproofing and carpet padding. Millbury Textiles near Worcester employs dozens of people who do this. Even zippers and buttons are captured and recycled. Shredded polyester is granulated and spun into new fabric.

The centuries-old "rag" business employs hundreds of Massachusetts workers, supports training programs to help struggling citizens develop work skills, and adds value to materials that would otherwise be wasted. Proceeds from the sale of all the grades of textiles cover collection and processing costs, and often provide funding for charitable causes, local organizations, schools and municipalities.

Paul Curry of Bay State Textiles stresses that "when municipalities are informing the public, keep the message simple! Everything should be DRY, but we accept the GOOD, gently used clothing, the BAD, those ripped jeans with the broken zipper, and the UGLY, that sweater Aunt Edna gave you in 1978". BST is working with several municipalities to generate revenue for schools and municipal recycling programs.

Getting the most value out of the thrift store outthrows sustains many local businesses. "This symbiotic relationship between private-sector recyclers, charities and community groups efficiently recycles 80 million pounds of clothing annually in Massachusetts," Groipen (SMART's past president) pointed out. "But we have great potential for growth, as this represents only about 15 percent of all textile waste."

Making new cloth, especially cotton, is a dirty business, sucking up vast quantities of water, petroleum-based fertilizer and pesticides. In fact, up to 1/3 of a pound of pesticide and 700 gallons of water is consumed to grow and process 2 shirts-worth of cotton. Reusing old cloth saves money and natural resources by reducing this pollution and water use. Some designers are even creating new pieces of clothing from old scraps!

Keeping valuable material out of the trash and supporting local organizations and businesses are reason enough to put all of your used clothing, shoes and household textiles in any donation box. For residents who would also like to see the proceeds from recycling their old clothes used to fund charitable causes, or to schedule a pickup at your home, go to www.donationtown.org.

Recycling isn't just good for our paper, cardboard and containers. We help the planet and the economy by recycling all our textiles too!

Claire Sullivan is Executive Director of the South Shore Recycling Cooperative that includes Cohasset.

SENIOR SCENE

Seminars taught us a lot

This was on medication management. She discussed the side effects, allergies, and the interaction of medications, as well as how and where to store them.

LOUISE SMULLEN

Another St. Patrick's Day has flown by. The seniors enjoyed the annual dinner of corned beef and cabbage prepared by chef, Paul Guinee, assisted by Anna and her cheerful helpers. During the dinner the group was entertained by Sam Chase, who sang Irish tunes accompanied by his guitar.

One of the March seminars was presented by Michelle Mix, dietitian for Hannafords. She explained how to read the ingredients on packaged foods and what to look for. She discussed healthy choices and serving sizes. Michelle took us on an imaginary shopping trip around the perimeter of the grocery store, starting with produce and continuing on to the deli, meat department, and dairy. She talked about watching for special sales and buying produce in season.

Hind Douki, also of Hannaford's as the pharmacy manager, presented a program. This was on medication management. She discussed the side effects, allergies, and the interaction of medications, as well as how and where to store them.

Cheryl Bambury, Norfolk County Deputy Sheriff, was the speaker at another seminar. She explained the voluntary sign-up telephone system that checks your well-being. One may request a daily phone call to see if he or she is OK. She explained the procedure if the call is not answered. This service is free of charge and would be especially beneficial for those who live alone.

Susan Gillam, program coordinator of the Home Modification Loan Program, was one of our speakers. This program benefits those needing changes in the home because of their physical condition. This might include changes in the kitchen, safety updates in the bathroom, grab bars and stair lifts. Depending on income, loans of up to $30,000 may be made, to be paid back on the sale of one's home.

On one day in March, the seniors were treated to lunch at Golden Living. After lunch they were entertained by a baritone, who sang a selection of tunes. This is going to be a once-a-month affair with sometimes a speaker, and sometimes entertainment.

Are you still driving your car? On April 4, at 11 a.m., Betsy Maholchic from Braintree Rehab Hospital will address situations that indicated when an elder should give up his or her car keys. None of us wants to give them up, do we? But I guess there comes a time...

On April 22, Gail Sacone of the Cohasset Community Garden Club will show gardens and tell us about the plant growth in each. This should be an interesting program for plant lovers.

The signs and stages of Alzheimer's disease will be the topic on April 18. The presenter will be Alicia Seaver, executive director of Bridges by Epoch.

On April 25, Lisa Barrett, R.N., from Nursing Liaisons will speak about interactions with someone who is depressed. She will also talk about family problems.

All seminars begin at 11 a.m. on Wednesday. Lunch is served at noon. You may come just for the seminar. However, you might like to stay for lunch, having made a reservation.

If you have read your VISTA, you will have noted that the Cohasset Café is opening at the Lightkeeper's on April 9. Drop in anytime between 9 and 11 a.m. for good coffee and a good time with friends and neighbors.

When I was a child, this is the time of year when jump ropes, marbles and handballs came out of winter storage. This would be back in the second half of the 1920s, and there were no cars to speak of. We would mark out hopscotch grids with chalk in the middle of the street. We played hard and had a lot of fun. I especially liked to play marbles and had about 200 stored in a Bokar coffee tin. Wonder whatever became of it?

FOR THE RECORD

Lending support to your event

One of the sponsor partnerships we're most proud of is our longstanding relationship with the American Cancer Society and its Relay for Life program.

Editor's note: this column was modified and updated from its original version that was published in March of 2011.

One of the things we don't do often enough is promote the good work our company does in the community.

GateHouse Media New England, the parent company of this newspaper and Wicked Local, are involved with a several upcoming events at the end of April, including Walk Like MADD, a 5K walk to bring awareness about the dangers of drinking and driving; a Plymouth County Earth Day event on April 28; and the Hingham SEPAC Family Fun Run to support the Hingham Special Education Advisory Committee. On May 2, we'll be sponsoring the fourth annual Taste of Weymouth fundraiser for the Weymouth Food Pantry, and coming in September, GateHouse will be lending support to the annual South Shore Walk to End Alzheimer's.

There are ample opportunities available for us to help promote and sponsor community events that matter to you.

Fortunately, we have a very competent promotions department that works with organizations all over eastern Massachusetts to assist with a variety of events.

One of the sponsor partnerships we're most proud of is our longstanding relationship with the American Cancer Society and its Relay for Life program. GateHouse Media New England, the parent company of your weekly newspaper, has been a corporate sponsor of the community Relay for Life events for the last five years. Prior to that, as Community Newspaper Company, the association dates back to at least 2001. During that time, the number of sites nationwide has grown tremendously, as has the amount of money raised for cancer research. We're proud to be a corporate sponsor.

What you might not know, however, is our sponsorship of community events goes beyond the Relay for Life. For a list of upcoming events GateHouse is backing, log on to community.wickedlocal.com/events.

Requesting sponsorship assistance is as easy as a few clicks of the mouse. The link can be found at community.wickedlocal.com or on your Wicked Local homepage. Hover over the first option on the main navigation bar on the left and you'll see an option to "Submit Your News." Click on that link and it will take you to a page that reads: "Share your news, photos and events with us." Scroll to the bottom on that page and you'll see a link titled "Ask us to sponsor your next event." When you click on that link, it will take you to an online form that will go directly to the GateHouse Media New England promotions department.

We take great pride in participating in as many of your community events as possible and the online form helps us streamline the request process. As you might imagine, our promotions department receives a number of requests from organizers of community and nonprofit events across Eastern Massachusetts.

We obviously can't meet every request, but we try our best to find a way to help out in the communities we cover.

CONTRACTS

$65,000 in the current fiscal year.

However, according to Warrant Article One from that Special Town Meeting, the money that was appropriated for the planning board personnel services was supposed to fund additional part-time clerical assistance. By inking a new contract, Pilczak was promoted, a move that took her out of the clerical union. This caused the clerical union to file a grievance against the former town manager because in order to take an employee out of the union, the position must be backfilled; otherwise, the union loses a position, officials said.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski has said that there is no money in the current fiscal year budget to accommodate this raise, or any other town employee raises; the town is in the midst of a spending freeze for the remainder of fiscal year 2012 due to a $350,000 deficit.

Milanoski said that Coughlin ignored several emails from the clerical union regional representative to discuss the contractual changes he had authorized. This led to the union filing an unfair labor charge, citing that if one member of the union was given a raise, all members must be given the same treatment.

Coughlin has said of these contracts that he issued them in order to boost morale in Town Hall and offer job security and stability to town employees.

The selectmen voted to reject the 10 employee contracts last month and gave Milanoski 30 days to work with the individual employees to sign letters of agreement. The interim town manager said that he reached an agreement with Facilities Manager Mark Kelly last month. Milanoski reported during Tuesday night's selectmen meeting that he has since reached an agreement with two other town employees, one whose contract had ended in December and "had nothing to fall back on." This contract was for Town Assessor Mary Quill, who has been given a one-year contract and is being paid a salary that is commensurate with town assessor salaries in neighboring towns like Duxury and Scituate, said Milanoski. The interim town manager said he also reached an agreement with assistant to the town manager Jennifer Oram, but as the employee contract discussion was not listed on the night's agenda, Carr asked Milanoski to table the discussion for next week.

The planning board members in attendance, meanwhile, took issue with Milanoski issuing these other contracts but not honoring Pilczak's.

"We've been told repeatedly that no personnel actions would occur till fiscal year '13," said planning board member Charles Samuelson. "But earlier, the interim town manager proposed three new contracts."

Carr responded that Milanoski is doing what the selectmen asked him to— working with each employee affected by the contractual changes to reach some kind of agreement.

Four of the five members of the planning board attended Tuesday's meeting, as a discussion of last week's planning board's action was on the selectmen's agenda. The discussion was originally scheduled for 7:30 p.m. but was moved to 9 p.m. to be brought up during the town manager's report. Due to a lengthy presentation by the town auditor on the fiscal year 2011 audit, the planning board discussion took place around two hours later.

"If I was in their shoes and saw a very troubling thing in town, having a vote of no confidence is something I could never do. Instead of saying, 'Hey, I think you're doing a crummy job,' I would say, 'How can I help?'"

Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr

Carr said that he disapproved of a majority of the planning board showing up to the selectmen's meeting to discuss official business; it meant they had a quorum but had not posted an official meeting. The planning board members said that they came to speak as private citizens.

Ivimey said that he was upset with the selectmen's treatment of Pilczak. Samuelson urged the selectmen to do something to fix the situation. Carr asked Samuelson what he would suggest, and Samuelson said the board should honor Pilczak's contract.

Ivimey further told Carr that if they did not honor Pilczak's contract, it would be a breach of contract and she could sue them.

Agreeing to disagree

The planning board members were visibly angered when both selectmen and Milanoski said that there was little that could be done to amend Pilczak's contract — "The contract is void," said Carr. Nothing can be done in the current fiscal year. Milanoski said that the matter could be looked into for fiscal year 2013, beginning this July, but this answer did not satisfy the planning board.

Ivimey argued that the selectmen were refusing to give Pilczak an upgrade that involved "a miniscule amount of money."

Capital Budget Committee chair Steve Gaumer countered that as a taxpayer, the money issue was not a minor one.

"If I steal from him and give the money to you, that doesn't make that money yours," he said to one of the planning board members. "The negotiation needs to go back to the union. For the person it's hurtful and unfair, but the action was immoral and illegal."

Carr added that the contractual changes have put the selectmen into a bad position, and they are trying "to get everybody back on track."

"I feel so badly for the employees," Carr said, adding that the selectmen "got a raw deal" from the town manager they hired and were left to clean up his mess.

"I don't care whose fault it was," said Samuelson. "I understand your position and understand you're defensive."

Advisory Committee chairman Peter Pescatore told the planning board members that his committee "wrangled hard on this specific item." He tried to provide clarity by looking back to Special Town Meeting, when this matter was voted on. He explained that the $10,000 identified in warrant article one was supposed to cover personnel services and was allocated to part-time clerical assistance to the planning board.

The money "had nothing to do with the current person providing clerical support," Pescatore said of Pilczak. "The language [in the warrant article] was homogenized into generality — personnel services. The minutes from advisory meetings clearly state our concern for creating the job without a description."

While the advisory committee voted 6-0 to approve article one for Special Town Meeting, member Andrew Willard got up during town meeting to voice his concern.

"The advisory committee is concerned that on December 5, nearly halfway through our fiscal year, one item we are voting on here is adding full-time equivalent headcount to our Town Hall, which is the planning board personnel services," Willard said at the time. "We have no visibility to the impact of fiscal 2013 at this time; we have no ability to plan for this change at this time. The advisory committee implores Town Manager going forward to not add staff at Special Town Meeting. These matters are best handled as part of the annual budget planning process and voted on in springtime."

Willard said on the phone this week that the change in personnel services was essentially creating a new job by changing the status of a part-time employee to a full-time one. His concern at the time was "beefing up staff levels off budget cycle."

"Things done mid-December are very bad and don't get vetted," said Willard.

Roy Fitzsimmons said during the public comment period Tuesday night that this whole conflict goes to show how crucial it is to have warrant articles fully explained on the floor of Town Meeting.

"It's imperative to know what we're voting on," he said. "The townspeople spending the money deserve to know."

Despite the robust discussion, little was decided during the selectmen's meeting. The planning board members were clearly frustrated at the board. Veteran member Al Moore stormed out, saying, "I'm off this board shortly, and sorry it couldn't be sooner."

Perhaps the only resolution of the night came when Samuelson asked the selectmen to try to do something to fix the problem that was "created through nobody's fault."

"We just want this resolved," said Samuelson. "We don't want to wait another three months."

Carr said the selectmen and interim town manager would try to resolve the issue. He also apologized, after the planning board members had left the meeting in a somber mood, for some of his earlier remarks, and said he planned to call each member to apologize. "I didn't mean to lose my cool," Carr said. "We really are trying to make this right for everyone."

On Wednesday, during a trip to Washington D.C., Carr called the Mariner and explained his position.

"I remain very concerned that the majority of the planning board was clearly there to discuss activity without posting a meeting... but they all care very deeply about the employee that was the topic of discussion last night. We disagree about how to proceed and what to do next, but I admire the planning board for being so vocal in terms of helping their employee."

However, added Carr, "If I was in their shoes and saw a very troubling thing in town, having a vote of no confidence is something I could never do. Instead of saying, 'Hey, I think you're doing a crummy job,' I would say, 'How can I help?'"

All in all, the selectmen chair said, "It's a tough situation but we're working through it. At the end of the day we're going to be in a better place; we're fixing things that needed to be fixed."

Timeline: Planning Board position

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski read aloud from the following during Tuesday's selectmen meeting, in order to explain the confusion with the planning board coordinator's contract.

- 2008: Position upgraded to I-7 Planning/Building Administrator. Currently planning office is closed on Fridays and Tuesday evenings, eliminating public access.
- Aug. 2011: Planning/Building Administrator requested reclassification to higher grade according to union procedures; also wanted to create a part-time secretary position at a lower pay grade and hours.
- Oct. 28, 2011: Union Regional Representative emailed [former Town Manager Michael] Coughlin that she wanted to meet to discuss changes he was making within the Union Personnel in general without impact bargaining.
- Nov. 4, 2011: Follow-up from Union Regional Representative to bargain his changes and if [Coughlin] does not respond they will have no choice but to file an Unfair Labor Charge against the Town of Cohasset.
- Dec. 5, 2011: Special Town Meeting did not create a position titled Planning Coordinator. Article 1 Town Meeting did increase the Personnel Services by $10,800. According to the Chairman of the Advisory Committee, these funds were for a part-time secretary. The rate for this position was to be a G-1 classification at $18.15/hour. There was no position of Planning Coordinator ever created at STM, nor was there any money for increasing the Planning and Building Administrator's position to a Planning Coordinator's position; only money for a part time Planning Secretary.
- Dec. 8, 2011: Union Regional Representative emailed Coughlin about union in general stating that "members are not happy there is special treatment going on," "Coughlin was handing out (wage) increases without impact bargaining with union," "the steps were put in place by the union to continue a fair equal wage increase," "Coughlin has put the wage increase out of sync," "there were obviously a back door deal because it was not impact bargained with the union was not done."
- Dec. 14, 2011: Payroll status change for planning/building administrator due to reevaluation of current job and was signed by Assistant to the Town Manager increasing the pay rate from an I-7 ($28.38/hour) planning/building administrator to a Planning Coordinator/Department Head position at $65,000 / year to start on Jan. 2, 2012.
- Dec. 21, 2011: Union Regional Representative emailed Coughlin stating that she had contacted her legal counsel regarding filing an Unfair Labor Practice.
- Jan. 3, 2012: What appears to be the execution date was entered into by the Coughlin and employee for three years, at a rate of $65,000, at same public office hours of Town Hall, with four weeks' vacation the position did not previously have, contract may automatically extend, and if Town Meeting does not vote to fund the position, the contract shall terminate.
- Jan. 12, 2012: Union Regional Representative emailed Coughlin filing three class action grievances on behalf of the union. Others followed along with Unfair Labor Practice from other Unions.
- Jan. 18, 2012: The Planning/Building Administrator sends an email to Coughlin stating that the topic of personnel changes, new hires and creation of new positions was brought up in terms of Town Meeting votes at the Board of Selectmen's Meeting; additionally, states she is no longer in the union, nor has she signed a contract — she would like a signed contract to more solidly place her position and offer her a more solid sense of security "for a contract that we can all sign." Coughlin responded on the same day that he wanted her to copy a contract from another employee and he wanted her to make this her number one priority, as he wanted to sign it by Jan. 20.
- Feb. 9, 2012: Facilities Director prepared a memo to Town Manager on Feb. 2 that Mark Brennan and Marie MacDonald's weekly salaries started being drawn from the facilities department payroll. At their rate and assuming the position is not filled with a maintenance worker, the Facilities Director is going to have to stop paying Mark and Marie on Thursday, June 14, when they run out of money. The position of maintenance worker was filled on 4/2/12.
- Feb. 27, 2012: Board of Selectmen made aware of all contractual issues with employees. Attorneys at Deutsch Williams told the BoS they have 14 days to confirm or deny department head appointments under the Town Manager Act.
- Mar. 12, 2012: BoS voted to deny all department head appointments made by Coughlin per the Town Managers Act and revert all salaries and positions immediately to the FY12 appropriations, as authorized by Town Meeting.
- Mar. 13, 2012: Grievance meeting with Union Regional Representative, Local Union, discussed options for resolution that could include increasing two steps for all union employees or removing the increases.
- Mar. 26, 2012: Chairman of the Planning Board states the Planning Building Administrator is the best worker in Town and that he was hoping to avoid an embarrassing action as the Planning Board will deny the current spending request to pay the Planning/Building Administrator.
- Mar. 28, 2012: Town Manager attends Planning Board meeting. Had told Chairman of the Planning Board that he would be more than happy to meet with him and give him an update on all the issues surrounding this position. All positions in town under the jurisdiction of the Town Manger are all being reevaluated, with new job descriptions, and will be means tested with other towns along with a personnel policy. The Town Manager stated "You have a solid employee working for both the planning board and building department, as we have many others in town hall, but I must treat all employees equally which as a tax payer the Chairman of the Planning Board would agree with, and will not do special deals as you are suggesting."

OPERATIONS DEPARTMENT:

Greenbush guys laid off

Two casualties of the voided employee contracts are town engineers Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan, who have been let go.

Milanoski has said over the past few weeks that there is no money in the current fiscal year budget to fund the Operations Department headed by Brennan that former Town Manager Michael Coughlin created.

"The position had never been created by town meeting or approved by the board of selectmen; Mike Coughlin created and funded the position on his own, and we never had funding to fund that," said Milanoski.

"I had to lay Mark off as a full-time employee; he had worked here full-time for two months at $108,000 a year. So there was no way of funding that— I had to do what I had to do."

Brennan, who is retired, has been working as a consulting engineer for special town projects, including the Greenbush commuter rail line, for the past seven years.

Since there are ongoing special projects in town, including the Jacob Meadows tide gate and Treats Pond, Milanoski said there is still a need for project management support staff.

"The town needs someone to help on smaller grants and smaller projects," the interim town manager said. For larger projects, the town would hire a clerk of the works to monitor the project on behalf of town. "This will all be outsourced in the future," said Milanoski. "Small projects, we'll continue to do in-house."

Milnoski could also retain one of "the Greenbush guys" for grant writing and hopes to find funding in next year's fiscal budget to be able to pay part-time consultants. However, "it's not going to be a full-time position."

While Brennan's contract was upgraded from a part-time consultant to full-time town employee, Milanoski said Gruber was not upgraded to full-time status as far as he's aware. Gruber, who is also retired, has been in Florida for the winter but returned to Cohasset earlier this week. Like Brennan, he has also found himself out of a job.

"I have no work for him at this point," said Milanoksi. "There is no funding we have available to pay him at this point. There was $30,000 in the town manager's budget [for the town engineering consultants]; over $40,000 was spent of that. So far $105,000 was paid this year [for Brennan and Gruber] combined for the first half of the year."

The interim town manager reported this to the selectmen during their Tuesday night meeting. Selectman Diane Kennedy asked Milanoski for a list of all of the special engineering projects currently going on around town to ensure that nothing falls by the wayside, now that it's been made clear that an Operations Department is out of the question.

UPDATE

Town audit presentation

Fiscal 2011 focus of report

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

No one likes to hear the term, "You're being audited." For a town, an audit is merely standard operating procedure.

Cohasset recently underwent an audit for fiscal year 2011, which ended June 30, and the report was presented during the Tuesday, April 3 Board of Selectmen meeting.

"An audit addresses the financial statements of a town for bonding purposes," said town auditor Tony Roselli of the firm Roselli, Clark & Associates. "These statements are sent to potential investors to assess if the town is a good investment risk."

Most of the processes and procedures under review were in major departments, Roselli explained, including the water and sewer departments. The audit requires review of internal control over major transactions.

For fiscal year 2011, the town qualified for a single audit, which requires a special audit of federal grants; this means that the town expended over $500,000 of federal assistance.

Roselli said that he could give the town a clean opinion for the FY '11 audit, meaning that it appears the town's financial position is clearly presented in its financial statements.

Perhaps the biggest reveal of the audit report is that the sewer department, which was previously thought to be in a deficit of over $650,000, actually has a projected surplus $1 million. The audit report breaks down how the state's Department of Revenue reconciles receivables differently than the town does. Roselli explained that the DOR does not reconcile receivables as free cash "as a conservative measure not to overstate things."

The report also shows that the town needs to pad its stabilization funds in order to increase the town's bond rating to a triple 'A' rating.

The audit's findings show that Cohasset is still working to overcome financial difficulties resulting from the economic downturn in 2009. The town took a hit that year in its reserve fund balance, from a high of nearly $2.5 million in 2007 to just over $1 million in '09 and '10. Last year the reserve balance increased by over half a million, thanks in part to a spending freeze enacted last winter, Roselli said.

However, the town is still behind the state average reserve ratio, the auditor explained; the state average is 6 percent versus Cohasset's 4.8 percent ratio. One of the goals to secure a triple A bond rating would be to increase this ratio. Roselli added that it helps that Cohasset is an affluent community with a high net worth and high property values.

The selectmen's recent adoption of fiscal management policies and procedures will also help the town achieve a better bond rating, said Roselli.

Recommendations in the audit include establishing such procedures, which the board adopted in late February. The audit also suggests funding a Human Resources position to meet deficiencies and that this could be a part-time, regionalized position shared with a neighboring town.

Roselli also discussed the need for a chief technology officer (see related story) in order to prevent security breaches of town data. He also expressed the need for better debt recordkeeping and maintenance, adding that he was certain Cohasset's Finance Director Mary Gallagher will have this matter straightened out within the year. Roselli added that Gallagher "is a superstar," that he had worked for her years ago in both Cohasset and Scituate (Gallagher worked as Scituate's Town Accountant for 20 years, but worked in Cohasset's finance department prior to that).

"Mary understands all your issues... you are in great hands," Roselli said.

Another suggestion Roselli had was increasing the amount added to the town's OPEB (other post employee benefits) account each year. The town has a $32.4 future liability in OPEB; the average age of the town's employees is 47.4. Cohasset currently has a stabilization fund for OPEB, but there is not enough money in it to cover this future liability, which Roselli said "is growing at a clip of $3 million a year right now."

While the state requires all employees over age 65 to have their health care turned over to Medicare, Roselli suggested that the town elect a trust fund under Chapter 32B, section 20 to reduce this liability; however, "once you go this route, you can't take [the money] out; it's irrevocable."

Selectman Paul Carlson said that this should be a budget item, that the town should put away $2 million every year. Roselli agreed with this idea, explaining that a special fund for this would earn more every year and reduce the liability amount significantly.

Water and sewer

The audit also contains specific suggestions for the water and sewer departments.

Both departments should consider full enterprise fund accounting, putting all activity into one enterprise fund to alleviate confusion, Roselli said. He also suggested abolishing the use of debt premiums as revenue, which was more of an issue last year than now. DOR gave "a slap on the wrist" for this at the time, said the auditor, but it should not be done again.

Roselli also delved into a discussion of deficits, which has always been a hot button issue, particularly with the water department. The auditor explained that there have been deficits in the water department for the past five out of six years; however, "I don't think there's a real deficit when you do the accrual accounting." Roselli said he disagreed with DOR, which does not give credit for revenue the department collects.

The auditor further suggested an "aggressive collection policy" and applauded the shut-off policy the water department recently enacted.

On the sewer side, Roselli explained how DOR deducted $1 million in betterments for the sewer reconciliation. The money from the betterments is "supposed to go to the fund it benefits," Roselli said.

The auditor also spoke of a "mystery stabilization balance" of $495,000 from sewer that was restated to move to the general stabilization fund. This money should be in the sewer account to pay down debt service; currently, the money is in the town's general stabilization fund, even though it has been prepaid for sewer.

Accountant Eric Kinsherf, who works as a part-time consultant in the town finance department and acted as Cohasset's interim finance director prior to Gallagher's hiring, presented more information on sewer in particular with a reconciliation summary from sewer capital projects.

Kinsherf presented information from an analysis done on the town's Little Harbor and Deep Run-Rust Way sewer projects. Two other projects paid for by the town's general fund were also reviewed: the Jerusalem Road and drainage projects.

Kinsherf shared the following by way of summary:

- The sewer project reconciliation resulted in no deficit in the sewer projects
- There is $150,000 over-expenditure in the drainage capital project
- Sewer project deficits reported at FY 2011 year-end resulted from expenditures made but not yet reimbursed by MWPAT (Mass. Water Pollution Abatement Trust)
- One loan from MWPAT for four separate projects complicated reconciliation

Kinsherf went on to explain that the state owes the town $300,000 from a requested MWPAT reimbursement of $1.3 million. The receipt of these funds will eliminate the cash deficit in the Little Harbor Sewer Project.

Ruggiero lifts spirits

Coach honored at team banquet

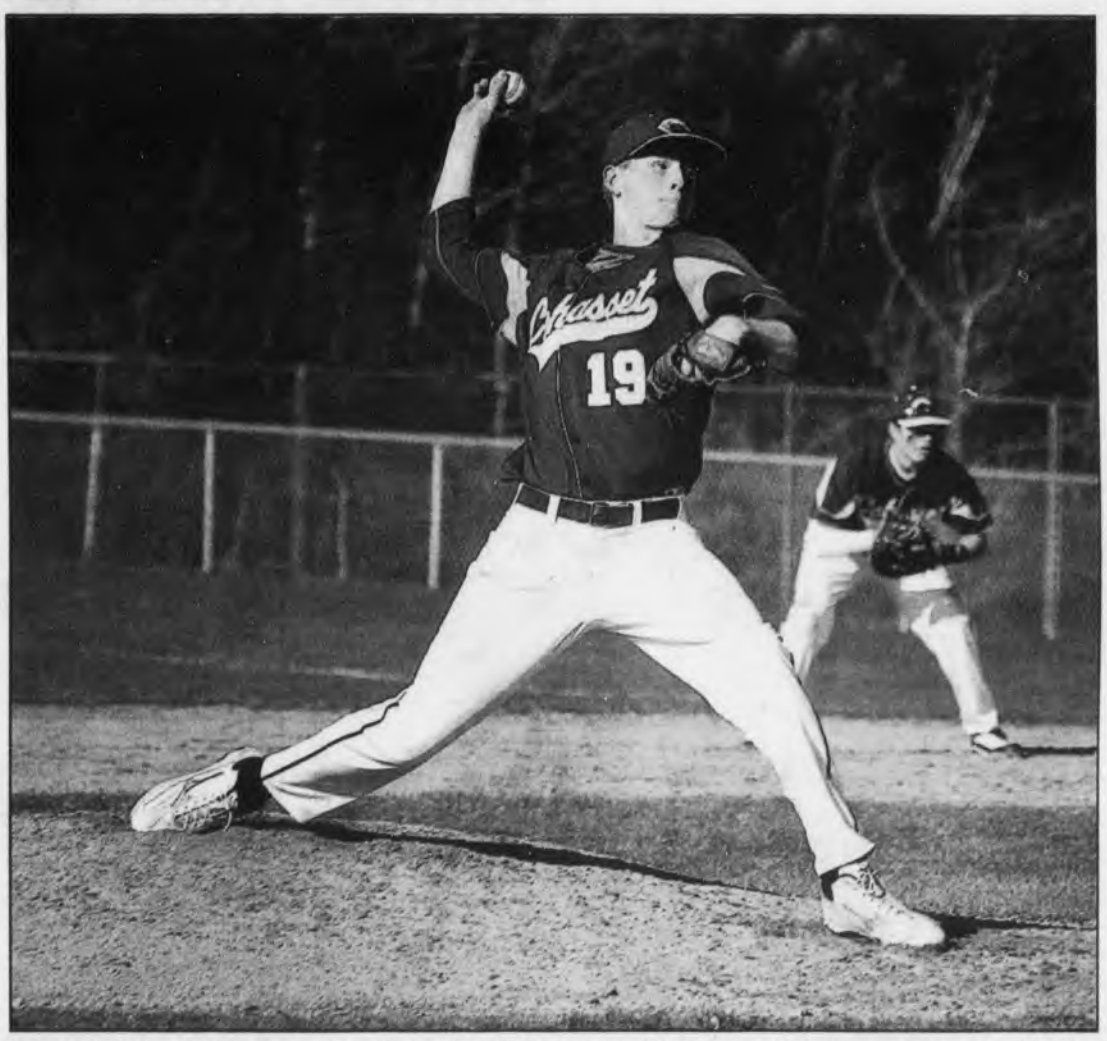
By Dick Trust
GateHouse News Service

To see him abandon his wheelchair and stride to the podium with a walker brought an emotional lift to the roomful of well-wishers.

To hear his good humor, intact after what he has gone through, brought laughter.

But just to see him at all – chatting joyfully with his trademark enthusiasm and zest for life – brought comfort knowing that Bo Ruggiero is still with us.

"I haven't found religion, but I've got to thank God I'm alive after that horrendous accident," Ruggiero said before taking charge at Thursday night's banquet honoring the Cohasset High School boys basketball team he was coaching until a Feb. 16 auto accident that left his car and his body crumpled.



Ruggiero was en route to practice at 1:30 in the afternoon when the Lexus sedan he was driving on Route 53 in Hingham was struck head-on by a pickup truck operated by an alleged drunk driver. Ruggiero was transported to South Shore Hospital and spent days in the intensive care unit with blood on his brain, a pinched vertebra in his neck, fractured ribs and Cohasset pitcher Jamie Faber delivers during the middle innings of the Skippers' 7-2 win over Scituate on Monday. Faber was outstanding in the win, allowing just two unearned runs while fanning eight Sailors. He helped his own cause at the plate with two hits and 3 RBI. The Skippers followed with a 9-2 win over Scituate at home on Wednesday for the regular-season sweep. Christian Davis went 2 for 3 with 2 RBI. GIRLS LACROSSE

Exciting finish

Girls score last second tie

By Susan N. Biddle
Special to the Cohasset Mariner

Whoever said that a tie game in sports is like "kissing your sister," never saw a tie as exciting as Cohasset's season-opening girls lacrosse game at Sandwich on April 2 – an 8-8 tie that wasn't decided until the very last second.

Neither team could generate much tempo early, but Sandwich was able to capitalize on its opportunities while Cohasset struggled with early turnovers and missed passes. The game stood at 5-3 at halftime, in favor of the home team.

The teams traded goals through much of the second half and when Sandwich extended its lead to 8-5 with 4:50 left, it appeared that the Skippers were destined for a fall.

The only ones who didn't see that outcome were the Skippers themselves. First, it was Hope Kissick winning the ensuing draw and feeding Whitney Jaffe to make it 8-6 with 4:35 left. Two

GIRLS TENNIS

Good start

Girls split first two

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset girls tennis team is off to a good start, with a win and loss against tough Patriot League teams, Hingham and Scituate.

In the opener at Scituate, Cohasset was edged 3-2.

Cohasset picked up the win with No. 1 singles player Emma Davis, a freshman, beating Scituate's Niki Lazaris. In first doubles, Cohasset's Meredith Spofford and Caitlin DeAngelis defeated Roisin Sullivan and Emily Richard 1-6, 7-6, 6-4.

The key battle was between Cohasset's Emma Smith and Scituate's Tess Malerbi at third singles.

Cohasset picked up the win with No. 1 singles player Emma Davis, a freshman, beating Scituate's Niki Lazaris. In first doubles, Cohasset's Meredith Spofford and Caitlin DeAngelis defeated Roisin Sullivan and Emily Richard 1-6, 7-6, 6-4.

Malerbi won 7-6, 6-4 in the match that iced the win for Scituate.

In second singles, Scituate's Halerbi downed Hannah Rawson 6-4, 6-4.

Scituate's second doubles team of Caroline Kiddie and newcomer Casey White were also winners over Cohasset's Kate Sookiasian and Gabrielle LeMoyne, 6-4, 6-4.

Cohasset had a big one over Hingham, winning 3-2.

In first singles Emma Davis defeated Hingham's Julia Krumholz 6-3, 6-0, while Cohasset's Hannah Rawson beat Delaney Dunlap 7-5, 1-6, 6-1 in second singles.

Cohasset finished the singles sweep with Emma Smith beating Kristen Ferrucci 6-3, 6-2

In first doubles Hingham's Nikki Lund and Allison McCarthy defeated Meredith Spofford and Caitlin DeAngelis 6-4, 6-4. Hingham also won second doubles with Ashland Stansbury and Maxine Bergstein from Hingham downing Kate Sookiasian and Gabrielle LeMoyne 6-2, 6-3.

Cohasset was at Abington yesterday and hosts Carver on Monday.

Christopher Baird of Boston won Sunday's Cohasset Rotary 10K Road Race by the Sea with a time of 32:08.

Amelia Landberg of Boston was the top women's finisher in Sunday's Cohasset Rotary 10K Road Race by the Sea with a time of 36:46.

YOUTH BASKETBALL

First annual Cohasset Basketball Jamboree a success

More than 120 recreation and travel basketball players from grades 1-8 participated in the first annual Cohasset Basketball Jamboree, held last Sunday April 1 at the Cohasset HS gym.

Players from grades 1-4 enjoyed an afternoon of fun and games, while grade 5-8 players and more than fifty parents engaged in some high stakes parent vs. child games refereed by the Cohasset HS Varsity players.

The Jamboree marked the end of a successful 2011/2012 basketball season, which included the following well-earned honors:

Boys 5A won the Marshfield Thanksgiving Tournament

Boys 5B won the Abington League Western Division Championship

Girls 7A made the playoffs while Girls 5A, 6A and 8A were semifinalists.

In the Kingston League, the Girls 5b, 6B and 7B all made the playoffs.

The Boys 6A won the Patriot League Championship and the Bourne Busnengo Tournament

The event was sponsored by the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club, a volunteer, non-profit Booster organization that supports all basketball activities in Cohasset and is comprised of volunteers who contribute their time and skill to better Cohasset's basketball community. This year their youth basketball program served 380 Cohasset children in grades 1-8 as well as 150 travel players in grades 5-8. Tryouts for next year's travel teams will be held in September, and registration for the recreation program will be held in October.

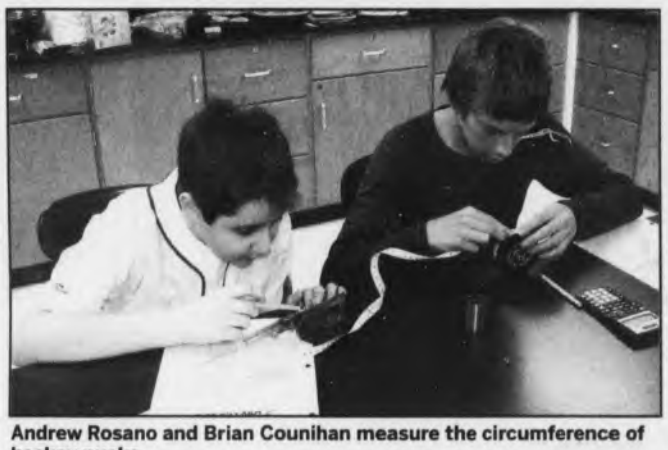
Celebrating circles

Middle School students hold PI Day!

Grade seven and eight students at Cohasset Middle School joined mathematicians around the world in celebrating PI day on March 14.

In any circle the ratio of the circumference divided by the circle's diameter is equal to pi. Because seeing is believing, in grade 8, students completed a lab that investigated the definition of pi. Along with bringing in circular treats to celebrate this day honoring circles, students brought in various circular objects ranging from lip balm containers to Volkswagen mascot costumes to measure each circle's circumference and diameter. The day turned out to be a success with many groups having their circumference and diameter ratios result with a percent error of less than one percent to the exact value of pi (3.1415926....). The best results came from the group containing Emily Rosano, Ryan Spicer, and Alexandra Lanier who as a group were able to approximate pi with a percent error of two hundredths of a percent.

During math class, seventh grade students watched a video clip about Daniel Tammet. Daniel is an autistic Savant who can perform challenging calculations in his head. He memorized over 22,000 digits of pi, setting a record in 2004. Students then completed a lab experimentally determining the value of pi by finding the ratio between the circumference and the diameter of several cylindrical solids. At the end of the day, the entire seventh grade team celebrated PI day in the cafeteria by eating their favorite pie!



Middle school teachers got into the spirit, sporting matching PI day shirts designed by middle school math teachers, Jon Fortin and Jennifer Drinkwater.

Taylor Kelley and Ben Rice measure the circumference of a tin

Richard Kinscherf, Will Broderick, and Greg Geddes measure the circumference of a cymbal.

Andrew Rosano and Brian Counihan measure the circumference of hockey pucks.

QUESTIONS TO ASK ALL CAMPS UNDER CONSIDERATION:

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

- What regulations does your camp follow?
- What training does the staff receive on safety, supervision, counseling, problem solving, and other issues unique to working with children?
- What is the most important thing for families to know about your program?
- Is the price all-inclusive, or are there extra charges for registration? uniforms? horseback riding? t-shirts? waterskiing? group photos? field trips?
- Is transportation available and what are the specifics? Is there an additional cost?
- How will the camp meet my child's special dietary or physical needs?
- In what way may I communicate with my child while he or she is at camp? With the staff?
- How does bad weather affect the daily schedule?
- Are there family visiting days?
- What is unique about your camp?

Important questions for day camps

- Is before/after camp care available? If so, who cares for the children, and what activities are offered? What is the additional cost?
- Are meals provided? At what cost?
- How and where do I drop off or pick up my child?

minutes later, it was Kristen Alexander completing her hat trick to make it 8-7.

While Kissick again won the ensuing draw, Cohasset could not convert and Sandwich came up with the ball and went into kill-the-clock mode, stalling away the time as Cohasset's defense scrambled to get just one more possession. With just under 16 seconds remaining in the game, co-captain Anna Seraikas — perhaps drawing on her basketball prowess — drew a charge call, similar to a charge in basketball. She was awarded the ball just a few yards from Cohasset's goal, meaning the team had to move the length of the field if it was going to beat the clock.

Seraikas took a few steps before finding Alexander ahead on her left, and Alexander almost immediately passed the ball ahead to Kissick just past midfield. Kissick broke into the Cohasset offensive zone and fed the ball across the field to Jaffe, whose quick catch-and-shoot beat the Sandwich goalie with just 0.3 seconds remaining in regulation.

Cohasset had a Thursday game scheduled against Nobles and Greenough School in Dedham, and plays its first home game of the season on April 10 when it hosts Scituate at 6:30 p.m.

Jaffe and Alexander both finished the day with three goals and one assist, while Kissick totaled four helpers on the day. Sophomores Katherine Dunn and Mackenzie Axelson both contributed a goal and an assist.

Kylie Coffman made seven saves in the game, as Cohasset finished the day feeling like winners even though the scoreboard showed a tie.

The Skippers left no doubt in their second game, going to league-rival Abington and pounding the Green Wave by a score of 15-2, in a game that was even more lopsided than the score indicated. Eleven different Cohasset players tallied at least one goal, as Coach MaryEllen O'Neill went to her bench early, and then played much of the second half with her reserves.

Kissick led the scoring parade with three goals, while Dunn had a pair. Jaffe had one goal to go with four assists, and was joined in the scoring column by seniors Nicole Hajjar, Angela Cipolla, Sage Stebbins, Taylor Kennedy and Kayla Orner, as well as Axelson and freshmen Isabel McCarthy, Katie Gilman and Katherine Naughton. Cipolla and McCarthy also picked up a single assist in the Cohasset scoring parade.

Kylie Coffman and Taylor Frederick shared the goaltending duties, combining to make four saves on the afternoon.

Cohasset had a Thursday game scheduled against Nobles and Greenough School in Dedham, and plays its first home game of the season on April 10 when it hosts Scituate at 6:30 p.m.

CONGRATULATIONS

Cohasset's Ruggiero and boys basketball win sportsmanship award

Dear Ron,

On behalf of the International Association of Approved Basketball Officials, Plymouth County District Board No. 54 I would like to inform you that Head Coach, Bo Ruggiero and the Cohasset High School Boys Varsity Basketball Team has been selected as this year's recipient of the Board 54 Sportsmanship Award for the 2011 – 2012 basketball season.

Board 54 believes strongly that the game of basketball should be played with respect and integrity towards players, coaches and officials. As a result of this philosophy, the Board 54 Sportsmanship Award will be annually presented to the school which, in the judgment of the Executive Board, best exemplifies the highest degree of sportsmanship, character and ethics among their players, coaches, administration and spectators.

We would welcome the opportunity to present Coach Ruggiero and a guest with this honor at our Annual Banquet.

Sincerely,
Michael Ryan, Sportsmanship Committee Chairman wrists, fractures of the right knee, and fractures of the right ankle and foot.

Not fractured was his concern for others, as Cohasset assistant coach Dick Lawless discovered when he visited Ruggiero in the hospital.

Said Lawless, who ran the Skippers in Ruggiero's absence, "He had tubes in his arms, he was wearing a neck brace, he had a boot on his leg, a brace on his wrist, a bump on the side of his head the size of a soccer ball, and when he saw me, he said, 'How's your shoulder?' I have some arthritis and there he was, asking how I was."

Cohasset junior varsity coach Jim Willis was thrilled to see Ruggiero at the banquet, held at the Atlantica restaurant at Cohasset Harbor.

"I can't believe how healthy he seems," said Willis. "It's very important that the kids get to end their basketball experience this year with him like this. Had he not been able to do this, their last experience would have been those three weeks when he wasn't there. It's so vital and important for (the players) for closure that their last basketball experience this year was to have him as he always is. It's a great way to finish."

Kyrel Jaundoo, a senior tri-captain with Robbie Mahoney and Chris Murphy, said he missed Ruggiero's energy and the boost it supplies during practices and games.

"The way he vocalizes is so unique," Jaundoo said. "He's very frank. He's not afraid to speak his mind. If you don't do it the way he wants it, you do it over and over. The repetition brought muscle memory. We still got done what needed to get done because he trained us that way. If we had slacked off, we knew he'd find out some way and we didn't want to deal with that. He gives off so much energy, you want to give it in return."

Cohasset finished the regular season with a 15-6 record, going 1-1 during the head coach's absence, then ended 2011-12 by going 1-1 in the postseason and bowing out in the Division 4 South Sectional quarterfinals.

Ruggiero, whose Skippers are 62-31 overall during his four-year reign, plans to resume his coaching at Cohasset when the 2012-13 season rolls around. He hopes to be walking unaided in May, then continue his overall improvement.

"I have no apparent brain damage and no injuries to the spinal cord," said Ruggiero, whose overall coaching career extends to more than 30 years. "My limbs are here, so hopefully everything that needs to and can be done to mend will happen.

"I'm getting healthier and a little bit stronger each day with the care of my wife (Mary), a visiting nurse who comes out once a week and a physical therapist who comes three times a week. I've got some appointments with doctors and specialists who are pleased with my improvement. It's a long road, but the long road has a light at the end of it."

LIFE AT CHS

Senior year is winding up!

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

May 24th marks the last day of school for seniors, and the release of the final Spinnaker entitled the Senior Salute.

It is finally April! Hopefully you all had a great April Fool's Day and weren't victim to many pranks...

April is going to go by even faster than March, if that's even possible. This week was a short week, with a half-day Thursday and Friday off for Easter. Now there's just one more week of school and we are on to April break! Can you believe that? Following vacation, there's only one meager week left in April — unbelievable!

The majority of seniors has heard back from all of their schools and will spend the next month visiting colleges and attempting to decide where they want to spend the next four years of their life. Many will take college trips over April break, some are traveling on the school trip to the UK, others taking senior trips, and some staying in Cohasset, hoping for warm weather.

Speaking of seniors, the next two months will be extremely busy for everyone. This Thursday, quarter three ended which means we are officially fourth quarter seniors. While most are suffering from acute Senioritis, many still have to endure AP Exams in early May and some finals. May 24th marks the last day of school for seniors, and the release of the final Spinnaker entitled the Senior Salute.

Senior parents, don't forget to submit a parent ad wishing your child luck in future endeavors (usually complete with an adorable baby picture). May 25th is prom and Graduation is set for June 2nd. I can't believe we are just over a month away from the end of our time here at CHS — it all seems like a blur. A side note: seniors, remember to submit all scholarship applications to the guidance office by April 12th. Scholarships will be awarded on Senior Class Night.

Spring sports are underway! The girls' lax team tied in a thriller on Monday in Sandwich, scoring with less than a second to go. The boys' lacrosse team's season opener was this Wednesday against Abington. For sports news, check out the sports section.

That's it for this week Cohasset. Have a safe and enjoyable long weekend!

Olivia Franklin's column runs weekly during the school year.

SCHOOL NOTES

Pilgrim Arena scholarships

In memory of Blanche Taylor and her 39 years of dedicated service, Pilgrim is awarding $120,000 of merit-based scholarships this year.

Applications for fifteen $8,000 merit-based scholarships are available at Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham.

This is the 39th consecutive year that Pilgrim Skating Arena is awarding scholarships to high school seniors planning to further their education. With this year's award, Pilgrim will have granted $1,100,000 of merit-based scholarships.

You do not need to be a hockey player or figure skater to apply for this scholarship. This scholarship is awarded on the basis of merit not financial need.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for their application in person at Pilgrim's pro shop. Completed applications must be returned in person by the applicant no later than Friday April 20th.

Applications will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors of Pilgrim Skating Arena.

College admissions

Parents of high school students are invited to a free forum on college admissions at Hingham Public Library, 66 Leavitt St., from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m., on Tuesday, April 10. The forum will be hosted by Campus Bound, a college admissions counseling organization. Admission is free, but reservations are requested by calling Jen Klemanski of Campus Bound at 617-769-0400, or via email at jklemanski@campusbound.com.

A discussion will take place on the book, "I'm Going to College NOT You," a collection of essays written by parents, students and admissions officers about their experiences navigating through the college admissions process, collected by Jennifer Delahunty, director of admissions at Kenyon College.

Gregg Cohen, president of Campus Bound, said, "Our goal is to prepare parents and students for what to expect during the college search, how to manage the stress, and how to keep your family's relationship with your teenager intact. We hope the forum will be a place to share information with other parents, review strategies for managing the process and focus on ways to make this project with your teenager fun and energetic instead of dreary and stressful."

More information is available by calling Campus Bound at 617-769-0400 or visiting www.campusbound.com.

'The Swing Fling' CHS jazz concert

In honor of national Jazz Appreciation Month, the Cohasset High School Jazz ensemble is throwing a "swing fling" at 7 p.m. next Wednesday, April 11 in Cohasset Town Hall's auditorium.

The concert will pay homage to the swing era with a retro-style jazz café. It's not the traditional recital set-up, according to band director Stephanie Moriarty, who is encouraging folks to bring their dancing shoes.

"We hope people will mingle and talk; it's a social atmosphere with some good music playing," she said. "People can come listen, dance, and have a good time."

This family friendly event will also feature light refreshments.

Historical Society to show 'The Movie Queen'

This fundraising event will feature wine, beer and "Cohasset Punch" as well as 1940s style hors d'oeuvres.

Cohasset Historical Society welcomes a return visit from "The Movie Queen." On Saturday, April 28, the Historical Society will offer a limited engagement of the film "The Movie Queen."

The film was produced in the late 1930s as part of a local talent production. The plot involved a "movie queen" making a return visit to her hometown where she visits stores, churches and other local sites. The film crew follows the "queen" as she makes her way through town. Local residents were cast in the roles that welcomed the "queen" home. "The Movie Queen" was produced by filmmaker Margaret Cram Showalter who traveled to a number of towns in New England to make local versions of their towns "Movie Queen."

The local "Movie Queen" starred Bettina Gray (Mrs. Hugh Bancroft) as well as many still recognizable faces. Bill Liscomb, son of Bettina Gray, will be in attendance as an honored guest. The evening will take people back to 1930s Cohasset and offer the opportunity to see what has changed and what remains the same.

This fundraising event will feature wine, beer and "Cohasset Punch" as well as 1940s style hors d'oeuvres. Cost is $50 per person and since space is limited, it is best to make reservations as early as possible. Join in the fun and call Cohasset Historical Society at 781-383-1434 for reservations.

HAPPENINGS

Spring Dinner at historical society

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual Spring Dinner from 5:30 to 9 p.m. Sunday, April 22, at Atlantica Restaurant, 44 Border St., in Cohasset.

The evening begins with a cash bar and cheese tray with dinner to follow. The cost of the evening is $31 for members and $36 for guests. The menu for the evening includes a choice of entrees – pork loin with apple raisin glaze or stuffed sole.

Guest Speaker, Henry Callan, will talk about "Learning About Antiques: Adventures in Collecting". This presentation will include finding antiques, the auction psychology, antiques as investments and educating oneself to know and enjoy antiques. Mr. Callan buys and sells antiques and does appraisals for estate and insurance purposes. He came to his love of antiques early, purchasing his first antique at the tender age of twelve. His specialties are Chinese Export porcelain and American Samplers, but delights in all aspects of the antique world. Mr. Callan hold two masters degrees, one in library science and the other in history and taught a course on "Antiques" at Cape Cod Community College for 15 years. He knows and enjoys antiques and shares his enthusiasm with his audience. All are welcome to attend. Reservations must be made prior to Friday, April 13, by calling the Cohasset Historical Society at 781-383-1434 and include your choice of entrée.

State of Harbor Forum II April 12

CSCR, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, will be hosting Cohasset's second State of the Harbor Forum at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 12, at Bancroft Hall (Lightkeepers Residence). The event is sponsored by Cohasset Rotary and is free to the public.

The second State of The Harbor (SOTH) public forum will feature research conducted by CSCR students and staff that speaks directly to the clear consensus voiced by the 75 residents who attended SOTH I- that Cohasset Harbor is suffering continued deterioration in ecosystem health because the inner Cove inadequately "flushes out" the increasing volume of fresh water coming into the Cove. New, ground-breaking research will also be presented regarding two other topics of great interest to all those who care deeply about maintaining a healthy and vibrant harbor: the high enterococci bacteria counts in the Harbor that often lead the Board of Health to "close" Bassing Beach to swimmers; and the mysterious foam that fouls boats at the waterline, and turns the harbor into anything but the picture of health.

Mark the date on your calendar for an important discussion among town leaders, residents, scientists, and elected officials as we debate mitigation strategies and next steps designed to protect and nurture Cohasset Harbor, one of the town's most precious resources.

Cohasset resident to sign latest book

Author P. Gifford Longley book signing event will take place from 1 to 3 p.m., on Saturday, April 7, at Brewed Awakenings, 19 Main St., Hingham. Longley, a resident of Cohasset, will be available to sign copies of his book, "Compelled: Based on a True Story."

"Compelled" is a psychological character study filled with hope and redemption, set in the violent times of early colonial New England. Young John Longley, orphaned in the wake of the Groton massacre, was taken in as a slave by the Abenaki chief, Madockawando. Now on the brink of manhood and suddenly freed from obligation to his captors, 16-year-old John has no intent of returning to the land of his birth. It has been four years since Jack's nephew and nieces were captured by Abenaki Indians. His first plan of ransom failed. Subsequent years of silence have smothered all remaining hope of seeing the children again. But now, as loved ones drop from his life and purpose becomes harder to find, a figure from Jack's past appears. The unexpected visitor's information compels Jack to once more search for the captive and return home with him – no matter what the cost.

Drop-off kids at Our World

Our World and Caroline Carr with New Pulse Dance are teaming up to do a drop-off program over April vacation, April 16 through April 20, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., for ages 4 through 8. It will include mixed media artistic projects and expressive movement, plus high energy games. No past experience needed in art or dance. If the weather is nice participants will be outside. Call 781-383-3198 to enroll.

Quests books now available

Come explore the woodlands and other areas of natural beauty on the South Shore. Quests are clue-directed walks through local parks and woodlands and are generally suitable for young and old alike — the perfect activity for the whole family. With your 2012 Quest book in hand, you will follow a series of clues leading you to a hidden treasure box which contains a guest notebook, rubber stamp and ink pad, pen and information about the area.

South Shore Quests are a great way to enjoy Nature, by turning a walk into a treasure hunt. Get your exercise while exploring area wildlife and plants and learning a bit of geology and history in the bargain. What better way to get to know the great outdoors?

Quest hikes will vary in length, trail difficulty and complexity of finding the clues. Some Quests takes less than 30 minutes, most take about 1 hour and some may take up to 1 ½ hours to complete. The 2012 Quest book contains 16 Quest trails, in various locations on the South Shore, including Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

South Shore Quest Books are available at Holly Hill Farm, Cohasset; Hingham Public Library; Hull Public Library, South Shore Audubon Society, Marshfield; South Shore Natural Science Center, Norwell; Turner Free Library, Randolph; New England Wildlife Center, South Weymouth, VEBO (formerly Fuzion) Sports Club, Braintree; for a fee of $5. The Quests season begins April 15 and concludes Nov. 15.

April school vacation art

Children's Creativity Workshops is now accepting registrations for a series of April school vacation art experiences.

Inspired by the "Colors of Spring," students will design a miniature sculptural display depicting the joys and colors of the season. Girls and boys will create a pastel palette of colored clays. This mixed media workshop is especially for young artists who enjoy expressing themselves artistically. The three-part workshop will meet from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 17 through April 19.

For detailed April school vacation and summer program information, registration, and to view the student galleries, visit: www.childrenscreativity.com.

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 16, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) The Lamb loves to be surrounded by flocks of admirers. But be careful that someone doesn't take his or her admiration too far. Use your persuasive skills to let him or her down easily.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This is a good time to begin setting far-reaching goals and connecting with new contacts. Aspects also favor strengthening old relationships — personal and/or professional.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A personal disappointment should be viewed as a valuable learning experience. Go over what went wrong and see where a change in tactics might have led to a more positive outcome.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Don't leave projects unfinished or personal obligations unresolved, or you might find yourself tripping over all those loose ends later on. A relative has important news.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Expect a challenge to the usual way you do things. Although you might prefer the tried-and-true, once you take a good look at this new idea, you might feel more receptive to it.

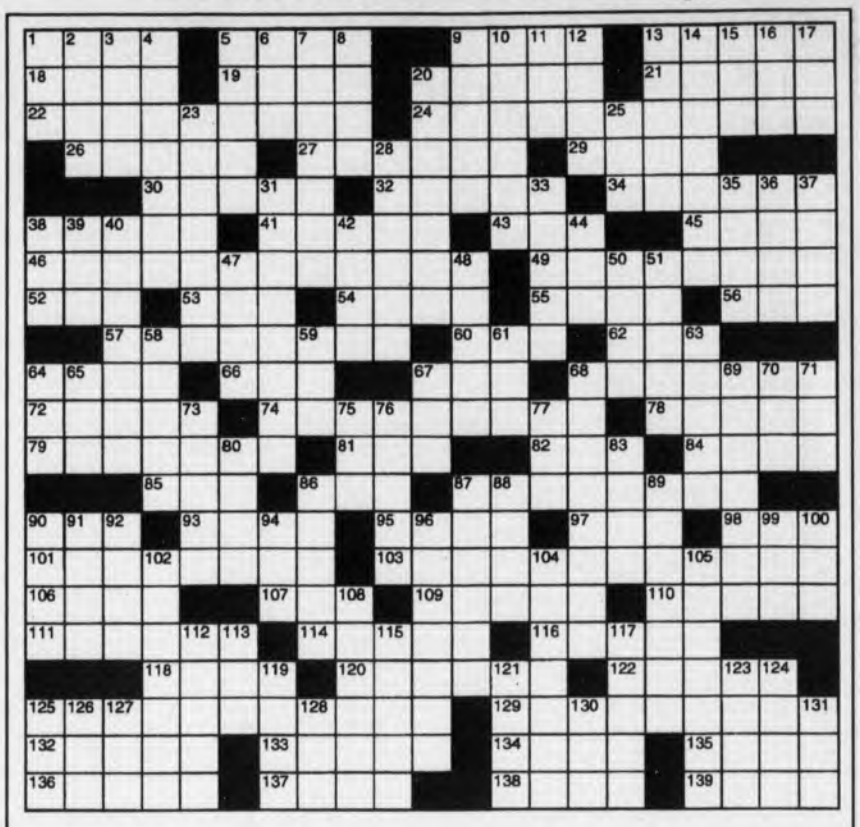
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Much work has yet to be done to polish a still-rough idea into something with significant potential. Expect to encounter some initial rejection, but stay with it nonetheless.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) There still might be some communication problems in the workplace, but they should be resolved soon. Meanwhile, that "tip" from a friend should be checked out.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A new relationship appears to need more from you than you might be willing to give right now. Best advice: Resist making promises you might not be able to keep.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) That restless feeling encourages you to gallop off into a new venture. But remember to keep hold of the reins so you can switch paths when necessary.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A demanding work schedule keeps the high-spirited Goat from kicking up his or her heels. But playtime beckons by the week's end. Have fun. You earned it.



AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're beginning to come out from under those heavy responsibilities you took on. Use this freed-up time to enjoy some much-deserved fun with people close to you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Before you get swept away by a tidal wave of conflicting priorities, take time to come up for air, and reassess the situation. You might be surprised by what you'll find.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your leadership qualities are enhanced by a practical sense of purpose that keeps you focused on your goals.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Lecture Series at Glastonbury Abbey

Glastonbury Abbey's Lecture Series Listening to Other Voices: "Without a Vision, the People Perish: Why a Religious Tradition?" will take place at 7:15 p.m., on Thursday, April 12. Joseph Marshall will present: Mitakuye Oyasin: The Lakota Way of Spirituality.

Mitakuye Oyasin (all are related) is a traditional Lakota Sioux prayer. It expresses the inherent belief of the Lakota tradition that all beings that live upon the earth, including humankind, are inter-connected with each other, the earth and the Creator. Marshall will discuss how this vision of reality is the basis of Lakota spirituality as it is practiced now and has been practiced in the past. Marshall was born on the Rosebud Sioux Indian Reservation and is a member of the Sincagu Lakota tribe. He is writer and educator whose works of fiction and non-fiction portray the Native American understanding of life.

Lectures are free – donations welcome. The program will take place in the Conference Center at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham. For information, visit the Web site at glastonburyabbey.org.

Georgia boy with Cohasset connection

Working Dog Foundation reaches out to 13-year-old

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

"It's always really exciting to know I have one coming; it beats thinking about the next doctor's appointment."
— Christopher Carswell

The police department's K9 has been a very talked-about commodity in Cohasset since the dog was added to the force several months ago. Now, Cohasset's working dog has brought a smile to the face of one courageous child who lives several states away.

Christopher Carswell is a 13-year-old who lives in Georgia and collects K9 patches from police departments all over the nation. The Cohasset Working Dog Foundation (CWDF) recently read Carswell's story in a news article online and had the Police Department send him a letter, patch and photo of Cohasset's K9, Erik, and his handler, Officer Patrick Reardon.

Carswell was so grateful that he sent CWDF a thank you letter and posted a photo of himself with the badge, letter and photos on his Facebook page.

The 13-year-old loves working dogs for a reason. Carswell has his own service dog named Bronx, whom he calls his hero. The boy suffers from epileptic seizures, among other serious health complications, and relies on his dog to help keep him safe. Bronx, a German shepherd like Erik, is a trained medical alert dog and can detect when Carswell is about to have a seizure before a human can; the dog therefore keeps a close eye on his owner.

Through his constant companion, Carswell has developed a deep love and appreciation for working dogs. He started his own charity, 1boy4change, and raises money to provide heat alarms for K9 units. These sensors go off when the inside of a vehicle is getting too hot for a dog.

Carswell's story caught the eye of CWDF's chair, Trish Morse, after someone posted it on the CWDF Facebook page. Morse sent the article to Reardon, who then sent the letter, patch and photo of Cohasset's K9 to Carswell.

Energy board drafting RFP

But sans 'Greenbush Guy' Gruber

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The committee has spent months working on a request for proposals (RFP) to publish for interested bidders.

The laying off of two town employees is having a ripple effect around town. One committee that has been immediately affected is the Alternative Energy Committee.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski laid off two town employees last week, engineering consultants Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber, who together were referred to as "The Greenbush Guys" for their work on the Greenbush commuter rail. The two engineers have worked out of Cohasset's Town Hall as special assistants to the town manager for the past seven years. Former Town Manager Michael Coughlin renamed their office the Operations Department and promoted Brennan, who is retired, to a full-time position with an increased salary and benefits. Gruber was continuing to work part-time. Milanoski said that their department had been overly expended and that, due to the spending freeze enacted in town, there was no money left

Grant applications missed deadlines

Missing money contributes to town deficit

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The deficit that has been reported by interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski and Finance Director Mary Gallagher keeps getting bigger, officials said.

Originally, Milanoski reported an approximate $350,000 deficit and enacted a spending freeze for the remainder of fiscal year 2012. During Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting, he reported that the number has grown to $373,000.

Gallagher discovered money the town expended for projects that were supposed to be reimbursed by grant monies, but evidently the applications for reimbursements were not submitted in time. The finance director reported $33,000 from the beginning of fiscal 2011 that should have been reimbursed from a TOD (Transit Oriented Development) grant; Milanoski said that the town received a grant back in 2007 or 2008 for work done in the village. The money has been closed out for so long that the grant expired, he said.

It would be difficult for the town to seek reimbursement for these expired grants now, the town manager explained.

BY THE NUMBERS

What causes most accidents?

The following accident totals were provided by the Cohasset Police Department.

2011

9 Inattention
6 Operating negligently
3 Fail to stay in proper lane
3 Driving too fast for conditions

Swerving, disregarding signals, fail to yield right of way and following too closely all tied with two each. Top occurrence for 2011 with 43 was not due to improper driving but weather, mechanical failure, deer accidents and other causes.

2012 (so far)

7 Inattention
6 Fail to yield right of way
5 Negligent operation
5 Fail to keep in proper lane
4 Following too closely

Exceeding posted speed, fatigue, disregarding signals, signs and improper turns all had one so far in 2012.

Top occurrence for 2011 with 35 was not due to improper driving but weather, mechanical failure, deer accidents, and other causes.

The cause of this accident on Route 3A near Beechwood Street was failure to yield, police said. COURTESY PHOTO

Road rage incident ends at station

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

Police said a road rage incident ended up in the parking lot of the police station on Saturday afternoon (April 7). According to reports a 52-year-old Cohasset woman had allegedly been tailgating a 43-year-old Norwell man along Beechwood Street. She passed him and then he caught up with her and allegedly began tailgating her, while making derogatory hand gestures.

She felt threatened and called police who advised her to drive to the station. He followed her there where police gave both motorists verbal warnings.

Revoked registration

Police responded to a report of a disabled 1995 Volvo sedan on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Pond Street at around 10 p.m. on Saturday (April 7). Police ran the plate and found out that the registration was revoked and the car was not insured. The operator, a 33-year-old Marshfield woman, is being summonsed to court for operating with revoked registration and without insurance. The car was towed.

Revoked license

On Friday (April 6) at 5:05pm a police officer on patrol observed a 2003 Chevrolet pick-up truck being operated south bound on Route 3A. The truck had an expired inspection sticker on the windshield. The officer stopped the truck for the bad inspection sticker and ID'ed the driver as an 81-year-old man from the Town of Scituate. While performing routine RMV checks on the driver, the officer learned that the driver's right to operate a motor vehicle had been revoked by the RMV due to a medical condition that he has. A wrecker was ordered for the pick-up truck and the man was transported home to Scituate. He is being summonsed to Quincy District Court for Operating with a suspended driver's license and having an expired inspection sticker.

Lights on

At 2:08 a.m. on Monday (April 2), on officer on patrol came upon a 2011 Saab parked outside Scituate Collision with its lights on. As it turned out the owner, a Hingham woman, had dropped the car off for service and forgot to turn off the lights, police said.

Parking complaint

Responding to a call about a parking complaint during a youth sports game, an officer made an announcement on the cruiser's PA system that the owner of a silver Audi parked on the lawn by Milliken Field off Bancroft Road should move the car. The car was ticketed and the Hingham owner was located.

Larceny

Police are investigating the report of the theft of a lawn mower and tools valued at $350 from a home on Doane Street. The homeowner went to the police station on Monday (April 2) to report that the doorknob to his side door had been damaged but it did not appear that entry had been gained. However, he discovered tools and the mower missing from his shed. Police said there are no suspects at this time.

Men stopped

Police stopped a 1998 Honda Accord after reports that the male occupants had tried to purchase $900 in gift cards at Stop & Shop with a credit card that was declined.

A concerned caller reported on Tuesday (April 3) at around 8:18 p.m., seeing two men, later identified as a 27-year-old man from Waterbury, Conn., and a 28-year-old New York City man, go in the store from the far lot where they attempted to buy the gift cards. Police said the third man, who is 44 and from Norwell, was the driver and waited outside the store.

An officer pulled them over after they drove away and conducted a field interrogation observation report during which the men were identified. Police said they no longer had possession of the credit card. Their information was turned over to the detectives who are following up with Stop & Shop and the credit card company.

Vandalism

Police received another call from a Deep Run resident last week reporting his house was "egged." The resident wanted the incident logged.

Thermometers

Last Wednesday (April 4), police investigated a report of several hypodermic needles spotted in the Ripley Road area. The items turned out to be three kitchen thermometers used for baking, police said.

Medication

An elderly Cohasset woman whose prescriptions were dropped off at her door by her pharmacy reported that her prescriptions were missing last Wednesday (April 4). Further investigation revealed the 28-year-old man, who delivers her newspaper and is known to police, had allegedly stolen the medication, which he subsequently threw away. He is being summonsed to court for the larceny under $250 and for illegal possession of Class E. His employer was notified, police said.

Trespassing

A 23-year-old Colorado man who was visiting Cohasset was arrested for trespassing after he was spotted walking along the railroad tracks between the Rocky Lane bridge and Sohier Street at 7:15 a.m. on Saturday (April 7). Police, who have a zero tolerance for trespassing along the right-of-way, located the man, who was showing the signs and symptoms of intoxication, and placed him under arrest.

Wader

Police sent a 28-year-old Abington man on his way after he parked his pickup truck off N. Main Street, put on pair of waders and went into the marsh behind a residence. The resident notified police. Police said the man was looking for old bottles in the marsh area. He was told to pack up and leave.

Unwanted guest

Police said a young mother who lives in the Avalon complex called police on Saturday around 2:10 p.m. that an unwanted guest was ringing her doorbell. Police said the young couple, who have a baby, are estranged from her parents and the grandparents wanted to see the baby. The grandparents left before police arrived.

Rollover sends boys to hospital

On Friday, April 6, at about 11:15am, Cohasset Police Officers were dispatched to a reported serious motor vehicle crash at the intersection of South Main Street and Summer Street. When officers arrived they found a 2003 Chrysler PT Cruiser on its roof in the intersection, and three teenage boys outside of the wreck. There was also a 2004 Volvo station wagon with heavy front-end damage.

Witnesses on scene stated that the teenage driver of the PT Cruiser, who was crossing South Main Street from Summer Street, failed to yield the right of way to the driver of the Volvo, who was operating southbound on South Main Street, police said. As a result of the impact, the PT Cruiser was flipped onto its roof.

The three teenage boys ranging in age from 17 to 12, are brothers, and all from Cohasset. They were transported to South Shore Hospital with minor injuries by Cohasset and Scituate ambulances. The driver of the Volvo is 47 and is also a Cohasset resident.

Pill take-back day is April 28

On April 28 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. the Cohasset Police Department and the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) will give the public another opportunity to prevent pill abuse and theft by ridding their homes of potentially dangerous expired, unused, and unwanted prescription drugs. Bring your medications for disposal to Cohasset Police Station at 62 Elm St. The service is free and anonymous, no questions asked.

Last October, Americans turned in 377,080 pounds (188.5 tons) of prescription drugs at over 5,300 sites operated by the DEA and nearly 4,000 state and local law enforcement partners. In its three previous Take Back events, DEA and its partners took in almost a million pounds (nearly 500 tons) of pills.

This initiative addresses a vital public safety and public health issue. Medicines that languish in home cabinets are highly susceptible to diversion, misuse, and abuse. Rates of prescription drug abuse in the U.S. are alarmingly high, as are the number of accidental poisonings and overdoses due to these drugs. Studies show that a majority of abused prescription drugs are obtained from family and friends, including from the home medicine cabinet. In addition, Americans are now advised that their usual methods for disposing of unused medicines — flushing them down the toilet or throwing them in the trash—both pose potential safety and health hazards.

Four days after the first event, Congress passed the Secure and Responsible Drug Disposal Act of 2010, which amends the Controlled Substances Act to allow an "ultimate user" of controlled substance medications to dispose of them by delivering them to entities authorized by the Attorney General to accept them. The Act also allows the Attorney General to authorize long-term care facilities to dispose of their residents' controlled substances in certain instances. DEA is drafting regulations to implement the Act, a process that can take as long as 24 months. Until new regulations are in place, local law enforcement agencies like Cohasset Police and the DEA will continue to hold prescription drug take-back events every few months.

ELDERS UPDATE

Serving our seniors

Cohasset's Elder Affairs keeps the community in mind

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

Budget season is well underway, and committees and boards around town are prepping for Town Meeting, locking down their budget processes to accommodate the town wide spending freeze. Elder Affairs is no stranger to this practice, but for this group, cutting back expenses means a major change in the level of services. And with Elder Affairs, if a program loses funding, the consequences are dire.

When it comes to risk management in Elder Affairs, it seems that assessing the needs of seniors is more crucial than the costs.

"What happens if someone here doesn't do their job?" asked Elder Affairs director Coral Grande. "Someone could die."

This is why Elder Affairs is committed to offering services of the highest possible quality to seniors in the community and their families. The group is working hard to keep up with a quickly growing senior population in town. Grande shared that the number of seniors — folks aged 60-plus— that depend on Elder Affairs is 52 percent. As the number of seniors has grown, so has the need for senior services. Grande reported that the amount of services for elders has gone up 19.6 percent in the past decade.

"For a town this size, that's a sizeable increase in a short time," she said.

As the need for services has expanded, so have the programs Elder Affairs offers. Meals on Wheels, which Elder Affairs took over running from the Social Service League, has grown by 100 percent in the past seven months, Grande said. "It grew so quickly that we had to rethink what we were doing and how we were operating."

The program's expansion called for more volunteer van drivers. "We're always recruiting people to drive vans," said Grande. "Several more have agreed to drive on a regular basis.

"I can't think of a program that's not increasing at the moment," she added.

And while Elder Affairs is looking at their bottom line for the budget, Grande said they are looking to expand in order to continue to meet the senior community's needs. Part of expansion will come with the new senior center project (see related story). Currently, there is no actual "senior center" in town; Elder Affairs occupies a few rooms in the town's community center.

Having a home base for all of Elder Affairs' various programs should help unify their community outreach, Grande explained. Currently, programs are offered all over town, from bridge at the Second Congregational Church to yoga at Town Hall. Tai chi is held on the community center grounds when the weather is nice, while special events are held at the Lightkeepers or St. Stephen's.

"It's great that we can utilize these different places, but in terms of cohesiveness it's very difficult," said Grande. "It's not a good way to run a business, and Elder Affairs is a business, although it is a town department."

As a town department, Grande said that the Elder Affairs budget amounts to only 0.6 percent of the town's overall budget. As of press time, Elder Affairs planned to present its fiscal year 2013 budget to the Advisory Committee.

"Every single figure in the budget has been researched, changed and reduced," said Grande. "It's a very accurate budget... It's not padded; there's no excess. It's the budget we need."

Like every other department, Elder Affairs has been trying to ride out the spending freeze for the remainder of the current fiscal year.

"We've been very fortunate because I made the case that we have to pay bills," said Grande. "We have to continue business so that people can eat. Many times the food people get at lunchtime [at Elder Affairs] is the only meal they get all day."

The Elder Affairs director added that she respects the budget process and that her department has made an effort to be conservative in their spending.

"I have confidence in the people leading Cohasset; they have listened to us at this point," said Grande.

Elder Affairs is trying to accommodate for an increase in their services, however, so the director said that she hopes that the town will be in better financial shape in fiscal year 2013.

Among the department's growing needs: transportation. Grande mentioned volunteer van drivers, but two of the van drivers are part-time paid employees. Also, Elder Affairs must pay for the maintenance and upkeep of the vans, including yearly vehicle inspections.

The department has been utilizing a one-year grant from the Social Service League to fund a cultural coordinator position; Elder Affairs will ask the town to foot the bill come July. Grande has also asked for part-time secretarial help in the office so that she can focus her attention on outreach. She said that she fields a lot of phone calls that are simply informational requests or referrals; Grande said that her department receives thousands of such calls each year.

"You never know who's going to walk through the door or who's going to be on the other end of the phone," she said.

Elder Affairs has also taken on an extensive emergency management role in town with their VENS (Visual Emergency Notification System) and yellow dot programs, which have been coordinated with the public safety departments. The VENS program involves folks hanging a sign in their windows indicating they should be checked on in an emergency, while a yellow dot on one's vehicle notifies emergency personnel to check in the car's glove compartment for a photo I.D. and insurance information.

"Emergency management will make calls to people who are frail, homebound — anyone who can benefit from a daily check," said Grande.

The department has also taken on a more active role when it comes to veterans' services. Grande has formed a military support group, along with Fire Chief Robert Silvia, Police Chief Mark DeLuca, Sons of the American Legion commander Tom Wigmore, and Col. Edward Graham, for veterans who retired recently or long ago.

"It's so different than anything Elder Affairs has been involved in, but these are all responses to what the community is asking us to do," said Grande.

Elder Affairs also assists seniors in finding health care plans, which Grande said is often a confusing process. "There are approximately 52 health care plans available. I find people rely more heavily on Elder Affairs to help navigate through the system."

Soon, Grande hopes to see all of the various Elder Affairs programs and services unified under one roof.

"Our whole goal is to be an investment in the community," she said. "The new senior center is an investment in the entire community, not just seniors... We changed our logo to say 'we serve seniors and their families.'"

Grande said that she hopes the town will keep that in mind as they consider upcoming warrant articles on the senior center building project at next month's Town Meeting.

"The thing I think the town needs to look at is, where is the increasing population? It's seniors. Where is the increasing number of use? It's Elder Affairs. Where is the other building project in Cohasset — who else is expanding? The Social Service League has the only building project in progress at the moment," said Grande. "There's a reason for that; we're just responding to need."

As Elder Affairs continues to grow and look toward the future, Grande said the department is keeping one major mission in mind: "to service the seniors of today, yesterday and tomorrow as well."

Scaling back: Project in two phases

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Social Service League has been campaigning to build a senior center in Cohasset for some time now. As the group prepares warrant articles for the spring Town Meeting (May 12), they are presenting a scaled back project this time around.

While the originally proposed senior center would have entailed a 16,000 square-foot building at a cost of approximately $6 million, the newly proposed project will cost less overall, take up a little less space, and will be built in two phases.

Phase one addresses the current needs of Cohasset's Elder Affairs (see related story), which currently takes up a few rooms in the town's community center and holds programs and events in various locations around town. The first part of the two-part project will see an 8,000 square-foot building, to cost around $2.5 million.

"The original scope and scale of the project was too big," said Social Service League President Marita Carpenter. The feedback that the Social Service League got through its research around the community was that the original scope seemed too large a building project for a town the size of Cohasset; not to mention it was expensive. "We're breaking it into pieces that seem manageable."

The good news is that the Social Service League already has $1 million toward its fundraising goal; they hope to enact phase one of the project rather quickly.

"We're almost halfway there... It's a great place to start from," said Carpenter. "Hopefully we'll get permitting in June and open in the winter of 2013."

The Social Service League recently hired an architect, Joel Bargmann of the Boston firm Bargmann Hendrie + Archetype, Inc., to begin phase one.

Phase two will add an additional 5,000 square feet to the senior center at an estimated cost of $1.5 million.

The total project will cost around $4 million versus the originally proposed $6 million, for a total of 13,000 square feet rather than 16,000.

The Social Service League presented their revised project proposal to the adhoc committee, the Senior Center Planning Group, last week. Selectman Paul Carlson, who serves on the committee, said that they were all pleased with the proposal and voted unanimously to approve it. The committee's vote gave the Social Service League the go-ahead to present their plans to the Board of Selectmen.

The Social Service League will continue campaigning for seniors around town with its "On the Move" campaign.

"The seniors, the project and Elder Affairs are on the move," said Carpenter. The group hopes to continue raising awareness and funds for the senior center project, as well as let people know that in the very near future, seniors will soon have their own designated space for special programs and assistance.

"We really don't have a senior center," said Elder Affairs director Coral Grande. "We have a couple of rooms in the community center; we're trying to get people to understand that this is new... The senior center will provide the space for continuity."

"This is a community investment piece," said Carpenter.

Those who would like to weigh in on the new senior center will have the opportunity to do so through the Elder Affairs newsletter VISTA; the May edition will contain an interest survey asking recipients what kids of programs they would like to see in the new senior center.

The Senior Center Planning Group is also preparing a warrant article for Town Meeting to seek funds for a needs assessment study.

It was announced during last week's School Committee meeting: Dr. Denise Messina, Director of Student Services, will be leaving the district at the end of the school year. Messina's three-year contract ends this June.

Superintendent Barbara Cataldo said that the position was posted earlier this week and will remain posted until April 27. In the meantime, Cataldo is putting together a search committee similar comprised of educators, staff members and parents, similar to the committee that found the new principal, Carolyn Connolly. Two members from the Cohasset Special Education Parent Advisory Council (SEPAC) have already volunteered to serve on the committee, Cataldo said.

The Superintendent also plans to serve on this committee because she has a work background in student personnel services.

Messina said in an email statement to the Mariner that she is disappointed and hoped to remain in Cohasset for the rest of her career.

"I want to remain on the South Shore and have professional contributions yet to make," Messina wrote. She added that she is certified as a superintendent and will explore new career opportunities in the area.

The director's position has been posted with a salary range of $105,000 to $118,000.

Cataldo declined to comment further on the matter.

Voter registration deadline April 20

Friday, April 20, is the last day to register to vote in the annual town meeting scheduled for May 12 and the annual town election scheduled for May 19. The town clerk's office is on the first floor of town hall. It will be open until 8 p.m. for voter registration. Please call the clerk's office with questions, 781-383-4100.

"We'd be asking the state to open up its books from two years ago."

Selectmen chair Ted Carr suggested that they should try anyway and that he would be happy to help apply for reimbursements from the state.

Gallagher said that she has not been able to find any paperwork for this TOD grant in her office: "It scares me... With what little records I've been able to get my hands on... I can't tell when it slipped."

The town will also not be reimbursed $55,000 from a Chapter 90 grant for a roadway project, Gallagher said. It also appears that the free cash for FY '11 took a hit to cover these deficits. Again, the expenditures are so old that getting reimbursed now seems unlikely, she said.

"It's not completely dead but doesn't look promising," added Milanoski.

The Chapter 90 grant should have been applied for before June 30 of last year, said Gallagher. In general, reimbursements should be applied for either quarterly or at the end of the project.

Carr said that "the upfront people should be held accountable" for failing to apply for reimbursements.

Project managers will be held more accountable from now on, according to the town manager, who said that he and Gallagher will work to ensure that something like this "doesn't happen on our watch."

"The good thing is, these things will not happen in the future," said Milanoksi, explaining that new policies and procedures will require that a "certain filing system that has to be done on all projects, which includes having the request for proposals, contract, change orders, and any invoices that comes from the vendors, and make sure it's been properly submitted for payment through a grant. Once that's done, they can file invoice away."

The town manager said that the financial problems are not the blame of any one department. "It was a combination of poor procedures and process, lack of oversight and lack of follow-through."

Despite the spending freeze, there are some other budgetary numbers that have gone up, according to the finance director. While personnel services and overtime expenditures have gone down by $20,000, the treasurer collector's office ran out of money to pay outside consultants (the town currently does not have a full-time treasurer collector, though that position has been posted); an additional $6,700 is required for gas and plumbing inspections in the Avalon apartment complex. The veterans' service office also needs another $7,000, which will be reimbursed off the Cherry Sheet next year, said Gallagher.

Police overtime is still a problem, although the number has dropped due to some schedule changes in officer's shifts. Milanoski reported that two daytime officers have switched to night shifts, reducing the minimum manning requirements. These changes have involved impact bargaining that the police department "is under no obligation to do," said the town manager.

The police overtime was being expended at a burn rate of approximately $50,000 a month; now, the number is closer to $40,000. The overtime expenditure totals over $190,000 for the current year.

The problem will not simply disappear, said Milanoski. According to Police Chief Mark DeLuca, the overtime burn can be attributed to a structural problem; the department is short officers and also has to pay for officers on medical leave.

"We do expect that to change more to the positive over the next couple of months," said Milanoski.

The fire department, meanwhile, seems to have their overtime issue under control. Milanoski said that department could have an $11,000 surplus in the overall budget because extra personnel costs are going to cover the overtime costs. "It should net out to close to what it should be," he said.

Overall, the town still has much to do in order to get the financial house in order, the town manager said. The spending freeze has helped so far.

"We've been able to reduce expenses but are finding some other legacy issues we have to deal with," said Milanoski. "That's why [the deficit] has gone up slightly."

NEWS BRIEFS

Refunding town bonds saves money

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski announced during Tuesday's Board of Selectmen meeting that the town has received competitive bids from bond underwriters for a $9,135,000 12-year refunding bond issue. The winning bidder on the bonds, with an average interest rate of 1.68 percent, was Fidelity Capital Markets.

The refunding bonds will generate a total savings for the town of $1,333,506 over the 12-year life of the bonds. Milanoski reported that the bulk of these savings will go directly to the taxpayer and will be reflected in their tax bills for excluded debt.

Prior to the bond's sale, municipal bond credit rating agency Standard and Poor's assigned the town's bonds a AA+ rating, which reflects Cohasset's strong income and property values. The town is under the bond agency's watch, however, and has further to go in order to secure a AAA rating, the highest possible bond rating.

"If we don't maintain [the current rating], our bond rating will drop," said Milanoski. "That's not a bad thing; at least they're giving us a chance. Here we've saved $1.3 million— that demonstrates the value of having a good bond rating. That's money in everybody's pockets."

Town Meeting gets extra day

Town Meeting is on Saturday, May 12, but interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski advocated the meeting stretch to one more day.

The extra date accommodates the Water Commission, which will be reviewing bids for its two requests for proposals for a new water plant contract. The commission will not have enough time to review all of the bids in time for the May 12 meeting. The second day of Town Meeting will be Monday, May 21, starting at 7 p.m.

By then, said Milanoski, any proposals for the water contract will have been fully vetted.

MacCarthy helps out in Mexico

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Spring break

Hi Cohasset readers, how are you all doing this week? I am looking forward to this weekend as the temps are expected to warm up a bit and the flowers continue to bloom in a variety of colors. For so many happy and excited students, the upcoming week brings a fun Spring vacation. Whether staying home and enjoying time doing local things or having some time traveling a bit, always take the time to have fun and enjoy those small moments. They all add up to great, and wonderful memories.

Community service

Sean MacCarthy of Cohasset and a member of the class of 2014 at Providence College, recently spent a week working in Mexico, as part of the College's Feinstein Academic Institute's Alternative Spring Break 2012 program.

Sean was among nearly 60 Providence College students who volunteered to spend their spring break to work in 4 different locations around the world. In Tijuana, Mexico, Sean and seven PC students built a home for a family in need, while exploring issues related to immigration and culture. They were accompanied by Heather Whitney, service learning coordinator in the College's Feinstein Academic Institute, and Stephanie Nunes, AmeriCorps VISTA representative.

Sean, we are so proud of you! Readers may recall that Sean, whose alter ego was "Parme-sean," was our Life at CHS columnist two years ago.

Swim, dive team signups

Here is a great piece of summer time news. The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team 2012 season sign-up for returning swimmers and divers will be held on Saturday, May 5, from 8 am -1am at the Cohasset Town Hall. All swimmers and divers must register at this time! Parents and/or guardians, please bring your calendar so you can sign up to volunteer. A $25 late fee will apply to late registrations. Swim and Dive Team tryouts are tentatively set for June 13.

Sailing club

More warm time news...The Cohasset Sailing Club will be holding its annual registration weekend on April 28 and April 29. The 28th will be from 9 a.m.-2 p.m. and the 29th will be from 12-2 p.m., both days at the clubhouse on Government Island. The combined membership application and class registration document is available on the website www.cohassetsailingclub.org, which also has more info to build a new sailing vented. Don't forget to check it all out.

'82 reunion

Here is a save the date message for the CHS Class of 1982. Your 30th Class Reunion is being held on July 21st and is being held at the South Shore Art Center in the Art Gallery. Please make sure to contact Sheila (Ponitz) Barrow to update your contact information at sbarrcoh@gmail.com.

Host families

I wanted to share this piece with the community as I think for the right families, who have the time and space in their home this summer, this would be so cool fit all involved. You can give your family a wonderful month of cross-cultural experience this summer! The Educational Enrichment for Romanian. Children (EERC), local charity is seeking host families for two Romanian middle school students who will attend Derby Academy summer camp. The students are ages 13-15, speak English and were chosen in a competitive process for their exceptional personal and academic qualities. For details please contact Dr. Dana Floru, dfloru@eercboston.org or call 781-820-2324.

SSCC event!

On May 5th, don't forget the South Shore Community Center is holding the 3rd Annual "Spring Around Town!" This fun and enjoyable night begins at 6 pm with cocktails at the Cook Estate, where you will be given your personal invite to a dinner hosted by friends of the SSCC at one of several beautiful homes in Cohasset. At 7:30 pm, you will depart the Cook Estate and head to your dinner location for your "Cinco De Mayo" Fiesta. At 9:30 or so, you will all head to Michael and Victoria Hurley's home for dessert and coffee. This event is a great way to enjoy an evening with old friends, as well as make some new ones. There will be some exciting items raffled off during the evening as well and all proceeds from this event will benefit SSCC. Space is limited so do not wait. The cost is $150 per couple and $75 per person. You may purchase tickets for two couples on the same reservation and they will be with you at dinner. Go to www.southshorecommunitycenter.com

That is the news Cohasset. Send in all if your info for next week on Tuesday by 5 pm.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Never too old to learn the bagpipes

DAVID METHVEN

I first became interested in the bagpipes at the age of 11, a time when my older brother was learning to play the chanter, which is smaller and a lot quieter than the bagpipes. The chanter is the instrument used to learn all of the movements and tunes before advancing to the pipes.

The bagpipes do seem to be quite common in Scotland, which is where I was born. It is viewed as the country's national instrument and they have become very popular with the younger generation. In Scotland, almost every school offers bagpipe tuition which also can be used toward a music qualification. In Scotland, unlike here in the U.S., music is regarded as an academic subject.

Earlier this year I joined the South Shore Conservatory faculty. I have been teaching the bagpipes for over 20 years, and I must say that actually teaching the bagpipes has certainly changed my mind on how old or young someone has to be to learn. My students have been as young as 5 years old and as old as 90. I now believe you are never too old to learn.

My goal in teaching the bagpipes is first of all to make sure the student enjoys the whole experience of learning and playing. I feel it is up to me to create a learning environment that is exciting and positive, and to tailor my teaching method to the needs of the student. I could say my proudest moment in all my years of piping is winning a championship or the album going triple platinum but the one that tops everything is teaching a student and watching them progress on to the bagpipes. That moment is not only a proud one, but priceless.

When I lived in Scotland I used to perform in competition. After a lot of hard work and practice, the band I played with won World, British, Scottish and European Pipe band championships a number of times. In 2010 I toured the U.S. with the UK Military Band, playing alongside other instruments such as brass woodwind and percussion, to form a band of around 70 musicians. The tour was a huge success and the audiences loved the show. Although it was very tough playing more than 30 states in three months, it is an experience I will never forget.

In 1998 I recorded "The Lone Piper" playing the pipes along with other instruments and voice. This album reached No.2 in the Scottish Album Charts and No.7 in the American Billboards. This came as a complete surprise to me. It was in newspapers and on the national news channels, so I had a wee taste of fame for a minute. I even had fan mail!

Having recently moved to the U.S., I now perform all over New England, and regularly play at weddings, funerals and other functions. I once turned up so early to play at a wedding that I mistakenly played at the wrong wedding! An hour later I had to play at the correct wedding!

In the future, I look forward to sharing my love for the bagpipes with more students. Hopefully they will find in the pipes, the same joy and excitement that I find in playing this beautiful sounding instrument.

HOW A TRUSTED AMBULANCE SERVICE IS HELPING TO KEEP THE BOSTON ECONOMY ROLLING.

Since 1998, the experienced healthcare professionals at EasCare have delivered prompt, reliable transportation to tens of thousands of patients — from helping seniors get to and from nonemergency medical appointments to lifesaving ER trips. Bank of America has supported EasCare with ongoing financing, helping the company grow from five ambulances and a dozen employees to one of the largest ambulance operators in New England, with 130 vehicles and 550 employees. It's a small-business success story that's not only keeping communities across Boston safe and healthy — it's helping to generate jobs and local economic growth as well.

EasCare is another example of how we're working to help locally based businesses grow and hire in Boston — and across the country. In 2011, we provided $199.6 million in new credit to small businesses in Massachusetts — an increase of 26% from 2010.

K-9

Morse was touched to receive the boy's swift reply.

"He's a special kid," said Morse. "We were happy to add to his collection... This is totally up our alley and what we're all about. Service dogs help individuals just like this boy, who's making the best of what might be a very difficult situation."

Morse added that it's encouraging to see a young boy devote his free time to helping working dogs.

"He's raising quite a bit of money for the [K9] units," said Morse. "He's a little kid doing big work."

Reardon agreed. "He has been through a lot in his life so far," the officer said of Carswell. "It's inspiring to see a kid this young do this."

The CWDF went as far to call Carswell "our hero" on their Facebook page.

For Carswell, the feeling is mutual. The boy added a photo of himself posing with the Cohasset K9 items to his Facebook photo album titled "2012 Hero Campaign."

Carswell said that he started collecting K9 patches in January, one year after he got his service dog. In only three months, he has already collected over 400 patches from officers and soldiers all over the world.

"It's always really exciting to know I have one coming; it beats thinking about the next doctor's appointment," Carswell told the Mariner in a phone call.

The 13-year-old has also ventured into publishing, with books for sale on his website, one of which details his journey to get his own service dog and his adventures with Bronx "after we became a team." Titled "Before I Shake," a portion of the proceeds from the book's sales goes toward Carswell's fundraising efforts for K9 units.

So far, Carswell reports that he has given away eight heat alarms to K9 units around the country; there are 12 more teams on his waiting list. Carswell's mother, Janet, said that her son has partnered with American Aluminum to buy the heat alarms at the manufacturing cost. Interested folks can donate to the cause directly through Carswell's website, 1boy4change.org.

Like the CWDF, Carswell is also fundraising to help other individuals in need obtain a service dog of their own. Recently, he helped a seven-year-old boy named Wyatt, who is battling autism. Carswell posted Wyatt's story on his Facebook page, and people stepped up with donations, fully funding the service dog. Carswell said that Wyatt is due to receive his puppy next week.

Carswell is an example of how one person can make a difference, which is what 1boy4change is all about. The idea for his charity, said Janet, started with the idea that "it can't take a lot to make a difference." Now, she said, Carswell's work on behalf of K9 units "has mushroomed bigger than anything I could imagine."

And even though it might seem like a small gesture, Janet said that she and her son are always touched when a new letter containing a K9 patch or other items, from hats to jackets, arrives in the mail.

"The officers have been so good to him," said Janet. "His life and childhood revolves around doctor appointments. But the mail truck gives him a lot of happiness."

Christopher Carswell, 13, of Georgia, with his service dog, Bronx.
COURTESY PHOTO

Both are still amazed at how quickly Carswell's collection has grown.

"His piano teacher unwittingly said, 'I'll make you a wall quilt out of the patches,'" said Janet. "This was before we realized they were going to come in droves."

And although Carswell has received letters from K9 teams all over the world, Janet said they were surprised to receive a letter from the police department in Cohasset. "We had to find it on the map!" she said. "It was exciting."

Cohasset K9 update

The CWDF held a fundraiser event in March, at which the foundation raised $10,000 toward the K9's emergency veterinarian fund.

"This allows us to take care of Erik's veterinary insurance and any emergency that might come up — that way we have the money set aside," said Morse.

The foundation is also raising money for two grants that will enable two individuals in need of a service dog to purchase their own. "Somebody who needs help getting around or is visually impaired — we hope to help."

Morse started the CWDF last summer; less than a year later, she is amazed with how quickly the program has taken off.

"It happened so fast," she said of Cohasset's K9 unit and the foundation she established to support it. "Once the program got off the ground, [we found] the actual expenses really aren't that much."

Donations and grassroots fundraising efforts have covered much of the K9's expenses, Morse explained; however, there are still a few items the K9 unit needs to purchase, including a bite suit for Reardon to wear when he is training Erik. A lot of Cohasset folks have stepped up to the plate to donate items for Erik.

"It's one of those things people are very interested in once they hear what we're up to," said Morse. "People have been very receptive; it's made it very easy and rewarding."

Floral arranger Gretchen Sheets and assistant arranger Susan Hess will represent Cohasset Garden Club during Art in Bloom 2012 at the Museum of Fine Arts. They will create a flower design that interprets a work of art, one of 50 designs to be done by New England garden clubs in this springtime tradition. This three-day festival showcasing flower arranging as an art form runs from April 28 - 30.

Art in Bloom begins with a Family Day on April 28, which features art-making activities for children and families. Sunday evening, April 29, will feature a members-only evening from 6 to 9 p.m. On April 30, Paula Pryke, one of Britain's best known floral designers known for innovative floristry, will present a lecture and floral demonstration at 10:30 a.m., titled Paula Pryke: Cutting-Edge Floral Design. She will also conduct two Master Classes with hands-on floral instruction. All presentations are ticketed events. On Monday evening, there will be a free open house for the public from 5 to 9 p.m., with live music, entertainment and spotlight tours.

Other attractions will include a ticketed Elegant Tea on Saturday and Sunday, and the Give the Arts a Chance drawing, with prizes ranging from jewelry to box seats for the Red Sox. Daily events will include the Flower Cart with springtime wares, Art in Bloom at Home, which features free floral demonstrations, Ikebana floral demonstrations, outdoor walking tours and free gallery tours, which will take place continuously from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Art in Bloom is free with museum admission. Reservations are required for the Paula Pryke lecture and master classes. Tickets may be purchased at www.mfa.org or by calling 800-440-6975. Reservations are also required for Elegant Tea, call 617-369-3582.

Music Circus box office opens for the season

By R. Scott Reedy
correspondent

Super model Heidi Klum may have been one of the few people not listening when husband Seal released "Let's Stay Together," his David Foster-produced remake of the Al Green classic, as the first single off his latest chart-topping album, "Soul 2." The couple is ending their seven-year marriage, but that doesn't mean Seal will be flying solo when he brings his "Soul 2" tour to the South Shore Music Circus for his Cohasset debut on July 13. The British soul singer will be joined by another Grammy Award-winning soul singer also making her Music Circus debut, Macy Gray, for a double bill that is likely to turn up the heat on what may already be a warm summer night.

Audiences won't have to wait until July to be back under the tent though. The Music Circus will open its 61st season on June 30 with a first-time performance by Canadian jazz pianist and singer Diana Krall. A three-time Grammy Award winner, Krall is the only artist to have eight albums debut at the top of the Billboard Jazz Albums chart. Other artists making Music Circus debuts this summer will include a capella men's group and Atlantic City favorites Straight No Chaser (July 28) and veteran rocker Joe Walsh (Aug. 3). Some of Motown's biggest hits will be heard on Aug. 4 when Motor City legends The Temptations and The Four Tops take the stage. And while "Jersey Boys" won't be back in Boston until January, the one and only Frankie Valli will be back in Cohasset on Aug. 25. He's bringing the Four Seasons with him, of course, and a set list that is heavy on the hits. Country music fans can look forward to return visits from Trace Adkins (July 7), Martina McBride (Aug. 26) and, rounding out the season, Darius Rucker (Sept. 1-2).

Tickets for these and other shows go on sale at the South Shore Music Circus, 130 Sohier St., Cohasset, on Saturday at noon when the box office opens for the season. Once again this year, box office opening means a chance not only to buy tickets but also to enjoy complimentary Dunkin's Donuts and coffee, free bottled water from Tedeschi's Food Shops, live broadcasts by radio stations WATD and WPLM, and a live performance by Boston-based singer Susan Cattaneo. A "Taste of Cohasset" will feature sampling by restaurants including Bia Bistro, Constantine's, 5 South Main, and Mr. Dooley's. Cohasset Chamber of Commerce member businesses will also be on hand with a wide array of enter-to-win contests.

Tickets will be available for these Music Circus shows, plus all shows at the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis. All shows billed as "An Evening With..." feature two sets by the headliner. There is no opening act.

ON THE GREEN BEAT

Earth Day on the way

ERIN DALE

It's been quite a while since the very first "Earth Day." The first official observance was on April 22, 1970. As time goes on, adopting a more eco-conscious mentality has become less of a yearly observance and more of a daily practice. We manage our recyclables, attempt to cut back on waste, try to save water and eat more organically. We check the labels on everything from children's toys to beauty products, all for the sake of living more healthfully and consciously.

So if you're trying to make Earth Day your everyday, you'll be sure to appreciate our latest roundup of green tips from local experts. These folks have taken the time twice a month here in the Green Beat section to explain how you can implement some easy eco practices any day of the year.

How will you celebrate Earth Day this year? Fill me in at edale@wickedlocal.com; I hope to hear from you!

Go green with these expert tips:

For home and automotive:

"When you are finished with your painting project for the day, be sure to scrape any excess paint off the can, rollers and brushes. I was taught this early on, and it has saved me from having to spend a lot of time, water and paint thinner trying to remove dried paint. I also like to use a product called Klean Strip Safer Paint Thinner. It thins most colors of oil-based paint, stain and varnish without affecting the dried paint's color. The nonflammable, low-odor thinner contains no hazardous air pollutants or ozone-depleting chemicals. You can find Klean Strip at most local home improvement stores." – James Wolfe, owner, Wolfe Painting Company (Cohasset), www.wolfepaintingco.com

"I'm suggesting that a sunroom addition to your home or business cannot only add great value, extra square footage, and a beautiful and comfortable room to relax in, but can bring in passive solar heat into your home or business. In addition, the roof vents of a sunroom, when opened in the summer to allow heat to escape, create an air flow that can help to cool your home when opening windows or vents on the north side of the home, allowing cool air to be distributed throughout the home or business. This convection of airflow is not mechanical, doesn't require systems, and is a great way to save on energy cost if you're inclined to manage a few vents or windows once in a while. Sunrooms help to fill your home or business with natural light, create a new place to gather and entertain, and bring a sophistication that will boost your home or business value. Let alone, it's a great place to hang out." – Matt Weaver, Green Designee/National Association of Realtors, Jack Conway Realtor, www.jackconway.com

"Be sure to rotate, align, and set air pressure on tires every 5,000 miles to get better fuel economy." – Jen Carley, Green Automotive (Marshfield), www.greenautomotive.com

For landscaping:

"Fill the bare areas in your lawn with compost and seed to fight weed growth. Mow tall, three to three and a half inches (the length of a credit card). This will help to create millions of 'shade trees' to overshadow voids in the lawn where weeds will germinate." – Dave MacDonald, owner/accredited organic land care professional, Summit Landscaping (South Shore): www.summitlandscape.net

"A great way to give your lawn a boost in the spring is to 'top dress' it with Organic Compost, then over seed it. The compost is loaded with nutrients and is designed to retain water so the new seed gets what it needs most — nutrients and water. Spread the compost lightly over the top of the lawn and in the large and small areas of the lawn where no grass is growing. Then put down grass seed and water it liberally. We have a line of Organic Compost that can be delivered right to your door." – Tim Lopes, owner, Go Green! Landscape Supply (Scituate and Hanover), www.gogreenlandscapesupply.com

For design:

"If you happen upon some outdated or ill-fitting sweaters (especially cable knit or cashmere) as you go through your winter clothes and put them away, think about the knits being repurposed into a pillow. The body of a sweater can make a wonderful soft textured addition to your pillow story for a sofa, bed or chair. A cashmere sweater can take on another soft task of an oversized pillow (new cashmere pillows can run over $200 each). If you don't have enough fabric for both front and back, you can always do the back of the pillow in another textured fabric. A navy cashmere sweater backed in bright green, white or orange can make a wonderful impact on your sofa and an instant luxe look!" – Donna Morgan, owner/designer, Donna Morgan Interior Design (Cohasset), dmorgandesign@hotmail.com

"So now that you've taken your walk through the woods and collected your natural components, it's time to find a container. Remember that yogurt cups, coffee cans and similar items can be used to line vessels that do not hold water, but might make the perfect container for your found items. A collection of wine bottles is a crafty way to decorate a long dinner table or mantle with one blossom or object in each. Happy Decorating!" – Kelly Dolloff, owner/designer, Artistic Blossoms Floral Design Studio (Marshfield and Boston), www.artisticblossoms.com

'Rediscovered Masterpieces' on Sunday

The Third Sunday Series welcomes harpsichordist Rebecca Pechefsky, who will be presenting a unique program called "Rediscovered Masterpieces" at 3 p.m. on Sunday, April 15 at First Parish Cohasset. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Harpsichordist Rebecca Pechefsky will present a recital of French and German music called "Rediscovered Masterpieces" that features François Couperin's rarely played 12th Ordre and the rediscovered E-Flat Partita by Bach's star pupil, Johann Ludwig Krebs. François Couperin (1668-1733) came from a musically renowned family, and was court musician and organist for Louis XIV. Johann Ludwig Krebs (1713-1780) was a student of J. S. Bach, who held him in high regard.)

ENERGY

in the current fiscal year to fund an operations department.

"I did what I had to do," the town manager said last week.

Gruber, who recently returned from a winter in Florida, came back to Cohasset to find that his services were no longer needed in Town Hall. Selectman Diane Kennedy said during last week's selectmen meeting that she was concerned about special projects in town that could fall by the wayside without Brennan and Gruber; she asked Milanoski to provide a list.

One project that is losing Gruber's input: the Alternative Energy Committee's initiative to have solar panels installed on top of the town's capped landfill. The committee has spent months working on a request for proposals (RFP) to publish for interested bidders. Gruber was helping the committee draft this RFP, and even said that he would continue working on it during his time in Florida.

Alt. Energy Committee secretary Marie Caristi-MacDonald announced during the committee's meeting Monday night that Gruber was no longer employed by the town, therefore the committee could be on their own with the RFP. She suggested the committee talk to the town manager about what they should do next.

"We don't have the Greenbush team available," she told the rest of the committee.

The committee had been working off of Scituate's RFP for solar panels, which was given to them by Scituate's superintendent of the Department of Public Works, Al Bangert. Gruber, along with Caristi-MacDonald and the committee's co-chair Tanya Bodell, met with Bangert in November to gain insight on the process Scituate went through when installing its solar array. Caristi-MacDonald said that Bangert's advice has been "an invaluable resource" for the Alt. Energy Committee.

Gruber was using Scituate's solar RFP as a template and customizing it with Cohasset specifications where appropriate, Caristi-MacDonald explained. "It could be done by ourselves."

She added that the committee could continue to consult with Bangert for guidance.

The committee learned from Bangert last fall that the town of Scituate has been able to save around $250,000 on electricity each year, although the figure has varied from year to year. Bodell said at the time that Scituate anticipates saving around $3.5 million over a span of 20 years.

While Scituate's solar panel project accelerated relatively quickly – the town's RFP went out in the summer of 2010, said Bangert, and energy vendors responded by that September – Cohasset's project is still in the beginning stages.

The Alt. Energy Committee has also been working with the School Committee to move forward with plans to install solar panels on the Middle-High School roof. An assessment on the roof's condition was done last year, and School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro has been working on an RFP for that project that is separate from the RFP for the landfill.

Both committees will come together on May 4, when they plan to invite solar panel installation companies to a walkthrough of five sites in town that have been identified as potential spots to develop renewable energy. These sites were originally slated in a feasibility study for a wind turbine, but now the Alt. Energy Committee is focused solely on solar energy.

The walkthrough will help the committee determine if a solar panel installation on any one of the sites is feasible; if so, they will move forward with issuing an RFP. However, the committee said Monday night that they will not have an article ready for the Spring Town Meeting Warrant (Town Meeting is May 12). They are aiming instead to have an article prepared for the fall.

No confidence

Housing Authority also voted against selectmen

By Erin Dale
edale@wickedlocal.com

The Planning Board is not the only town committee to recently take a vote of no confidence against the Board of Selectmen – last month, days before the public hearing to decide the fate of Cohasset's former Town Manager, Michael Coughlin, the Cohasset Housing Authority took a similar stance.

Two weeks ago, the Planning Board stunned during their regularly scheduled meeting by taking a vote of no confidence against the selectmen. Their decision sent shockwaves around town and led to a rather contentious meeting with the selectmen the following week.

The Planning Board took this stance because they are displeased with the selectmen's decision last month to reject several town employee contracts, including the contract of Planning Board coordinator Jo-Ann Pilczak. Planning Board members say Pilczak, who was promoted with a $10,000 raise that took her from union to non-union status, was deserving of this contractual change and that they had been fighting for a better position for her for years.

The selectmen assured the Planning Board that they would try to do something to resolve the issue with Pilczak's contract, and that interim town manager Michael Milanoski would try to come to an agreement with her. Milanoski has signed letters of agreement with three town employees whose updated contracts had been rejected last month.

Selectmen chair Edwin "Ted" Carr said that he while the selectmen and the Planning Board can both agree on their concern for the employee and her contract, he disagreed with their decision to vote "no confidence."

"If I was in their shoes and saw a very troubling thing in town, having a vote of no confidence is something I could never do. Instead of saying, 'Hey, I think you're doing a crummy job,' I would say, 'How can I help?'" Carr said last week.

While the Cohasset Housing Authority beat the Planning Board to the punch by voting "no confidence" last month, they had a different reason for doing so; the Housing Authority was protesting the selectmen's decision to suspend former town manager Michael Coughlin.

Coughlin was suspended with pay on Feb. 15; the Housing Authority took their vote during their Feb. 22 meeting and issued a letter to the selectmen on Mar. 9, four days before the public hearing on Coughlin's employment status. The letter asked the selectmen to reconsider their decision to suspend Coughlin. Carr told the audience at the Mar. 13 public hearing about the Housing Authority's vote.

Housing Authority chair Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle said that her committee felt they had to speak out; otherwise, it would appear that they agreed with and supported the selectmen's decision on Coughlin.

"We voted... and put it into the record the night of their hearing, before they made their official decision," said Nothnagle. "We feel they made the wrong decision."

Nothnagle explained that while the Housing Authority is state-run and has "nothing to do with the selectmen and town manager, and they have no control over what goes on with our board," four of the five board members on the Housing Authority are Cohasset residents and are elected by their fellow citizens (one is appointed by the state Department of Community Affairs).

"We have the interest of the seniors who live in our housing at heart," said Nothnagle. "It's certainly being talked about in town, and it's a very big deal. The people who live at 60 Elm Street all feel very upset by it and don't think [Coughlin] was treated fairly."

The Housing Authority agreed with this portion of the community.

"We sent [the letter] because we felt that we needed to tell someone how we felt, and there are not many opportunities to say that publicly," Nothnagle said. "We figured if we didn't say something, people would think we're in agreement with [the selectmen]. We didn't feel [Coughlin] was treated fairly at all or that they followed the right procedure."

While Carr said he planned to apologize to the Planning Board for remarks he made during last week's selectmen's meeting, which turned into a heated debate between the selectmen, planning board members and members of the Capital Budget and Advisory committees, Nothnagle said that her board never received a response from the selectmen about their vote of no confidence, other than a mention during Coughlin's hearing: "they said they received the letter from us."

NEWS BRIEFS

Selectmen hire new audit firm

A specially appointed committee consisting of four town volunteers, including a few CPAs, interviewed audit firms last week and selected one to present to the Board of Selectmen Tuesday night. The firm Powers & Sullivan was the final candidate, and partner Jim Sullivan gave a comprehensive presentation to the selectmen.

Powers & Sullivan is one of the leading municipal audit firms in the state; 90 percent of the firm's business concerns municipalities, said Sullivan. The firm has been serving communities around the state for over 25 years.

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski suggested that the selectmen put language into the contract stating that the firm can report directly to the selectmen rather than just the town manager. Sullivan also suggested that the town have an audit committee that the firm would report to. The selectmen said this could consist of members from the Advisory Committee or Budget Planning Group, though the matter is still under consideration.

The selectmen voted 4-0 to approve the hiring of Powers & Sullivan (selectman Fred Koed was at another meeting).

"This is the best choice the town could make," said Milanoski on Wednesday.

Hired back as consultant

Interim Town Manager Michael Milanoski reported that he has entered into a contract with town engineer and special assistant to the town manager Mark Brennan, who was laid off from his full-time position earlier this month.

Brennan has been hired as a special consultant to continue work on the tide gates project at Jacobs Meadow, Milanoski said. Part of Brennan's scope of work involves providing a status update and seeking to close out the project.

OUR VIEW

Church and state

One of the more interesting debates leading up to the annual Town Meeting has surrounded the Community Preservation Committee's recommendation to award a grant of up to $65,000 to First Parish Church to restore windows at the historic meetinghouse.

The church applied for the funding earlier this year. In a majority vote the Community Preservation Committee heard the application and after much discussion gave it their blessing. Selectman Leland Jenkins, who also sits on the CPC, was the sole member opposed because he felt granting the request would open the floodgates for other churches to apply.

Cohasset resident Howie Altholtz subsequently raised the separation of church and state issue. The CPC, which addressed Altholtz's emails expressing his concern, revisited the church's request but did not change their vote. CPC Chairman Russell Bonetti pointed out that there has been plenty of precedent statewide for using Community Preservation Act funds for restoration of historic churches since the CPA was passed 11 years ago.

Since the CPC vote, the town has heard from the national chapter of Americans United for Separation of Church and State in Washington, D.C., which stated in a letter that such a grant to First Parish would be unconstitutional at both the state and federal levels.

"We also recognize that the CPC, in recommending the award of CPA funds to First Parish is motivated by an interest in historic preservation instead of by an intention to advance religion," the letter stated. "But a secular motivation does not justify the award."

Americans United wants the CPC to reconsider its recommendation and in the alternative that selectmen, the advisory committee, Town Counsel, and Town Meeting reject the CPC recommendation.

Cohasset Town Counsel has weighed in. In a letter to Bonetti and a note to interim Town Manager Mike Milanoski, Town Counsel states they can find no legal authority supporting the claim that public funding for an historic preservation project involving an historic church pursuant to the CPA would be unconstitutional. Town Counsel also noted that dozens of church projects across the state have been funded with CPA funds.

"We have located no legal authority supporting the claim that CPA funding of preservation, rehabilitation or restoration of an historic resource such as the Meeting House would violate this standard," John R. Hucksam, Jr., of Deutsch Williams wrote.

The Advisory Committee and Selectmen make recommendations on warrant articles. They will make their opinion known whether they support the CPC article to fund the windows restoration. Town Meeting voters have the final say.

This is a time of year when audits, budgets and deficits dominate the news. Although, we do not agree with Mr. Altholtz and Americans United that granting public money for restoration of the windows in the historic meetinghouse would be unconstitutional – it is an interesting debate nevertheless.

STATEHOUSE NEWS

Funds for local roads announced

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, and state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, announced that local cities and towns would receive a share of $200 million in state Chapter 90 funds to rebuild and repair local roads and bridges this year. This capital investment will create construction jobs, improve transportation and public safety and encourage long-term economic development.

"The highway funding program is critically important for local communities to maintain roads, bridges and related infrastructure."
State Rep. Garrett Bradley

The Town of Cohasset is scheduled to receive $210,237. Funding is allocated based upon the town having a population of 7,542 (2010 Census); 2,538 people employed within the town, and 32.25 miles of publicly accepted roads. Local highway officials were notified of the funding appropriation in a letter dated April 1.

Bradley said, "The highway funding program is critically important for local communities to maintain roads, bridges and related infrastructure. During this challenging economic climate, it also provides engineering and construction jobs for hundreds of workers."

"Providing state aid to our local communities, such as Chapter 90 highway funds, is one of the most important things we do in the Legislature," Hedlund said. "These funds allow for critical infrastructure improvements, while having the added benefit of creating employment opportunities in our cities and towns."

Each city and town will receive Chapter 90 funding for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 2013, with funds allocated using a longstanding formula based upon miles of publicly accepted roads, population and the number of people employed within the town borders. The total amount appropriated statewide is maintained at the same $200 million level as last year.

Chapter 90 funds were allocated as part of the Transportation Bond Bill making its way through the Legislature. The funds may be used for road, bridge and multi-use path projects and related needs.

Cohasset Food Pantry needs donations

Cohasset Food Pantry is a 501 (c) (3) nonprofit, volunteer organization, located in the rear of Saint Anthony's Rectory at 129 South Main St. The pantry operates on charitable donations from Cohasset churches, private citizens, business and community organizations.

The Food Pantry may be reached by calling 781-383-0219, ext. 25. Leave a message and calls will be returned. The mailing address is Cohasset Food Pantry, P.O. Box 297, Cohasset, MA 02025. It is open every Tuesday morning. Clients may come from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Donations may be left at the pantry before 9 a.m., on Tuesdays, or by contacting the Food Pantry. Donations may also be left at any Cohasset church on Sunday mornings. There are several Cohasset donation boxes located throughout the town, including St. Anthony Parish Hall, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Cohasset Police Station, Shaw's and Stop & Shop Supermarkets.

Cohasset Food Pantry provides food and other necessities to any Cohasset resident who demonstrates a need. New clients may call the pantry to arrange a meeting with one of the directors and complete the required paper work. Each client must provide two forms of identification such as a current Massachusetts driver's license, and one other legal document, showing proof of residence.

The pantry currently is in need of the following items: Coffee, tea, fruit juice, canned fruit-no sugar added, pancake mix, maple syrup, school-size snacks, cereal, corned beef hash, beef stew, chicken/vegetable/beef broth, strawberry/raspberry jam, diced tomatoes, ketchup/ mayonnaise/relish, laundry/dish detergents, car soap and cleaning products. The wish list also includes fresh fruit and vegetables such as carrots, celery, green beans, lettuce, tomatoes, spinach, potatoes-white/sweet, oranges, apples, or any fruit in season.

This spring, the Food Pantry will be working with Pat Messing-Hague, a nutritionist who lives in Cohasset. Messing-Hague is assisting families by providing healthful recipes that are made by combining canned goods and fresh vegetables. Last month, clients received a box with all the ingredients to make a healthful vegetable soup.

Once again, the Food Pantry is looking for gardeners to join the summer project, "Plant A Row For the Pantry." Community members are asked to plant one row of vegetables for the pantry in their home or neighborhood garden. Last year fresh vegetables were received all summer long. It was so successful, it is hoped that more gardeners will take part.

Cohasset Food Pantry appreciates the continued support of family, friends and neighbors in the Cohasset community.

HEALTH NOTES

Ethical considerations for doctor, patient

STEVE BOBO

Medical Ethics and Health – There is a system of ethical behavior covering the practice of giving and receiving medical care. Unlike conventionally accepted ethical standards, which vary as a function of ethnic or geographical considerations, medical ethics seems to be relatively uniform regardless of where it is applied. Basically, medical ethics is based on six premises, which most medical people follow regardless of their station in the profession:

Beneficence - a practitioner should always act in the best interest of the patient.

Non-maleficence – "first and foremost, do no harm."

Autonomy – rational patients have the right to choose or refuse their treatment.

Justice – When treatment resources are limited, responsibility for the decision of who gets what treatment generally lies with the most experienced practitioner at the scene. In most instances, the decision is based on principles of triage (selecting those most likely to benefit most from the resources available). Under some conditions the decision is related to the importance of maintaining the availability of medical care, such as in the case of a pandemic when practitioners receive vaccine first to ensure that they are not spreading the illness.

Dignity - the patient (and the person treating the patient) have the right to dignity, privacy, limits to information dissemination and civil treatment.

Truthfulness and Honesty – a patient deserves to know the whole truth about his/her illness and treatment. Thus, caregivers have reasonably well structured ethical guidelines. Clearly, when patient's rights are considered there is always much discussion and plenty of controversy.

We, as potential patients, should know that every health care practitioner receives training on the common basics of ethical medical behavior. It is therefore important to understand not only what treatment is being recommended but also whether the ethical considerations in the list above have been fulfilled. Almost every organization has its own code of ethical practice. If you have a question about your treatment by any medical practitioner, you should be able to obtain information about the code of medical ethical practice by which they operate.

On the other hand, we, the receivers of care have a separate set of ethical considerations. The question bears on the relationship between health and virtue. H.L. Menkin once observed that the aim of healthcare was not to preserve the virtue in man, but to repair the consequences of his vices. For example, when does it become an ethical consideration whether to eat or drink too much or too little. Should we tell a bulimic 'go and thin no more'? Often an act, which begins as a decision, quickly becomes a habit, then a compulsion and finally an addiction. Scientists suggest that, some combination of genes, social conditioning and desire cause some of us to develop unhealthy habits. One writer asks if some of us are missing a self-control gene.

What's the threshold where one stops being permissive and starts to become ethically negligent? With the possible exception of smoking, our society tends to permit self-destructive behavior as a matter of right until it affects others, such as the drunk who drives or the person who serves alcohol to minors. So, unless we carry our bad habits to extremes, we're going to have to police ourselves.

Health Notes has observed that fears of dire consequences from being casual about details such as stopping eating fatty food for fear of a heart attack won't prevent a person from slipping into excess. Nor will simple conviction — you know you shouldn't so you resolve to stop — be a strong enough incentive to prevent excess. It's always easier for us to build a rational reason for doing something we know we shouldn't. 'It's only a few calories; it's not going to hurt.'

Weapons to cope with habits, which in advanced stages, become destructive behavior. The best way is to find ways to feel good about yourself. Negative habits and uncertainty about self-worth have been shown to be triggers to destructive behavior such as overeating. Find purpose in life for the things you do. Accomplishment is a stimulant to feeling good about yourself; even if it's cleaning out the cellar or weeding the garden; certainly if it's supporting a cause. Do things you like to do and finish them. Don't get distracted. And take on long term tasks you enjoy; a succession of overlapping goals and keep them before you all the time.

Be unconstrained by artificial barriers. For many, their work is done when the offspring are on their own. For others; it's retirement. Both goals induce inactivity. If you stop being challenged, there's really not much reason to go on. It's therefore necessary to begin new activities: Life begins when the kids leave home and the dog dies. Those who lead healthy lives seem to have found the way to be respected, keep busy and feel good about the things they do.

HISTORICAL HAPPENINGS

All about the Atlantic – and Atlantis?

MARY KENNEDY

"...And then, as never on land, he knows the truth that his world is a water world, a planet dominated by its covering mantle of ocean, in which the continents are but transient intrusions of land above the surface of the all-encircling sea" – ("The Edge of the Sea" by Rachel Carson).

Explorers have traveled thousands of miles looking, and writers have written thousands of words proposing theories concerning the whereabouts of Atlantis.
COURTESY PHOTO

According to Plato, the arrogant island empire of Atlantis was later destroyed by an earthquake and sank beneath the ocean.

Although we think of the Atlantic as that body of water between Africa, Europe, and the Americas, it also includes the Mediterranean, Baltic, and North seas; the Norwegian Sea; and almost all the Scotia Sea, Black Sea, Caribbean Sea, and the Gulf of Mexico.

This second largest of the world's five oceans contains about 23 percent of the world's water. Because it also carries the greatest proportion of the world's shipping, the Atlantic is a busy place. Major traffic jams often occur in the Dardanelles (the strait between Europe and Asia), the Strait of Gibraltar, and in and out of the Panama and Suez canals.

Although about half of the world's fish is caught in the Atlantic (much of it from the Grand Banks off Newfoundland), it is also plagued by problems of pollution and over-fishing. There is sludge pollution off the eastern USA, southern Brazil, and Argentina; oil pollution, industrial waste and municipal sewage in the Caribbean Sea, the Gulf of Mexico, the Mediterranean and the Black Sea.

In addition to fish and marine mammals, the Atlantic's natural resources include oil and gas fields, precious stones, and placer deposits (places where gold and other minerals can be washed out of loose sand or gravel).

Back in the days (about 350 years BCE) when the Greeks called this great ocean Atlantikos (sea of Atlas), the philosopher Plato wrote about an ancient civilization – some 9,000 years before his time – that flourished somewhere "west of the Pillars of Hercules" (Strait of Gibraltar). He described their island "larger than Libya and Asia together" and their "confederation of kings of great and marvelous power." The armies of these powerful Atlanteans overran Europe before being conquered by the noble city-state of Athens. The Athenians, of course, represented "the perfect society." According to Plato, the arrogant island empire of Atlantis was later destroyed by an earthquake and sank beneath the ocean.

Since the Middle Ages, when the works of Plato were re-discovered, Atlantis has been a tantalizing and enduring mystery. Explorers have traveled thousands of miles looking, and writers have written thousands of words proposing theories concerning the whereabouts of Atlantis. Over 40 locations for the site have been proposed, including the eastern Aegean, Antarctica, and South America – specifically, Bolivia.

Today, most scientists concur that Plato's story was just that – a tall tale fashioned for entertainment. There is no scientific proof that a meteor strike or earthquake could submerge a continent. We know for a fact that in Greece, 9,000 years before Plato, there were no citizens of Athens, only nomadic bands of hunter-gatherers. And yet.....

FOR THE RECORD

Covering stories that matter

GREGORY MATHIS

Here are three recent stories first reported locally in one of our community newspapers that grew into something much bigger.

* * * *

Bruce Springsteen may not know about the Mansfield News or Wicked Local Mansfield, but Carter Bernhard's family certainly does.

According to the story first reported by Susan Parkou Weinstein in the Mansfield News, Carter caught a glimpse of The Boss performing during halftime of the 2009 Super Bowl and the music literally moved him. Weinstein wrote that 2-year-old Carter, who couldn't move his legs due to spina bifida, started bouncing up and down on the couch in front of the television, his hands pumping the air to the beat of "Born to Run" and "Working on a Dream."

"We didn't even think how significant it was at the time but he started listening to him every day," his father Scott Bernhard told Weinstein.

Carter who is now 5, has been a devoted Springsteen fan ever since. After spending nearly three months in Children's Hospital and undergoing several surgeries, Carter got a chance to meet the rock and roll icon before The Boss's recent concert at the TD Garden.

It was a story picked up by every major local news network and the Make A Wish Foundation, all of which made a little boy's big wish come true.

But we know Carter's family is grateful for the care and sensitivity, and the terrific writing and reporting, provided by Weinstein in telling the family's story. And to think it actually led to young Carter meeting The Boss is a moment he and his family will treasure forever.

* * * *

The Marshfield Mariner was the first to report the dire circumstances surrounding Kong Xin Chen, a Marshfield restaurant owner who was arrested in December by immigration officials and sent to a deportation facility in Alabama, awaiting deportation to China.

When customers of the popular Mandarin Tokyo Restaurant in Green Harbor noticed Chen hadn't been around and his wife, Yin Ping Lin, was not herself, they began to ask questions.

Many were outraged when they heard the details of Chen's arrest and his impending deportation, which apparently stemmed from Chen missing a hearing regarding his citizenship in 1998. The concern over what would happen to Chen and his family swelled and a "Free Kong Now" campaign was born.

Restaurant regulars and community members sat down with reporter Mary Jane Hanron to detail their plans, which included a fundraiser to help offset legal fees, but also a letter-writing campaign to local, state and national lawmakers. The grassroots effort paid off as Kong was released from the Alabama facility in late February, although Kong and his family will still need to go through an immigration process with federal officials.

* * * *

Many will recall the tragic accident last December involving Ashley Donahue, 20, of Bridgewater. The Framingham State College junior was killed in a single-car accident in which she was a passenger. The driver of the car has been charged with drunk driving.

Despite a lifetime of making sure to wear her seatbelt when she got in a car, Ashley failed to buckle up on this night and was thrown from the car.

As often happens when tragedies rip loved ones from us far too soon, family and friends looked to make some sense of it all and to make sure Ashley wasn't forgotten.

Bridgewater Independent reporter Rebecca Hyman went to work on a story about a scholarship fund being set up in Ashley's memory at Bridgewater-Raynham High School. As one would imagine, Ashley's mother was reluctant to speak about the tragedy and preferred to communicate with Hyman through email.

But after a short period of time, Hyman had earned Patti Donahue's trust and before too long, Patti opened up her heart and photo albums and shared the story of her only child's life, transforming a story about a scholarship fundraiser into a touching tribute to a beautiful young woman remembered for how she lived.

* * * *

These are examples of stories that not only matter to the families we write about, but also the community in which they live. And to a greater extent, these types of stories matter to us all.

Vegas Night hits the jackpot

Patrons mingle before the beginning of Las Vegas Night.

Dice were rolling and chips were flying on Friday, March 30, at the Barn at the Red Lion Inn as the Cohasset Education Foundation hosted its first Vegas Night to support Cohasset Public Schools. The Barn was transformed into a casino with blackjack, roulette and craps gaming tables, a money wheel and a high stakes Texas Hold 'em poker tournament. On display was a Wishing Wall where some of the big dreams that Cohasset teachers, administrators and students have for the schools were exhibited.

One of the many extraordinary moments of the evening came when Gerry Ordelheide, owner of the Red Lion, unexpectedly donated $1,000 to the CEF. It was a great illustration of how many local businesses stepped forward to support the schools. Mary McGoldrick, president of the CEF, said, "We had parents, teachers, administrators and town officials all out to promote excellence in education. It was a great night."

Top winners in the casino gambling were Chris Reed, Greg Bilton and Jim Fox. Greg Bilton, '98 CHS graduate, joined the festivities with his bridal party the night before his wedding at the Red Lion to help support the schools. The first annual Texas Hold 'em Tournament was a high-stakes game; top winners were Paul Bown, Scott Henry and Cal O'Callaghan.

Since its revitalization nearly six years ago, the CEF has invested more than $600,000 in the schools through 33 grants. A new program of Teacher Innovation Grants began this year. Proceeds from this event will be used to support Strategic and Teacher Innovation grant requests and the endowment. For more information about the CEF, or to learn about volunteer opportunities visit www.cohasseteducation.org.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

For selectman candidates:
Some towns, like Hingham still have a Town Administrator form of government, others like Hanover, recently switched to a Town Manager form of government.
Cohasset adopted the Town Manager form of government in the mid-1990s.
Do you think having a strong Town Manager works in Cohasset or has the time come to revisit the Town Manager Act?

SELECTMAN

Ted Carr

I believe in a strong Town Manager Act and think that it has been good for Cohasset. However, anything in government that has gone unchecked for more than a decade should be reviewed to ensure that it still meets the needs of the Town and its citizens. The Town Manager Act became effective in 1997 following a citizens' petition and is due for review.

To this end, consistent with suggestions from concerned citizens and at my direction as Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, the Governance Committee was appointed last fall to review town governance, including the Town Manager Act. This group of citizens, who represent different backgrounds and ideologies, are reviewing how every aspect of Cohasset's town government functions. As an example, it is clear that the Town Manager Act and bylaws of the town conflict on many issues. These two important charters should be in agreement.

The alternative approach that some of the neighboring towns have adopted is a Town Administrator with a stronger Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee. Whether a town administrator or town manager, I believe that a town of our size requires a strong professional leader with authority to implement day-to-day town government activities with an appropriate level of checks and balances. These checks and balances include the oversight of the Board of Selectmen which sets the policies and agenda to be implemented, various committees which have responsibility over matters pertaining to finances and town commitments, and individual citizens who can be involved through town meetings, participation on committees, citizen petitions and individual votes. Although everyone can and should be involved in the process of governing our town, strong leadership is required.

I look forward to seeing the recommendations of the Governance Committee pertaining to the Town Manager Act.

SELECTMAN

Martha Gjesteby

I had just joined the School Committee when the State Legislature passed a strong school superintendent statute. The statue was supposed to bring more order and process to municipal school systems and it did just that.

It would probably help out a lot of Massachusetts communities if the Legislature passed a strong Town Manager Act for all towns. The strong town manager was supposed to take the politics out of governing, stop selectmen from looking for jobs for their friends and, if he/she were not fired every 6 months, would provide continuity, history, and knowledge of municipal law.

Most selectmen are there for one or two terms and then they are gone. It's the same with the Advisory Committee – in Cohasset they're limited to two three-year terms. Then they take their valuable information and leave.

Selectmen are revisiting the Town Manager Act and all town government, via the Governance Committee. Their new Acting Town Manager is attempting to apprise them of every decision, inviting them to participate, and I've noticed the agendas are getting longer and longer and not much is getting solved. That's what happens when selectmen don't let the town manager do his job.

A selectman recently told "Our Town" that he was spending 30–40 hours a week on town business. If this is so, then the board is not operating properly. The board is trying to do the job of the town manager and it doesn't know how to be a town manager.

I think it's time for the Board of Selectmen to revisit itself. If we have old, confusing bylaws hanging around that ought to be revised or repealed, then fix those bylaws. Where there is confusion, the strong Town Manager Act prevails.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For selectman candidates: Because Avalon is a rental complex that has a percentage of affordable housing, all the Avalon units "count" towards Cohasset's affordable housing inventory and therefore the town may have some breathing room before another large 40B project comes down the pike. But with that being said, economic diversity is in danger of disappearing in Cohasset. People, who grew up here, and many town employees cannot afford to live here and some seniors struggle to stay in town. What proactive steps can selectmen take to encourage more affordable housing in Cohasset?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Mariner office, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

Candidates, opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, may submit a formal announcement with a photograph. There is no word limit on the announcement but longer submissions may need to be held due to space constraints.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@wickedlocal.com

McNabb published on protecting drinking water

John McNabb, who served as an elected Water Commissioner in Cohasset from 1997 through 2010, recently published a chapter, "Chemical and Biological Threats Against Public Water Systems" in the textbook "Weapons of Mass Destruction and Terrorism," 2nd edition, edited by James L. Forest and Russell D. Howard, McGraw-Hill, 2012.

"This chapter was based on a talk I gave at the 2010 DEFCON conference in Las Vegas, titled Cyberterrorism and the Security of the National Drinking Water Infrastructure," said McNabb, "and is part of my ongoing research into potential physical and cyber threats to drinking water and what should be done to better protect them."

McNabb is principal of Infrastructure Security Labs, which researches security issues of infrastructures, and South Shore PC Services, which provides PC repair and services to homeowners and small businesses on the South Shore.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

WHEN DAY CAMP IS CHILD CARE: BENEFITS EXIST FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

• Sending a dependent child under the age of 13 to day camp so a parent can work or attend school qualifies as a dependent care expense. The size of the tax benefit allowable by law varies because it is based on parent income. I recommend that parents consult an accountant or tax advisor about how to claim this benefit, which can save a family hundreds of dollars annually. This tax benefit applies only to day camps, not overnight camps.

• Day camps offer safe, child-centered environments away from home. Several benefits of a quality day camp experience include: increased self-confidence and self esteem, improved independence and leadership skills and enhanced social skills. Playing and learning with other children in a non-academic setting develops many skills that children will use when they return to school. Individual and group decision making opportunities, activities that foster cooperation and compromise, practice in taking directions from adults other than parents and teachers, and encouragement to try new things and take safe risks are some day camp experiences that directly influence children's learning and development.

• Don't assume that day camp regulation and child care regulation are the same. State regulations vary. It's a very good idea to ask how and by whom a day camp is regulated. More information is available at: www.acanewengland.org/accreditation

• Some day camps with hours that don't match the traditional work day offer before and/or after camp care for the campers. Ask about where before and after camp care takes place, how the children are grouped, which staff members care for the children, what activities are offered, and what additional fees are involved. Additional day camp search considerations include: transportation, lunch, rainy-day logistics, and how communication between camp and home takes place.

• Day camps offer optimal environments for children during the summer! While parents are at work or school, day campers have the chance to learn and experience so many activities, many of them in the out-of-doors. Sunshine-filled days with friends, swimming lessons, nature hikes, picnics, non-competitive games, skill building and competition in a variety of individual and team sports, opportunities to create and experience fine and performing arts, safe risk-taking activities and many more are in store for your child at day camp!

Grade 3 Boys shine at Quincy March Madness Tourney

GateHouse News Service

Under the direction of head coach Mike Cunnie and assistant coach Greg Albanese the grade 3 Cohasset boys basketball team stormed through their regular season with a 30-2-1 record and made it to the finals of the Quincy Sacred Heart March Madness Tourney last weekend.

In their first competition against a fourth grade team on Friday night of the tourney and with the team down by 6 points with less than two minutes to go, Cohasset rallied and Quinn McConnaughey made a buzzer-beater jump shot to earn the team a tie.

From there, the boys disposed of third graders from Wellesley with Carlton Ritz leading the charge with 8 points.

Liam Cunnie went 3-for-4 shooting and newcomer Jimmy Grech scored 4 points and 2 assists.

Gabe Barrett took great shots that just didn't fall his way.

Next up was Hingham and with McConnaughey scoring 15 points, Connor Fitzgerald shooting 33 percent with 2 assists, and Eric Berndt rebounding at both ends – the team notched another great win.

Better than imagined

Skippers off to blazing start

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

If you ask Cohasset baseball coach Pete Afanasiw if he felt his team would be 5-0 in the early part of the season, you might be surprised by the answer.

Considering he has the two-time Div. 4 State Championship team under his wing, a 'yes' wouldn't be hard to believe.

That said, when Afanasiw was asked just that question, his answer was emphatic.

"No," he said. "I wasn't expecting to be 5-0. With all the success we've had in the second half of seasons, I'm taken aback by it. These wins really take the pressure off."

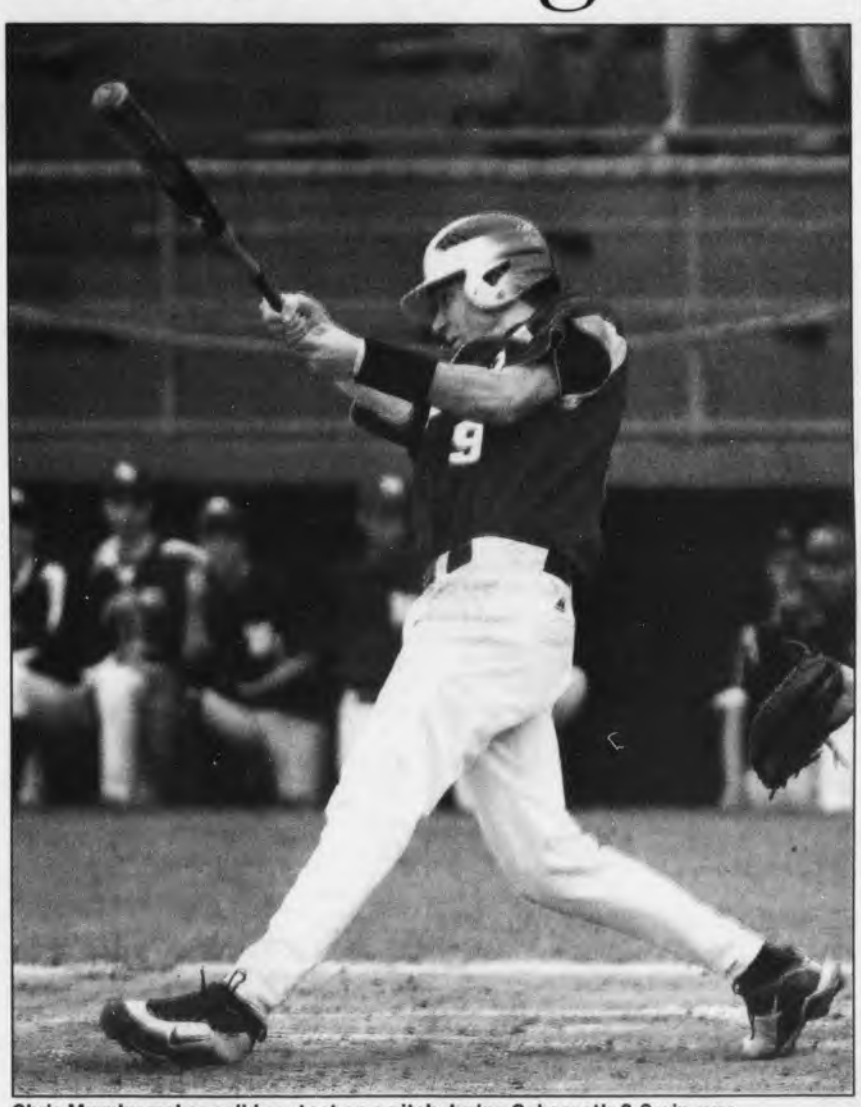
The pressure is the team's goal for every season – qualify for the MIAA Tournament and make a run at the South Shore League title.

"We're halfway to getting to the tournament," Afanasiw said. "The early wins take pressure off when it comes to making the tournament. Our other goal is to fight for a South Shore League title."

Last year, Cohasset fought Abington for the title on the last game of the regular season and came away with the title.

The Skippers have already beaten Abington once and they have also downed league foe Norwell, giving them the temporary upper hand.

Afanasiw said the team to watch is East Bridgewater.



"We'll have them in the end of our rotation," Afanasiw said of EB. "And maybe the last game of the year. I've heard they are very good. One of the best they've had in years. They've got some special athletes who have had success in football and basketball. They want to add to that."

With that thought out of the way, Afanasiw knows his team's success will come from worrying about his own team, and finding the right matchups down the line to give his team its best chance to succeed.

The puzzle pieces are there.

It all starts with pitcher Jamie Faber.

Cohasset Tennis pairs up with local education foundations for Pro-Am

Cohasset Tennis Club will host a benefit with the Cohasset Education Foundation and the Hingham Education Foundation on Friday, May 4, and Sunday, May 6, to raise funds for their respective organizations.

Last year, Cohasset Tennis teamed up with the CEF to host a men's Pro-Am and raised $3,200 for the Cohasset Public Schools. In order to increase participation, this year a women's doubles tournament has been added to the event. It has also been expanded to benefit the Hingham Education Foundation, making it the first-ever joint fundraiser for the two organizations. Bud Schultz, owner of Cohasset Tennis, said, "I firmly believe that competition and specifically tennis are great educators of our youth. This tennis event couldn't be a better way to honor that belief and support the two communities, Cohasset and Hingham, which have both been so supportive of our club!"

The event will kick off with a women's doubles tournament at 4 p.m., on Friday, May 4. Light fare and a wine and scotch tasting will be a part of the evening as the men arrive Friday at 7:30 p.m. to "pick their pros." Sunday at noon the Men's Pro-Am round robin will begin. The finalists of the women's doubles tournament from Cohasset and Hingham will face off at 4:30 p.m., on Sunday, May 6, with the men's final to follow.

Space is limited for both the women's doubles tournament and the men's Pro-Am. Entry fees – Women's doubles: $250/per team, entry level under 8.0 combined. Men's Pro-Am: $500 per individual, entry level 4.0 and over. To register, contact Mary McGoldrick at marymcgoldrick5@gmail.com. Deadline for registering is Monday, April 23.

Rox sign Berry

Former Post 118 player to play in Brockton

GateHouse News Service

The Brockton Rox of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League (FCBL) added three more players to their 2012 roster this week, signing a trio of Division I products from George Washington University of the Atlantic-10 Conference. Among the signees are two Bay State natives: sophomore infielder Brookes Townsend (Beverly Farms, MA) and redshirt freshman first baseman Jordan Berry (Scituate, MA). The Rox also inked sophomore pitcher Craig LeJeune (Bristol, CT).

Berry, a native of Scituate, who played American Legion baseball for Cohaset Post 118, is expected to provide the Rox with some power as a first baseman this summer.

In 2011, he played in 26 games for the Colonials, starting 23 of them. Berry hit .260 with one home run, five doubles, nine RBI, 12 runs scored, and two stolen bases. The freshman also finished with four multiple-hit games and two multiple-RBI games as well. Berry's season was highlighted by a 2-for-5 performance against Canisius on April 10 in which he recorded the game-winning RBI single in the 13th inning to give the Colonials a 3-2 victory. The 20-year old is currently redshirting for George Washington this season.

Before his time in Washington D.C., Berry was a two-sport star at Milton Academy in both baseball and football. On the diamond, Berry had a breakout season as a senior, hitting .481 with nine home runs and 32 RBI, which helped him earn All-Independent School League (ISL) First-Team honors. He also earned three varsity letters in football at Milton Academy and was elected to New England Preparatory School Athletic Council (NEPSAC) All-New England Football Team at the conclusion of his senior season. During the summer of 2010, Berry hit .250 with one home run and three RBI through nine games with the Brockton Dirt Dogs of the Cranberry League.

Former Cohasset Post 118 American Legion player Jordan Berry recently signed to play with the Brockton Rox of the Futures Collegiate Baseball League.

The Rox are set to start their season with back-to-back home games on June 8 against the Martha's Vineyard Sharks and June 9 against the Wachusett Dirt Dawgs.

Classics Division playoffs shaping up

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
Gate House News Service

The Classics Div. of the men's South Coastal Hockey League playoff teams are being determined in the final weeks of the season.

The Red Wings after a three-season absence clinched a playoff spot in the Classics Div.

Ted Duggan, Pat Burke, Jim Bailey and Kevin Brophy scored a goal each and goalie Rick Welch stopped 24 shots as the Red Wings defeated the playoff-bound Rangers by a 4-1 score.

Bob Sideropoulos scored the goal for the Rangers in the second period.

The Classics Div. regular-season champion Maple Leafs got power play goals from both Jeff Gauthier and Dave Evans of Marshfield and an unassisted goal by Rockland's Marty DeCourcey as they held on for a 3-2 win over the Canadiens. The Leafs are now 31-0-1 in their last 32 games against the Canadiens.

Ron Read of Marshfield and Kirk Souza scored the goals for the Canadiens.

Marshfield's John Zimmer scored three goals and John Tympanick added a goal and John Dougenik had two assists in the Bruins' 4-2 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks.

Drew Fitzgerald and Abington's Jim Polito scored the goals for the Black Hawks, which lead the Canadiens by two points for the fourth and final playoff position.

Artie Riccio scored three goals and added an assist as the Sharks took over first in the Legends Div. with a 7-3 victory over the Whalers.

Marshfield's Tim Cruz and Richard Petrosino, Norwell's Fred Bickford and Tom Krall of Hanover had a goal each for the Sharks. Mike Murphy led the Sharks with three assists while Mike Zucarelli and Steve Sawtelle added two each.

Scituate's Skip Tufts scored two goals and Rich Keyes added a goal and Norwell's John Maguire had two assists for the Whalers.

Pembroke's Scott Kelly scored three goals and Dave Christensen also of Pembroke added a goal and an assist in the Stingers' 4-1 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders. Ken Wingate of Pembroke had two assists in the game for the Stingers and Scott Mondeau scored for the Crusaders.

Jonathan Graham and Mike Ryan both scored two goals and assisted on another as the Saints battled the Toros to a 6-6 Legends Div. tie. One of the goals by Ryan was on a penalty shot in the first period.

Bill Langrill of Marshfield had a goal and an assist and Todd Roach scored a goal for the Saints.

Peter Cleary of Pembroke and Dennis Yates both had a goal and two assists apiece for the Toros.

The Toros' James Ward of Norwell had two goals, Pembroke's Art Murphy and Wayne Murphy of Rockland both had a goal and an assist each.

Paul Pierce raffling private suite for foundation

Winners will watch Celtics from suite

Boston Celtics star Paul Pierce is offering hoops fans one last chance this season to win the ultimate Celtics experience, by placing eighteen tickets to his personal luxury suite up for grabs when the Celtics take on the Orlando Magic on April 18 at the TD Garden. Three winners will be selected, each receiving four regular suite tickets and two standing room only tickets for Pierce's personal suite. The winners will be chosen through a special online raffle with proceeds benefitting Pierce's Truth on Health Campaign.

Raffle tickets are $2 with a minimum purchase of five tickets and can be purchased now at www.netraffle.org. The winners will be selected on April 16 at 11AM EDT. Visit www.truthonhealth.org for more information.

"I am thrilled that we are giving fans another chance to sit in my suite while helping to raise funds to support my Truth on Health Campaign," said Pierce. "It is critical for kids to understand that staying active and eating healthy are the keys to leading a happy and fulfilling life, and all of the funds we raise will help give kids the tools and information they need to live a healthy lifestyle."

Each of the three (3) raffle packages include:

Six (6) tickets (4 regular seats, 2 standing room only) to Pierce's personal luxury suite for the Boston Celtics vs. Orlando Magic game on April 18 at 8 p.m. EDT at the TD Garden

Food and beverage provided in Paul's suite

DISTRICT 10 AMERICAN LEGION

First-ever all-star game to be held at Eldredge Park

For the first time in its 85-year history, District 10 American Legion Baseball will be showcasing its best and brightest stars in a one-game all-star game on Thursday, July 12, at beautiful Eldredge Park in Orleans, Mass., home of the Orleans Firebirds of the Cape Cod Baseball League and the new home of Orleans Post 308, the newest addition to District 10 baseball.

For decades, District 10 American Legion baseball has proven time and again the best high school-aged amateur baseball in the state and this one-time event is designed to bring together each franchise's best players in a nine-inning game under the lights on one of Cape Cod's best baseball diamonds. Numerous professional and collegiate scouts are expected to be in attendance.

The game will be played in an East versus West format and will each have 17 first-team players and eight 2nd team players.

The West Team will be comprised of players from Hingham Post 120, Marshfield Post 88, Duxbury Post 223, Pembroke Post 143, Brockton Post 35, Hawkeye Athletic Club, Hanover Post 149, and Rockland Post 147.

The East team will be comprised of players from Plymouth Post 40, Barnstable Post 206, Wareham Post 220, Sandwich Post 188, Orleans Post 308, Kingston Post 387, Bridgewater Post 203, Middleboro Post 64, and Whitman Post 22.

The game will be played at 7 p.m. and is admission-free. Full concessions, play-by-play, announcing, and a Color Guard will be present. Post-Game East-West MVP Trophies will be awarded. The West team will be managed by Brockton Post 35 and the East will be managed by Kingston Post 387. Barnstable initially had the right of first refusal to manage the East team after last season's finish, but declined because its volunteers are helping organize the event.

The official name of the game will be the 2012 Compass Moving District 10 American Legion All-Star Game.

YOUTH TENNIS

Hingham teams up with USTA New England

Hingham Youth Tennis & USTA New England introduce Junior Team Tennis League

The USTA Junior Team Tennis League is headed to the South Shore for the spring and summer of 2012.

USTA Coaches are currently recruiting players for their boys and girls U12 and U14 teams:

Teams will consist of a minimum of 6 players (3 boys and 3 girls) and each match will consist of a boy's singles, girl's singles, boys doubles, girls doubles and mixed doubles in each age division.

Match play will be Thursday afternoons at 4 p.m. at various clubs and parks along the South Shore

The first match is scheduled for Thursday June 28 and last match will be August 2.

Teams will play approximately six matches - and players who compete in three or more matches may be eligible to advance to states and sectionals

All team members will need to be current Junior USTA members and have less than 1000 USTA points to play in league (this is an intermediate USTA league).

To register your child for a USTA membership online: www.usta.com

The Following Teams are recruiting players

South Shore Country Club - hinghamyouthtennis@gmail.com (Hingham/Cohasset/Quincy/Scituate) to register: http://www.hinghamsports.com/page/show/465648-hingham-youth-tennis-2012-program-info

Marshfield Tennis Club - info@marshfieldtennis.com (Marshfield/Pembroke/Duxbury)

Cohasset Golf Club - ojara@comcast.net

Black Rock Country Club - jason@blackrockcountryclub.com

Mill Pond YMCA - bcarroll@ssymca.org (Norwell/Hanover/Scituate)

Hingham Tennis Club - hinghamyouthtennis@gmail.com

Hingham Youth Tennis is also running a U10 in-house developmental league out of the South Shore Country Club - players will use orange balls and play on smaller courts in concert with USTA's new 10 and Under Tennis model. To register your child for this league - please contact hinghamyouthtennis@gmail.com

Cohasset's Quinn McConnaughey, Erik Berndt, Carlton Ritz, Jimmy Grech, Michael Powers, Connor Fitzgerald, Gabe Barrett, Camden Albanese, and Liam Cunnie celebrate a semifinal victory over Sacred Heart.

The semifinal game was against an undefeated-for-the-season Sacred Heart, and the scrappy team had the boys down at halftime by three.

A huge effort by Michael Powers with 14 points and Camden Albanese, who was 3-for-5 in the field, brought Cohasset back to win by 7.

The April Fools Day championship game against St. Matthews of New York was a nail-bitter with Cohasset falling two baskets short in the end despite Quinn and Michael combining for 18 points and 5 assists. At the awards ceremony, where Cohasset was awarded medals, the referee and tournament director made a point to note that he was blown away by the level of basketball he had seen, and opined about the very bright future that lies ahead for the Cohasset grade 3 squad.

Faber was on the mound last June and was the winning pitcher in the Div. 4 State Championship game.

He has picked up right where he left off.

In his first two starts, Faber went the distance, tossing 14 innings while allowing just one earned run and two unearned runs. He was in double digits in strikeouts in both games.

Faber also has a save in a win over Abington.

"Jamie has good velocity and control," Afanasiw said. "He changes speed well. He's done a great job."

When he's not on the mound, Faber has played shortstop.

The Skippers' No. 2 starter has been Conor Goetz, who Afanasiw discovered mid-season last year.

In a pinch, Goetz volunteered to pitch last year, and was so good that Afanasiw trusted him with more innings and bigger games. Now he's a regular, although he has some restrictions that come with his other gig on the team.

"One of our biggest concerns is that we don't want to have to rely on him pitching early in the week.

He's our catcher, and I wouldn't feel comfortable to have him pitch anything but the last game of the week so ha can have a few days to rest until he catches and a full week between starts. It wouldn't be fair to him."

As a third pitcher, Connor O'Brien has established himself.

In two starts, O'Brien has tossed 12 innings and has only allowed one earned run.

"He has good control and doesn't walk many," Afanasiw said. "He's walked three in 12 innings and has 10 strikeouts. That's what you need. When you allow walks it can be hypnotic. Bad things happen."

Offensively, Christian Davis has done well out of the lead-off spot and first baseman Chris Murphy has impressed with four doubles.

Afanasiw said the core of the team starts with Faber, Jamie Timothy and Goetz. All three are seniors with lots of experience in pressure situations.

Timothy has had to change his game a bit as last year's starter in center field, Shane Haggerty is out with an injury and his return this season is a big question.

Timothy has done well in the position.

When Faber is pitching, Brendan O'Connell and O'Brien have taken the spot and handled it well.

Mickey Barry has played third, and Christian Davis has been playing well in right field.

Mitch McNary, Conor Dooley and Chris Brash all bring positives off the bench.

Through the first five games, John Collins, Chris Murphy, Timothy and Terence Doonan have put up the big numbers on the offensive side.

Collins is hitting .571 to lead all hitters. Timothy is at .471 with 5 RBI.

O'Brien is hitting .462 with a teah-high 8 RBI, and Murphy is at .438.

Goetz has shown some pop, with 7 RBI.

The Skippers played Hull yesterday and have two against non-league Cardinal Spellman during the vacation week.

They'll be back in league play at Rockland on April 24.

COLLEGE TENNIS

Hill closing career at Eckerd

Cohasset's Brian Hill recently appeared in his final home tennis match at Eckerd College in Florida.

Hill, a senior, didn't play high school tennis at Cohasset, but did play at Eckerd, where he majors in history and political science.

Hill's brother Robbie was a senior captain for the Skippers last year, and dad Brian was Cohasset's coach.

ROAD RACE

SPS Road Race continues spring tradition in Scituate

The First SPS Road Race (formerly the Shawn D. Patterson Memorial Road Race) is a 5K run/walk, 10K run, and a kid's Fun Run to be held in Scituate, MA on April 29.

For a decade the Patterson family held this event as a tribute to their son Shawn who was tragically killed at the age of 19 in an automobile accident.

Last year the Patterson family organized their final race and handed the reigns to the PTOs of the six Scituate Public Schools. A portion of proceeds from the race will be contributed toward the Shawn D. Patterson Memorial & Scholarship Fund; the remainder will be divided equally among the Scituate Public Schools (K-12.) Going forward, the SPS Road Race will build upon the strong tradition of community support and educational fundraising that has honored Shawn Patterson since 2001.

The course is considered one of the most beautiful and popular 5K/ 10K's in New England.

Beginning at the Gates Intermediate School, runners head through Scituate Harbor, around Lighthouse Point and back to the Scituate Town Common. The 5K will follow a similar route, but cut across Hazel Avenue and Beaver Dam to the finish line. All abilities of runners and walkers are welcome!

Pre-registration is available now online at www.spsroadrace.com. This is a great time to enjoy this seaside community and help raise funds for the Scituate Public Schools and the Shawn Patterson Memorial Fund. Scituate Public School students and families are encouraged to register and show their school spirit by wearing school colors (blue and white) on race day.

Every Fun Run participant will receive a medal.

The race is April 29, 2012 (rain or shine) with the Fun Run for ages 10-and-under starting at 10 a.m.

The 5K/10K is at Gates Intermediate School,

Scituate Common

327 First Parish Road, Scituate, MA 02066

Pre-registration and information is available at www.spsroadrace.com

On-site Registration and Number Pick-Up is at Gates Intermediate School, Saturday, April 28 from 10 a.m. to noon or Sunday, April 29 (Race Day) beginning at 9 a.m.

LIFE AT CHS

Off to jolly ole England

OLIVIA FRANKLIN

Happy April vacation CHS! By the time you're reading this, I'll already be in the UK for the school trip to England, Ireland, Scotland, and Wales. I know a lot of people going to Florida and other tropical locations, and others staying home and enjoying the warm weather in Cohasset. As usual, the week before vacation went by super slow, especially because last week was short (by the way, hope you all had great Easters). But luckily, vacation is finally here!

Seniors, the count down is up and there is just over 20 days until freedom. With scholarship applications submitted and most college decisions made, all seniors are excited for the next few weeks. Parents, remember to submit an ad to the Spinnaker for the Senior Salute edition, due out May 24th. Everyone, make sure to come down to the common on May 25th to watch prom-goers go down the Red Carpet and to take pictures with friends.

AP Exams are the second and third weeks of May. Make sure to study and review over April break if you want to pass! The May SAT's are on the 5th. Although registration has already passed, you can still register late by April 20th. June 2nd is the last opportunity to take the SAT's this school year. Juniors, be sure to sign up by May 8th (or late by the 22nd!).

Track and field had its first meet on Monday against a strong East Bridgewater team — with over 100 athletes! The Skipper-Pirates gave it their best effort, but had luck against Harwich on Thursday. The girls' lacrosse team beat rival Scituate 10-16 Tuesday. Angela Cipolla had an amazing seven goals! Congrats girls. For more sports info, check out the sports section.

That's all for now, Cohasset. Have an amazing, relaxing April break. See you in two weeks!

Olivia Franklin is a senior at CHS; her column runs weekly during the school year.

BRIEFLY

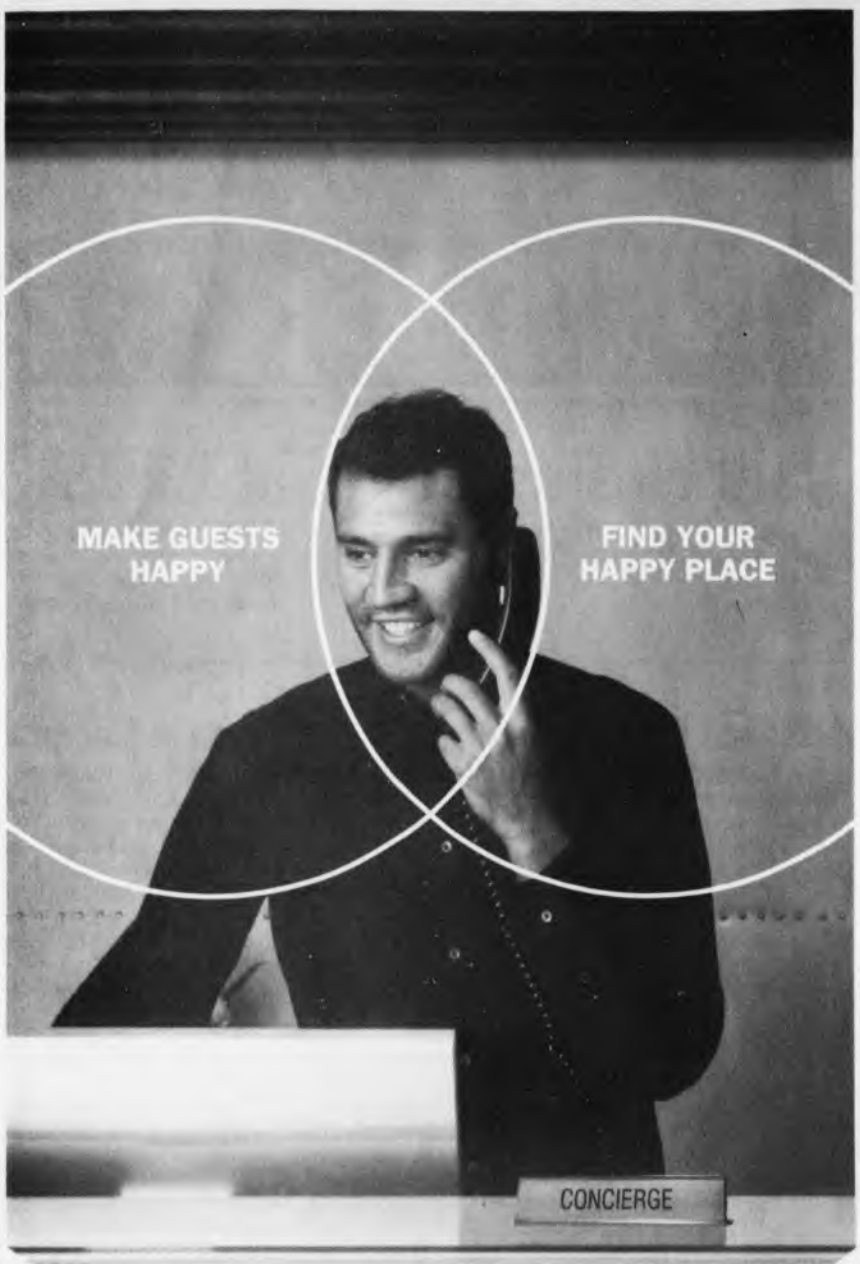
Cohasset Public Schools to conduct 'Child Find'

The Cohasset Public Schools, in accordance with Federal Law IDEA 2004 and Massachusetts Special Education Regulations 603 CMR 28.0, are in the process of conducting "Child Find." The school department is seeking children with suspected disabilities residing in Cohasset who may be in need of Special Education services.

The Cohasset Public Schools will evaluate students from age 3 through high school age who are unable to progress effectively in a regular education program due to a suspected disability in one of the following areas: autism, developmental or intellectual delay, sensory, neurological, emotional, communication, physical, specific learning disability, or health impairment. Cohasset Public Schools will also arrange for an evaluation of young people ages 6 to 21 who have not graduated from high school and who are not now attending school. Call the Cohasset Public Schools Student Service Office at 781-383-6104 for more information.

In addition, screenings for 3-to-5-year olds are held on Fridays at Osgood School. Call the Integrated Preschool staff at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Cohasset provides all children with an opportunity to participate in the public school programs using a continuous and systematic process to identify students in need of special education. All programs and services are offered without regard to color, race, sex, religion, national origin, sexual orientation or disability.



If you have a child who you suspect may have a disability or know a child with a disability who may be in need of special education services, call the Director of Student Services, Dr. Denise Messina, at 781-383-6104 for information regarding the referral process.

SSL offering scholarships

The Social Service League of Cohasset, Inc. is accepting scholarship applications from high school seniors intending to continue studies in a post high school educational program. Preference will be given to students pursuing studies in the fields of nursing, social work or allied health fields. Selection will be based on academic performance, involvement in school and community activities, good citizenship and financial need.

Applications are available in the Guidance Office. Along with the application, please provide a brief essay about yourself. Applications are due by May 11.

ECONOMY

Graduate school a popular choice during times of economic uncertainty

By Elizabeth Stickley
Correspondent

More students and experienced career changers are looking towards graduate school for an answer in the aftermath of the economic recession and its slow recovery.

As of February 2012, the unemployment rate for the United States was at 8.3 percent. The lack of jobs has recent undergraduates heading directly to graduate school, and experienced workers back in the classroom, according to college and university administrators.

Health care and education are among the most popular graduate programs at area colleges and universities.

Claudia Pouravelis, director of graduate admissions at Regis College in Weston, said returning to school is a likely path in an economic depression. She also said the college has seen an increase in the medical programs offered at Regis.

"Certainly, there is job growth in health care," she said, "Health care is more at the forefront now than before."

The most popular programs at Regis College are in the medical fields, including nuclear medicine technology, nursing and health administration. Pouravelis also said the college has been focusing on its gerontology programs, as there is increasing job growth in elder care.

Pouravelis said the college has seen an increase in students who have lost their jobs and are looking to specialize in something new, but also in students already working on their chosen field looking to move up and become more valuable.

"Regis is appealing because of the flexibility we offer," she said, "We allow students to keep working and take classes."

Endicott College has recently added two new health care-related programs based on high market demand, according to Wendy McSweeney, coordinator of recruitment and marketing at the School of Graduate & Professional Studies, including nursing and information technology with a specialization in health and medical informatics.

Dr. Scott Greenburg, dean of graduate and continuing education at Framingham State University, said FSU has seen a 3 percent increase in graduate enrollment, primarily in the school's medical programs and educational programs.

FSU also offers a food and nutrition program, which Greenburg said was becoming more popular because, "nutrition has blossomed around our country." He also said they have had success in the online nutrition education program, which is in its second year and has 44 students enrolled, an unusual number for a new program.

"To have 44 students is quite unique," he said, "Most programs take about five years to get going."

He also said the university is seeing more undergraduate students going directly to graduate school.

"I think that has to do with the economy," Greenburg said.

College and university administrators say there has been a consistent job growth in English as a second language education and special education, which has increased the enrollment rates for such programs.

Martha Sheehan, director of graduate and adult bachelor admissions at Lesley University, said Boston schools are in high demand for ESL teachers, which motivated the university to offer a specialized ESL program.

"It's something we expect a huge amount of demand for," she said.

Sheehan also said the university has seen growth in its creative arts education program, where students learn how to teach math and science in a creative way,

"I think one of the challenges for teachers just graduating, is that employers are looking for someone with a dual focus," she said.

Sheehan said among the 80 graduate programs they offer ESL and creative arts are the most employable despite the state of the economy. She also said there has been an increase in students coming directly from their undergraduate education to graduate, and in career changers in education.

ESL education is also among FSU's most popular programs, as well as special education, Greenburg said.

"The need for ESL teachers is increasing," he said.

At Endicott College, special education is among the programs with the highest enrollment rate, including special needs and applied behavior analysis and autism and applied behavior analysis, said McSweeney.

The Lynch School of Education at Boston College has the largest number of students among the college's graduate schools at 1,003, according to Reid Oslin, an associate director at the Office of News and Public Affairs. He also said the Carroll School of Management sees the most fluctuations mirroring the economy, which has 839 students.

Shelley Burt, director of graduate admission at the Carroll School of Management, said the target student varies with the program. She said the accounting program usually receives students coming straight from their undergraduate or young employees looking to get their CPA, while the MBA program receives older students, as experience in the field is a requirement for acceptance.

Burt also said the economic state is influencing the school's graduate programs because the MBA program enrollment has been flat.

"If you look at where the jobs are and the occupational handbook, and what they predict in the next five to 10 years, there's a clear parallel in what people are starting to pursue," said Greenburg.

FORUM

Colloquium showcases research on teaching

By Jill Gambon
UMass Lowell

When Professor Regina Panasuk organized the first Graduate School of Education Colloquium on Educational Research and Practice, her goal was to provide a forum for her mathematics and science education doctoral students to present their research outside the classroom. That initial event, which was held in 1996 and drew a crowd of 30, has grown to an annual gathering of more than 200 education professionals from across the region and showcases the research of students in all Graduate School of Education's doctoral programs.

"This is a place for educators to share ideas," says Panasuk.

This year's colloquium, scheduled for April 26 at the University's Inn & Conference Center, will feature keynote speaker Professor Maryanne Wolf, director of the Center for Reading and Language Research at Tufts University. In her address, "The Evolving Brain in the Time of Digital Transition," Wolf will discuss how computers and other electronic devices are impacting learning. Wolf is author of the acclaimed 2007 book "Proust and the Squid," which looks at how the brain learns to read.

With the proliferation of handheld and tablet computers, technology's impact on learning is of heightened interest to educators and researchers.

"This new era of computers changes the way children read," says Panasuk, who was named university professor in October, a three-year appointment that is the highest distinction bestowed on a UMass Lowell faculty member. "Digital gadgets should be used cleverly, as a means, not as an end."

Also on the schedule are research presentations on mathematics coaching, teaching fiction, preparation programs for preschool teachers and professional learning communities for teachers. A poster session will highlight the work of doctoral students. Faculty, students, and educators, superintendents and other school administrators from around the region will be attending, Panasuk says. The Colloquium Journal featuring doctoral students' research will be released at the event.

The Colloquium will run from 3 to 7 p.m. For more information, contact Regina_Panasuk@uml.edu.

GIMME SHELTER

Lola wants to be an 'only'

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Lola, a beautiful, playful cat. She once had a loving home but was surrendered to the shelter, due to changes in the family dynamic.

Lola can be sweet and loving but does not like to be around other cats. HSAR is hoping that someone who desires only one cat will come and meet her and decide to share their home with her. Lola is gray and white and on the large side and would make a great companion.

Please visit the shelter and meet Lola and perhaps be the lucky one that takes her home.

While you're at the shelter you can meet all of the very adoptable cats. HSAR even has a few, friendly, though, not lap cats that would make excellent mousers. HSAR has gray, Calico, black, Tuxedo, Tabby, Tiger, so many to choose from.

Visit the shelter during open hours and think about giving the gift of a feline companion. Bring the children with you and let them be part of the process of picking out a feline friend that will be part of their lives for years to come.

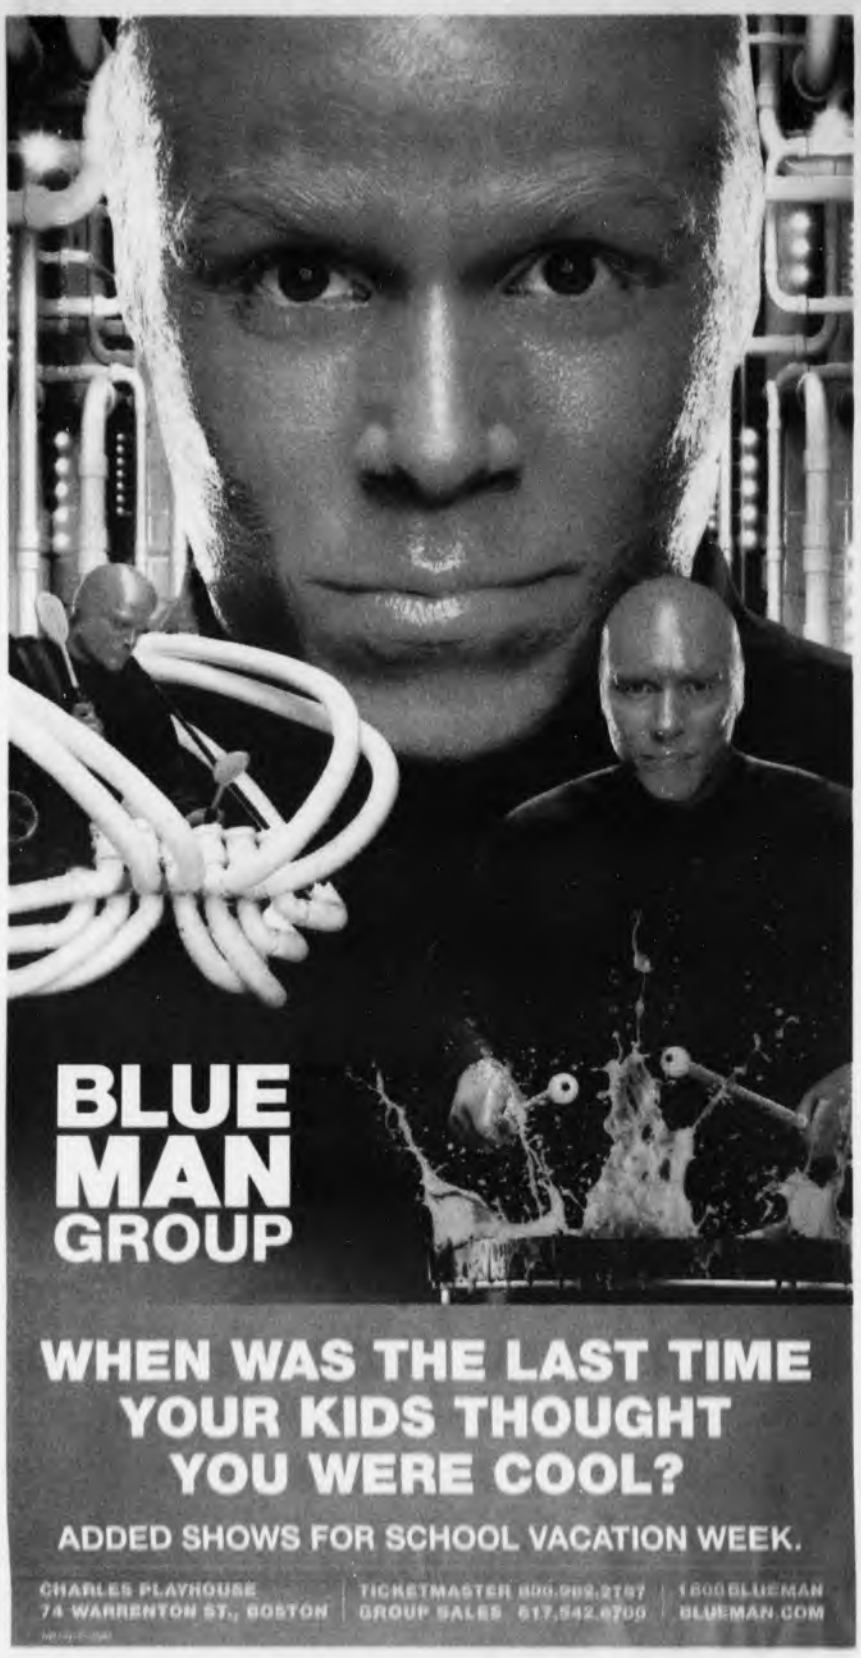
Lola is gray and white and on the large side and would make a great companion.

HSAR has open hours every Saturday from 2-3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30-7:30 p.m. If these hours aren't convenient, please leave a message for Judy, Adoption Coordinator, at 781-534-4902.

The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO box 787, Hull, MA. 02045; email: hsar@verizon.net. The Shelter is offering a low-cost spay neuter clinic on a monthly basis. If interested, check out our website or call Mary at 781-925-3121.

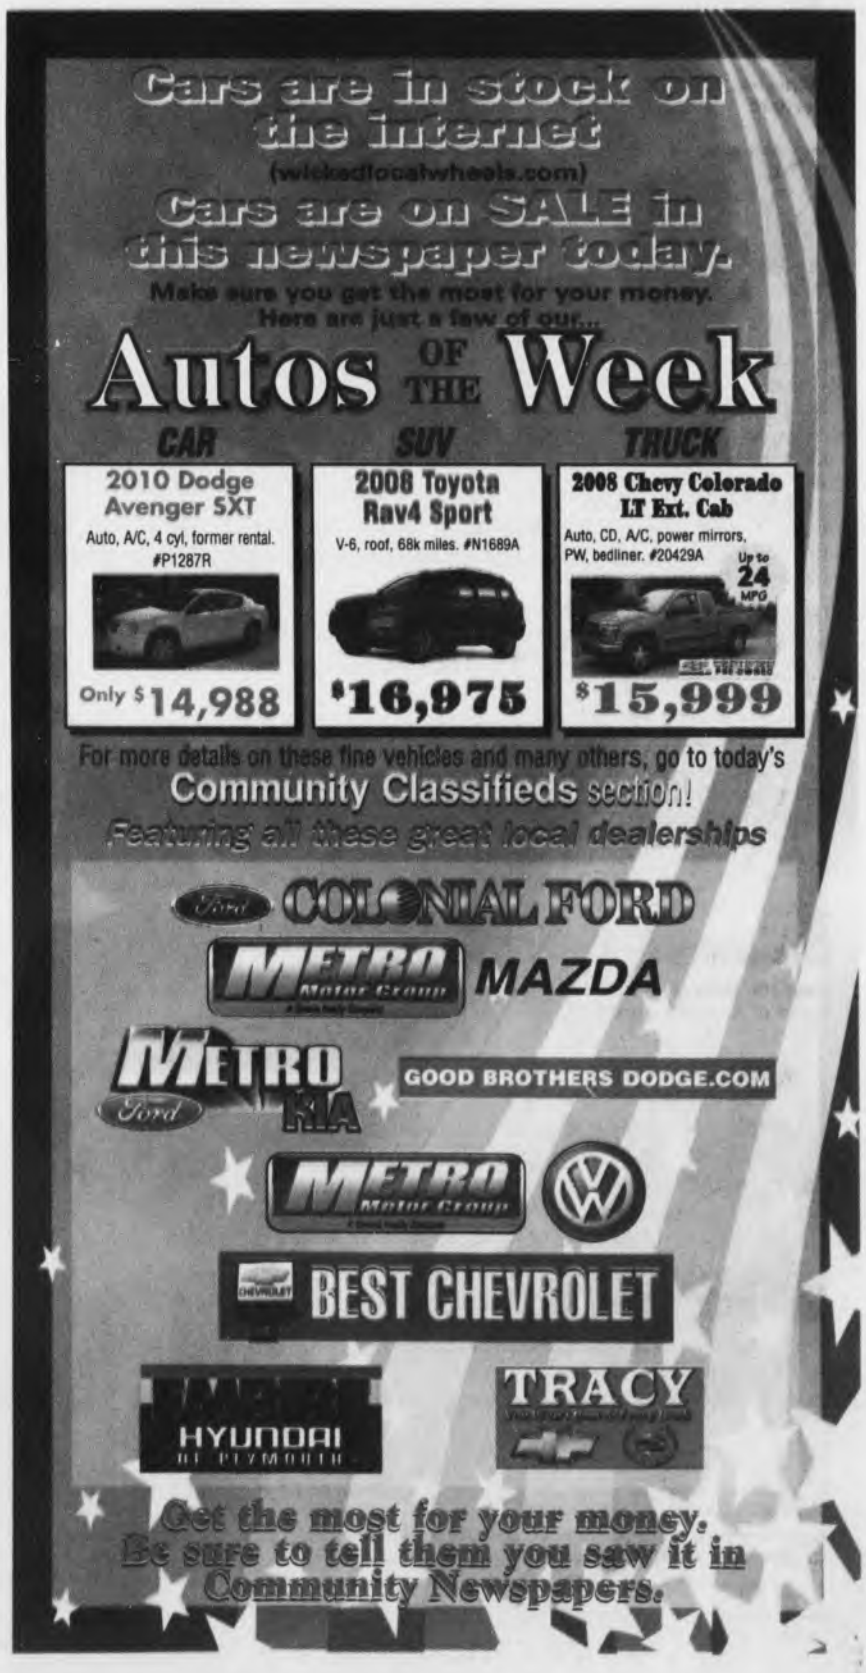
Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is always looking for volunteers. If you have a couple of hours a week to spare, please call Nancy at 781-925-3638.

You can check out the HSAR website at www.hsar.org.



DON'T MISS THIS

Faith, Film Series at Glastonbury Abbey



A casual evening of movie watching and discussion will take place at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, April 17, at Glastonbury Abbey Center, 16 Hull St. There is no charge, but donations will be accepted for the support of the Abbey Center. The movie to be show is "As It Is in Heaven" (2004, 2 hrs. 10 min. Swedish with English subtitles).

After suffering a heart attack, conductor Daniel Dareus returns to his childhood village and agrees to direct the local church choir. He not only transforms the choir, but his presence transforms the community. As choir members experience potential, joy and inner strength, Daniel is misunderstood and maligned by those threatened by these changes. Themes of grace, forgiveness, transformation and community are woven through this film that was nominated for Best Foreign Film at the 2005 Academy Awards.

For more information visit the Glastonbury Abbey website www.glastonburyabbey.org.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 23, 2012

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A sudden change of plans could lead to a misunderstanding with a friend or family member. Be ready to offer a full explanation of your decision. A past favor is returned.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Expect pressure from those who want you to change your position on a matter of importance. However, the determined Bovine will be able to withstand the bullying and win out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's time to stop dwelling on past disappointments and move on to other possibilities. By week's end, you'll be meeting new people and making new plans for the future.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A long-simmering situation between co-workers threatens to heat up and could create problems with your work schedule. Best advice: Consult a supervisor on how to proceed.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might have just learned that someone close to you is keeping a secret. And, of course, the Cat's curiosity has gone into overdrive. But be patient. All is revealed soon enough.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Don't give up. The recognition citing the good work you recently did will come through. Meanwhile, an opportunity opens up that can lead to a lot of traveling later on.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A financial crunch eases, but it's still a good idea to keep a tight rein on what you spend for nonessentials. Education becomes a major focus as the week winds down.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Recent encounters with stressful situations could require some restorative measures to get your energy levels back up. Talk to your doctor about a diet and exercise program.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) New connections follow changes on the job or in your personal life. But keep your feelings reined in until these relationships have a chance to develop.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Pay more attention to your aches and pains, and avoid self-diagnoses. Seek professional advice to make sure these problems won't lead to something more serious.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You love doing research and learning new things, so you'll be happy to know that education becomes a big part of your life at this time, and for some time to come.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your Piscean penchant for doing things logically could be challenged by an equally strong emotional reaction to a new situation. Best advice: Keep the two factors in balance.

(c) 2012 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You love music and nature. You would be an excellent environmentalist, as well as a fine singer or musician.

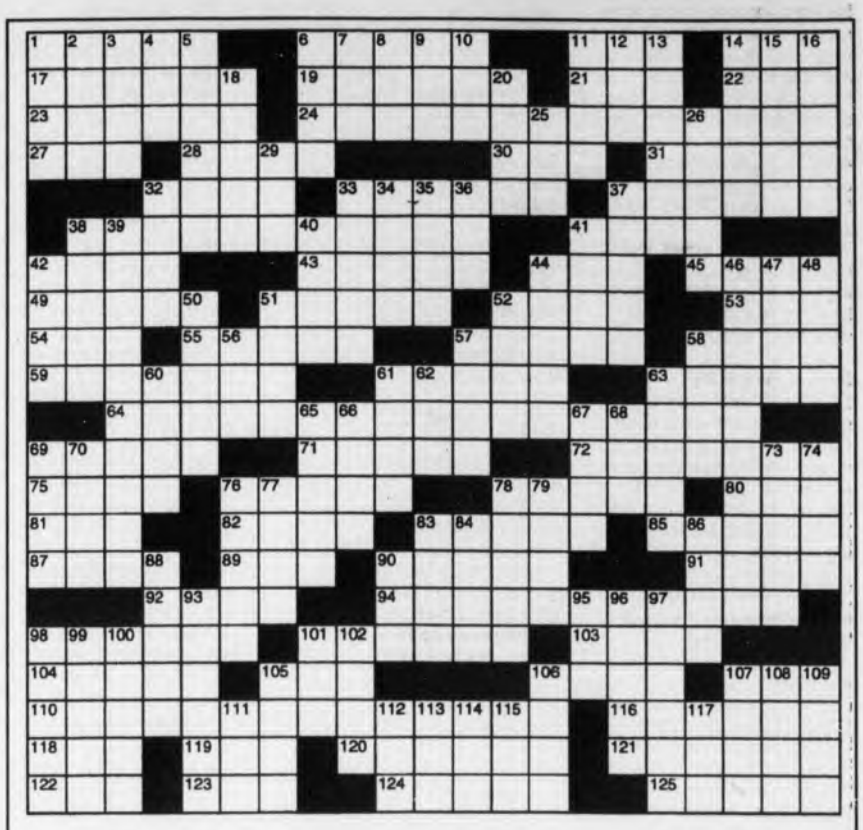
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:



Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Charlotte Grisdale

Charlotte Grisdale

PEPPERELL – Charlotte ("Chay") Fottler Grisdale, formerly of Cohasset, died peacefully March 25, 2012, at age 85 after a period of failing health.

Chay got her wish, and died at home, close to her loving and loved husband of 63 years, Richard Dennis Grisdale. Chay was the devoted mother of Todd and his wife Karen of Duxbury and Jenn Krieger and her husband Barry of Pepperell; Nana to grandsons Ethan and Aaron Krieger; dear sister to Virginia Capo, age 94, of Hull and her late husband Torrey, the late Miriam Landall of Hull and her late husband Jack, and the late Karsalie Rhuland of Weymouth and her late husband, Bill; aunt to the late Steve and Pam Capo of Hull, and the late Chuck Landall of Hull. She was also the proud Doggie-Mom to generations of very lucky golden retrievers.

Chay was born in Hingham's Ammunition Depot to the late Florence (Fottler) and Joshua Jones, and grew up in Hingham and Hull. She attended Forsythe Dental School. In her youth, Charlotte was a dental hygienist in Hingham and Boston, and later a hygienist with three generations of Scituate dentists. Chay volunteered for many years for the South Shore Arts Center and Cohasset Garden Club, and loved Broadway musicals, all of nature, birds, and autumn vacations in Provincetown and especially in Bar Harbor, ME.

Charlotte had a kind, loving and gentle soul. She has no idea how much she will be missed.

Burial will be private, with a memorial service at the First Parish Church of Groton, 1 Powder House Road, Groton, MA (www.uugroton.org) to be held Saturday, April 21, 2012 at 11. Arrangements are being made by Hamilton-McGaffigan Funeral Home in Pepperell.

In lieu of flowers, please consider making a donation in Charlotte's name to Yankee Golden Retriever Rescue, P.O. Box 808, Hudson, MA 01749-0808.

ATLANTIC OVERTURES

Broadway on the South Shore

ROY HARRIS

Conductor Jin Kim dons lighter Pops attire.

The celebratory wrap-up of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra's season is always its grand Pops Concert. And this year's marvelous program at the Thayer Academy Center for the Arts in Braintree, Saturday, May 5, brings to the party all the glitter of Broadway. It's built around four of the world's most popular hit shows, from four decades of musical-theater greatness.

The ASO Pops program begins at 7:30 p.m. But why not make it a whole "Broadway Revue" evening by starting with our 6 p.m. preconcert party? Thayer is so easy to get to – right off Route 3 at Braintree's Union St. exit, and up the hill to 745 Washington St.

For the program, ASO Music Director Jin Kim has spun together selections starting at the dawn of the Broadway-show age that created what brought to the world what has been called, along with jazz, one of America's two original musical forms. That musical-theater era began with 1943's "Oklahoma!" by Richard Rodgers & Oscar Hammerstein II, and continued with Rodgers and Hammerstein hits like "The King and I" from 1951. Both those shows are featured on Maestro Kim's program. Other ASO medleys to be performed are from Claude-Michel Schonberg's 1980 thrilling "Les Miserables" and Andrew Lloyd Weber's wildly popular 1986 hit, "The Phantom of the Opera."

Fans will be listening for the "Oklahoma!" strains of "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning," "Surrey with the Fringe on Top," "People Will Say We're in Love," along with other familiar "King and I" melodies like "Shall We Dance," "I Whistle a Happy Tune," and "Getting to Know You." Then, from "Les Miz," of course, they'll hear the wonderful "I Dreamed a Dream," and, from "Phantom," "Music of the Night" and "All I Ask of You." There will be more Broadway surprises, too.

It's an orchestral show that truly can bring families together, as well, since so much of the music is beloved across age groups – and likely to have young and old alike tunefully whistling. It's also a great bargain: hearing a professional orchestra perform in our South Shore "backyard" for $40 per ticket ($30 for seniors), and those under 18 admitted for just $10.

ASO musicians enjoy the festive end-of-season Pops concert.

'Classical on Tap'

As something of a "tune-up" for audience members, the ASO also offers one of its celebrated "Classical on Tap" programs at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, April 22, at one of the South Shore's premiere dining spots: Bridgeman's Restaurant, at 145 Nantasket Ave., Hull. The program features the orchestra's acclaimed, longtime principal oboist, Andrew Price – who is pops-music star as well as one of New England's finest classical players. Price, in fact, also serves as principal oboist for the Boston Pops Esplanade orchestra.

In the "Classical on Tap" format, Price will not only play, but discuss his love of the oboe, and his distinguished career as a professional musician.

The "Classical on Tap" program – especially since many attendees also choose to dine in a glorious Bridgeman's space that overlooks Nantasket Beach and the Atlantic Ocean – offers an unforgettable experience. But it also can be a great opportunity to introduce younger family members to the "personal" joy of music that the ASO's players bring to the South Shore. Tickets for that event are $20 – and again, $10 for youths. Watch for more details on this program in an Atlantic Overtures column next week.

Tickets to both the ASO's May 5 "Broadway Revue" Pops Concert and its April 22 "Classical on Tap" can be purchased online at www.atlanticsymphony.org, or over the phone at 781-331-3600.

Roy Harris, a journalist and author who is a Hingham resident, is a member of the Board of the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 18

South Shore Summer Theater Signups for Popular Summer Programs Sign ups have begun for the 9th season of South Shore Summer Theatre's popular summer programs for students. Kids ages 7-14 can be a part of an exciting production of 'The Wizard of Oz.' High school students can join the fun in the wacky and irreverent Gilbert & Sullivan musical 'Pirates of Penzance,' with rehearsals including sessions on stage combat. Young 'triple threat' performers between the ages of 10-14 can be a part of the Broadway Kidz day camp and musical review performance. For more information, go to www.ssstheater.org.

The Sessiun every Wednesday at The Tinker's Son, 707 Main St., Norwell.

THURSDAY, APRIL 19

Holocaust Survivor To Speak April 19 at 7 p.m. Congregation Shirat Hayam and Marshfield No Place for Hate will celebrate "Yom Hashoah", The Holocaust Remembrance. Hy Hipsman, a Holocaust survivor, will give living testimony to the atrocities of the Holocaust. This is an Interfaith Event and is open to the entire community. It is a living history experience especially for children of middle school age and older. Youth groups from all the various Congregations and schools in our area are also invited. 781-582-2700
